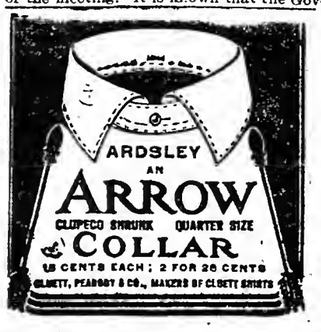
The present inquiry shall be continued at sessions of the committee to be held April 6, morning, afternoon, and evening; April 11, afternoon and evening; April 12, morning, afternoon, and evening. Such witnesses as may be produced will be heard and such deposition and documents as Mr. Kelsey may present will be received.

Senator Grady introduced the resolution, which was amended by Chairman Davis of the Judiciary Committee, so as to fix a time limit. Those voted in favor of the resolution: Grady, McCarren, Raines, Allds, Hinman, Smith, Grattan, Cohalan, and Davis. Those voting against it were, Armstrong, Page, Cobb, and Taylor.

It is understood that Kelsey's attorneys have announced that they will call from seven to fifteen witnesses, beside Henry D. Appleton, Second Deputy, and William Patterson, actuary.

The Governor's friends declared that they were quite satisfied with the result of the meeting. It is known that the Governor has no disposition to see any technical obstacles put in the way of Kelsey's defense.

"After the matter has been put squarely before the Senate," said one of the Governor's friends to-night, "the fight will be in the open, where all the people can look on, which will be a distinct advantage to our cause."



LOCAL OPTION FIGHT MOVE.

Bill Again Delayed by Its Opponents—Hotel Interests Anxious.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 3.—Once more the opponents of the Local Options bill scored in the Assembly to-day. Cuvillier of New York flashed a rule that tied up all proceedings, and a twenty-four-hour delay resulted. Speaker Wadsworth at once announced that a meeting of the Committee on Rules would be held, presumably to amend the rule which had upset the cause of temperance in spots.

Wintere of Tioga had moved to discharge the Excise Committee from further consideration of his bill, and some members had spoken against it when Cuvillier showed by the rules that the committee could not be discharged on a bill that it had actually considered.

Hotel and restaurants proprietors and liquor men from every part of the State have let the legislature know that they are watching them just as sharply as the advocates of the bill, and will join them as strictly to account if they shall pass a bill which the hotel men believe would put in jeopardy intereste to the value of $1,000,000,000 in this State. Hotels like the Waldorf, the Holland, the Hoffman, the Fifth Avenue, and the St. Regis, for instance, are in danger of being deprived of selling liquor in any form if the bill should be enacted.

STEVENS STANDS PAT.

A. B. Try of the Canal Advisory Board Wants an Investigation.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 3.—Senator Armstrong, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, received the following telegram to-day:

New York, April 3, 1907.

Chairman, Senate Finance Committee, State Capitol, Albany, N. Y.:

Statement ascribed this morning to Superintendent Stevens that Advisory Board engineers have approved Barge Canal plans in blank is so outrageously untrue that I believe him to have been misunderstood. In justice to our board, request immediate investigation of this matter. A. B. FRY.

When Superintendent of Public Works Stevens was informed that Mr. Fry, one of the Canal Advisory Board, had resented his charges and had asked for an investigation by the Senate Finance Committee, he said:

"I stand by what I said yesterday, and will continue to until the Commissioners satisfy me I was wrong or have been misinformed. I do not wish to do any man an injustice, and if the Commissioners shall show I was wrong I will make the retraction in just as public a manner as I made the criticism."

Senator Armstrong said:

"It would be absurd to begin an investigation. Mr. Fry has opportunity to come before the committee and refute the statements any time he wishes. He will be heard. If the committee gave hearings or began an investigation every time it was asked for the public business would never be finished."

STATEMENT BY MRS. EDDY.

Wants More Time for Spiritual Thought and Higher Criticism.

CONCORD, N. H., April 3.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy issued a personal note to-night bearing on her appointment of Trustees to handle her estate as announced in the motion filed in the Merrimack County Supreme Court yesterday in the action brought to compel an accounting of her property. This note, which was sent out from Pleasant View bearing the signature of Mrs. Eddy, is as follows:

I am pleased to say that the following members constitute the Board of Trustees who own my property:

(1.) The Hon. Henry M. Baker, who won a suit at law in Washington, D. C., for which it is alleged he wee paid the highest fee ever before received by a native of New Hampshire.

(2.) Archibald McLellan, editor in chief of the Christian Science periodica s circulating in the five grand divisions of our globe, also in Canada, Australia, &c.

(3.) Josiah E. Fernald, Justice of the Peace and President of the National State Capital Bank, Concord, N. H.

To my aforesaid Trustees I have committed the hard earnings of my pen—the fruit of my honest toil the labor that is known by its fruits—benefitting the human race, and I have done that I may have more peace and time for spiritual thought and the higher criticism.

MARY BAKER G. EDDY.

Pleasant View, Concord, N. H., April 3, 1907.

Counsel for the plaintiffs in the Eddy case in a statement to-day said that it appeared to them that Gen. Streeter, the personal counsel for Mrs. Eddy, and those who had charge of her, had, after mature deliberation, arrived at the same conclusion as to the incapacity of Mrs. Eddy to manage her business affairs that her son came to when he saw her in January last.

BOSTON, April 3.—Two communications from Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy were read at to-night's meeting at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, the mother church of the denomination. The first communication read to the audience was addressed to the mother church. The letter is as follows:

Pleasant View, Concord, N. H., April 2, 1907.

The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass.

My Beloved Church: Your love and fidelity cheer my advancing years. As Christian Scientists you understand the Scriptures, "Fret not thyself because of evildoers," also you spiritually and scientifically understand that God is divine love, omnipotent, omnipresent, infinite; hence it is enough for you and I to know "That our Redeemer liveth and intercedeth for us."

At this period my demonstration of Christian Science cannot be fully understood, theoretically, therefore it is best explained by its fruits, and by the life of our Lord as depicted in the chapter "Atonement and Eucharist," "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures."

MARY BAKER G. EDDY.

After the reading of this communication the first reader, W. D. McCrackan, announced that he had received a letter from Mrs. Eddy, in her own hand writing. Mr. McCrackan said that the letter indicated that Mrs. Eddy is in possession of "her usual mental and physical vigor." The letter to Mr. McCrackan follows:

Pleasant View, Concord, N. H., March 22, 1907.

Mr. W. D. McCrackan, Beloved Student:

The wise man has said "When I was a child I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things." That this passage of Scripture and its concluding declaration may be applied to old age, is a solace.

Perhaps you already know that I have heretofore personally attended to my secular affairs, to my income, deposits, investments, expenditures, and to my employes. But the increasing demands upon my time and labor, and my yearning for more peace in my advancing years, have caused me to select a board of trustees to take the charge of the property, namely, the Hon. Henry M. Baker, Mr. Archibald McClellan, and Mr. Josiah E. Fernald.

As you are the First Reader of my church in Boston, of about 40,000 members, I inform you of this, the aforesaid transaction. Lovingly yours in Christ,

MARY BAKER G. EDDY.

SUPPOSED CONSTANTINO HELD

There's a Reward of $1,500 if He Is Mrs. Gentry's Murderer.

Pasquale Gelormo, the Italian arrested on Tuesday night in Brooklyn when about to board the steamship Roma, by detectives, who thought they recognized in him Frank Constantino, who murdered Mrs. Arthur W. Gentry in Chicago more than a year ago, was held yesterday by Magistrate Dooley to await the arrival of a detective from Chicago and the dead woman's husband. They are on their way here to try to identify him. He had a letter to a man in Piceno, Italy, asking that he be cared for and hidden from the authorities.

At the time of the murder of Mrs. Gentry a reward of $1,500 was offered for the arrest of Constantino.

Jewish Seminary's Annual Meeting.

The fourth annual meeting of the New York Branch of the Jewish Theological Seminary was held last night in the rooms of the Congregation Orach Chaim, Lexington Avenue, between Ninety-fourth and Ninety-fifth Streets. Prof. Joseph Mayor Asher, Louis Marshall, and Solomon Schlechter addressed the meeting. Edgar J. Nathan was re-elected President.

CHOATE'S IDEAL UTILITIES BILL

Would Make Impossible Such Conditions as Were Disclosed by "Harriman Heroics."

PROVIDE COURT REVIEW

Ex-Ambassador Pleads Cause of Railroads and Security Holders at Hearing in Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 3.—With ex-Ambassador Joseph H. Choate the principal speaker, the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and the Assembly Railroads Committee listened to further objections against certain provisions of the Page-Merritt Public Utilities bill at the joint hearing on that measure, which was continued this afternoon and evening.

Joseph H. Choate appeared on behalf of the New, York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and urged the adoption of the proposed amendments to the bill.

"The Governor's address," he said, "has, I think, cleared away some illusions about this bill that hovered over the committee and over the railroads and over the people of the State. It had been rather freely asserted that the Governor's convictions were so strong in respect to this bill as a whole, that if this, that, or the other amendments received the approval of the Legislature, he would veto the result of their action. But he has substantially denied that such belief had any foundation.

"And then it was also in the air that his Excellency had been responsible for the drafting of the bill, which would necessarily have had a very great weight with this committee and the members of the Legislature. But I felt very certain that that could not be so, and the Governor has said nothing that affirmed or gave countenance to the impression that was flying about.

What the Bill Should Provide.

"A public service bill ought to provide for the great essentials of public safety as well as the safety of the stockholders and the bondholders; it should make impossible any rebate or discrimination; it should make impossible any more waterings of stock; it should make impossible any such transactions as were disclosed in the recent 'Harriman heroics,' as I may call it; it should leave to a commission reasonable regulation of traffic so as to prevent, if possible, the congestion that has taken place. And all these features of the bill have been left untouched by our amendments.

"Let me call your attention very briefly to three or four points which seem to me hostile from every possible point of view to the interests of the people and the rights of stockholders and bondholders. The first one is the creation of a commission to take the control and management of the railroads, consisting of five men in each of these divisions, who shall be liable to removal by the Governor without notice, or warning, or reason, or assent of anybody else, simply because he so chooses.

"Assuming that the present Governor can find the Angel Gabriel and five archangels to fill the offices that compose this commission, and, although you may douht it, I rather think that men fully adequate for the position can be found. We will suppose that they prosecute this law with absolute wisdom and fairness and patience and justice all around. But by and by, possibly, there will come in a Governor in his place who doesn't believe in angels and archangels.

"There is no provision in this bill that anybody whose removal is proposed shall be heard until his successor is nominated and confirmed. He ceases to be, and if the Governor finds the Senators in opposition to him so that they won't confirm his appointments or won't agree with him as to his appointees, then the whole thing is dead. There is no commission left.

Senate's Consent Needed.

"I think the Commissioners should be appointed with the consent of the Senate. I think there should be removal only on changes for cause, because they had been unfaithful to their duty, and after a fair trial. I greatly disagree with any idea of electing the members of this commission. That would be like going back to electing Judges.

"What is the next point I come to? It is that this hill veste in this body a power final and absolute, that in most cases cannot be reviewed; and where they can't help having it reviewed they inflict all the burden of it upon the railroad companies until the court that is admitted to have jurisdiction to review has declared that the order complained of is beyond the powers of the commission or in violation of the Constitution of the State or of the United States.

"This refers to the judgment of the court in the first instance that will hear that case. That may take somewhere from a month to a year or two years. In the meantime, this bill provides that the railroads shall, nevertheless, be compelled to obey the law under penalty of $5,000 for each day's violation, and the parties concerned in it are liable to fine and imprisonment or either.

"The party against whom such an order is made under this bill seeks for a review. What happened? He finds that he has got to pay $5,000 if he loses the appeal, $5,000 a day if he loses the appeal until it is decided, and be liable in the meantim and his officers, to fine and imprisonment. The Supreme Court of the United States has suggested, and the Circuit Court of the United States has held, that a bill which contains such a clause as that, seeking to prevent by such frightful and impossible penalties the prosecution of an appeal and the assertion of rights, is in itself unconstitutional and impossible.

"I want the courts to have the power to review any order made by this Commission, for I don't believe any order can be made that won't affect the right of property."

Dittenhoefer Sees a "Joker."

Ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoefer of New York, who appeared for the Long Acre Electric Light and Power Company, declared that Section 68 of the bill, which gives the proposed public service commission power to refuse the certificate of authority necessary under the law before a corporation can begin operations where it shall be shown that the territory it seeks to supply already has an ample system furnishing good service contained a "joker" which had for its purpose the confirmation of the Consolidated Company's monopoly in New York City. "I would be unreservedly in favor of the bill if it was not for that little nigger in the woodpile," he said.

"There has been no disposition on the part of this committee or on the part of those who drafted this measure," retorted Senator Page, "to conceal an African in the woodpile. And when you speak of it as such you are talking about something you know nothing about."

The Senator then explained that the provision had been inserted to protect existing companies, who had been prevented under the new law from capitalizing their franchises, from blackmailing competition on the part of a great number of small companies which had obtained charters shortly after the 80-cent gas law went into effect, and who were waiting for an opportunity for "strikes."

Charles F. Mathewson, speaking for the Consolidated Gas Company, objected to the power of removal by the Governor alone, to the provision making it unnecessary for the Commissioners in the case of hearings to abide by the rules of evidence, and to the feature making it possible for the Commissioners to delegate their power to the secretary. He concluded:

"It has been said that the people want the act. The people do not want the act. You are making the greatest mistake of your lives. There is not one person in a thousand in the State who knows what the details of the bill are. They will pass resolutions urging the passage of this bill, but they don't know anything about it. Not one in a thousand has read it."

TO TELL OF GRAFT CONTRACT.

Tiffany Company Manager Summoned Before Pennsylvania Board.

Bond Thomas, General Manager of the Tiffany Glass and Decorating Company at 357 Madison Avenue, one of the several firms which bid for the job of decorating Pennsylvania's State Capitol, has been called to Harrisburg to testify before the Legislative Investigating Commission, appointed to get at the bottom of the charges of graft in the construction and furnishing of the $13,000,000 building. Mr. Thomas is expected to throw some light on the transactions of a political clique which dictated the lavish expenditures on the State Capitol and gave the contracts to their favorites at figures grestly in excess of the bids of men who were not "political contractors."

The Tiffany firm was one of those whose bid was thrown out in favor of John H. Sanderson, the Philadelphia contractor, whose profits on the Capitol job have been conservatively estimated at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000. Mr. Thomas had fully expected to do the work of furnishing the Capitol Building with glass, mosaic, and other decorations, and expended a considerable sum in trying to land the contract. He had many interviews with Joseph M. Huston, the Capitol architect, who was responsible for the adoption of the unique "per foot" and "per pound" system of arriving at values, the system which allowed Sanderson to walk off with the entire furnishing contract.

HARRISBURG, Penn., April 3.—John R. Sanderson & Co. of Philadelphia, contractor for furnishing the new Capitol, collected $1,728 from the State for two ordinary eight-foot mahogany tables, for which he paid a sub-contractor $40 each, according to the testimony of James Cameron, auditor of the Capitol Investigating Commission at to-day's hearing.

VENTRILOQUIST IN THE WARD.

Trouble Among the Dipsomaniacs In Bellevue the Result.

Michael Newman, an electrician of 2,431 First Avenue, who is incidentally a skillful ventriloquist, was admitted to the alcoholic ward in Bellevue Hospital last night. Soon after he arrived a blood-curdling cry of "Help! Help!" was heard through the ward. It seemed to come from nowhere in particular. Dr. Drury, the physician in charge, and the nurses made an anxious search, but found nothing.

"It was certainly a cry of distress," said the doctor. The nurses thought so, too. Newman apparently was asleep.

Presently chronic patients straightened up and looked with hopeful eyes as a hoarse whisper sounded through the ward:

"Say, fellows, have a drink on me."

Two of the male nurses jumped to their feet ready to pounce on the man who would make such an offer in the ward. They walked through the line of cots, but could not trace the source of the invitation. The ward settled down to quiet again.

Presently a low trembling roar not unlike that of a cub lion was heard.

"I've got 'em," moaned one patient, covering his head with the sheet.

Again a search was made to learn the cause of the noise, but without result.

Soon the faint yet certain crow of a rooster was heard, followed by the wail of a cat. Nurses and orderlies searched under the cots and in the closets, but found neither cat nor rooster.

"I'm bleeding to death," screamed a shrill voice after a while. It brought the nurses and orderlies to their feet in a hurry, thoroughly angry this time. While they were searching one of the nurses looked into Newman's face and saw that he was quivering with suppressed laughter. Under examination Newman confessed that he was a ventriloquist and the author of the noises and cries. As he promised to be good his offense was overlooked.

METHODISTS IN CONFERENCE.

Dr. Buckley Mentions Receiving Good Suggestions from the Insane.

The New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church began yesterday at the Union Church, in West Forty-eighth Street. Bishop Joseph F. Berry presided.

The conference had over 300 members representing a church membership of 55,000.

The Rev. James M. Buckley, editor of The Christian Advocate, in the course of his address, said that his paper now had a large circulation in prisons and insane asylums. He caused a laugh by saying that some of the best suggestions for editorials come from the insane asylums.

"I knew you would laugh," the speaker said, "but I want to say that some of the inmates of insane asylums are as sane as you ever will be."

Dr. Kelley, editor of The Methodist Review, and M. C. B. Mason, a colored clergyman, representing the Freedman's Aid Bureau, of which he is General Secretary, also spoke.

Last night General Secretary Mason of the Freedman's Aid Bureau preached a sermon to the members of the conference.

The business session will go on to-day.

EXHIBITS FOR JAMESTOWN.

Commissioner Kohlsaat's Mission to Europe a Success.

After a campaign of nine months in Europe, whither he went in the interest of the coming exposition at Jamestown, and after having been received by various rulers of all European countries, Charles W. Kohlsaat, Commissioner General of the Jamestown Exposition, returned on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. yesterday. Mr. Kohlsaat was successful in arousing interest everywhere and many priceless exhibits, historical and otherwise, were promised as a result of his work.

"The Jamestown Exposition," said Mr. Kohlsaat, "is an English as well as an American celebration, for it was the English that first settled in that part of the country. Great assistance was given me by Lady Arthur Paget, who consented to assume the presidency of a committee composed of practically every distinguished American woman in England. We have obtained a collection of the most priceless treasures in the form of antiquities and relics bearing on that period of the first English settlement in America, at Jamestown, in the year 1607. I should judge that the value of the exhibit of historical objects from England is over $1,000,000.

ORIENTAL RUGS
Not Always Expensive

IT is a misconception common to many, that a genuine Oriental Rug is necessarily expensive.

An inspection of our enormous stock will change this impression. Prices range as low as $18 and even $12 for rugs excellent in texture and coloring, while many others, varying in grade and size, are proportionately priced.

Few articles of art or utility give such lasting satisfaction as a genuine Oriental Rug.

Tan or Brown That's Fashion's Latest Word.

Second Floor.

Queen Quality is the "shoe of the hour"—it embodies every essential of that which is best in Spring Style. Dame Fashion has already made her voice heard in favor of Browns and Tans for Spring wear, and you will surely agree with her when you see the new Queen Quality models—the new mustard-brown and the rich golden brown shades of Russian Calfskin.

So great is the demand for tans that there is not a factory in the country which can fill its orders. Anticipating this condition early in the year—which no other New York store seemed to foresee, we placed with the makers of Queen Quality Shoes the largest order for this style which they received from any one house this season. As a result of our foresight we are now able to fill orders for these much desired shoes at the regular low prices—

$3 and $3.50 a Pair

—prices made possible only by the enormous output of the Queen Quality factory (10,000 pairs daily) and the fact of our having ordered our large stock before the big rise in prices of tans occurred throughout the country.

This rise in the tan shoe market has made it impossible for other stores to equal at $4 and $5 the splendid values we offer it Queen Quality Shoes at

POWERS AT ODDS OVER PEACE PLANS

Russia, Germany, and Austria Won't Agree to Discuss Armament Limitation.

WE ARE WITH ENGLAND

Spain Also Supports the Armaments Proposition — A Complication Caused by Turkey.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 3.—The Russian representatives abroad have been directed to communicate to the Foreign Offices a circular note regarding The Hague Peace Conference, the main feature of which is the announcement that Ruasia, Germany, and Austria-Hungary reserve the right to abstain from the discussion of questions " which in their opinion cannot lead to practical results," meaning the limitation of armaments.

Russia, in making her reservation, reaffirms her adherence to the former programme for the conference.

On the other hand, Great Britain and Japan reserve the right to abstain from the discussion of any points in the Russian programme from which, according to their views, satisfactory conclusions are not obtainable.

The consideration of the question of the limitation of armaments, according to the Russian note, is proposed by three Powers—the United States, Great Britain, and Spain. The United States also proposes the addition of the Drago Doctrine to the programme, and several States reserve the right to present independent propositions to the conference on questions connected with the Russian programme, but not directly mentioned in it.

In conclusion the note states that the Russian Minister at The Hague has been instructed to ask the Government of the Netherlands to issue final invitations to the conference in order that it may be opened in the middle of June.

The Novoe Vremya published an editorial article declaring flatly that the Peace Conference is ill-timed and will be futile. "Russia," the paper says, "is barely able to cope with her internal crisis, and the reservations made by the powers indicate the fruitlessness of the deliberations. This pet project of Prof. de Martens should be deferred to a more propitious season."

LONDON, April 3.—Great Britain has not withdrawn or in any way altered her request that the reduction of the expenditures on armaments should be placed on the programme of subjects to be discussed at The Hague Peace Conference. A note was dispatched to Russia on March 26 requesting that the question of the limitation of armaments be put on the programme.

This note, besides the request, suggested that a committee might be appointed to formulate a scheme for the limitation of armaments.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, called on Secretary Root to-day and stated that he had received from the St. Petersburg Foreign Office the invitation to the United States to attend the second Hague Conference.

Baron Rosen has been charged by his Government with the conduct of the negotiations with the South American States, and he has availed himself freely of the machinery of the State Department and of the opportunities he has had to confer with the resident diplomatic representatives of Latin America. To all of these intimation has been conveyed by Secretary Root that it would be well for the South American delegates not to await the reception of the formal invitations before leaving their respective countries for The Hague, but to be on hand at the opening of the conference, charged with full powers to adhere to the results of the first conference.

It is required that the newcomers shall, as a condition of admission, have adhered to the three great treaties resulting from the first Hague Conference, namely, that providing for arbitration and mediation, the Geneva Convention, and the rules for the government of maritime warfare. There is a curious difference in the conditions laid down for such adherence. As to the last two conventions, any nation may adhere to it by sending formal notice to that effect to the permanent Council at The Hague. But the first convention can only be adhered to by newcomers with the assent of every one of the powers that signed the original treaty. So far as is known, all these powers are willing to admit the South Americans.

A singular complication has arisen in the case of Turkey. That power sent delegates to the First Hague Conference, but she never ratified the treaties that followed. So the question now is whether Turkey's assent is necessary to the admission of the South American contingent, which of course depends upon whether or not Turkey is regarded as a signatory power. Her attitude becomes of importance because she has not so far indicated any intention to participate in the second conference.

WANT WEST INDIAN TRADE.

Canadians Are Taking Steps to Divert It from This Country.

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 3.—Steps toward diverting much of the West Indian trade from the United States to Canada have been taken by the St. John Board of Trade, which has appointed a committee to interview Sir Wilfrid Laurier when he reaches this city on Friday on his way to England.

Sir Wilfrid will be asked to bring up the matter of preference in trade between Canada and the West Indies before the Colonial Conference in London. Much of the West Indian trade is now with the United States, but it is stated that the Leeward Islands have decided to grant Canada a preferential tariff.

A resolution has also been passed by the Board of Trade favoring preference on a reciprocal basis throughout the empire.

KING ALFONSO NOT ILL.

He Engages Daily in Hunting and Other Outdoor Sports.

MADRID, April 3.—The innumerable pessimistic rumors regarding King Alfonso's health are unfounded. His Majesty daily engages in hunting and other outdoor sports.

The preparations for King Alfonso's journey to Cartagena on April 6 to meet King Edward have been completed. Government circles here regard the meeting of the two Kings as likely to improve the understanding between Great Britain, Spain, France, and Portugal relative to Morocco.

Dowager Queen Christina has completely recovered from her recent indisposition.

The King to-day signed a decree ordering the necessary preparations for the presentation of his heir to the high officials of Spain and the diplomatic representatives accredited at Madrid immediate after the birth of the child.

CUBAN POLITICAL MURDER.

Ex-Chief of Police of Guines Slain—The Assassin Escapes.

HAVANA, April 3.—José Ayala, ex-Chief of Police of Guines, Havana Province, was assassinated at Guines this morning. The crime was apparently political, as the victim led the Governmental forces in the vicinity of Guines during the August revolution, thereby incurring so much enmity that he went to Mexico, from which country he had just returned.

The assassin, who was a member of the late rebel army, escaped. The Governor of Havana has sent a committee and several detectives to investigate the crime.

BUTCHERY IN ROUMANIA.

Conditions Far Worse Than Reported —Roads Covered with Corpses.

Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1907, by THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 3.—Rabbi Moses Gaster tells me that his private advices indicate that the horrors of the Roumanian insurrection far exceed the accounts given in the press dispatches. The newspaper correspondents, he says, have not been allowed to go out and see for themselves, but have been forced to be satisfied with the official accounts.

"I have just received a letter," said Rabbi Gaster, "from a person who witnessed a conflict between peasants and troops in one of the Wallachian townships. He writes me that the roads were covered with corpses, and that the peasants were shot down by artillery as well as rifle fire. The optimism of the Roumanian authorities does not count for much, in my opinion. The conditions of portions of Wallachia must be terrible."

The Times to-morrow will print the following dispatch from Bucharest:

"Tranquility has been restored in most of the revolted districts. Disturbances, however, are reported from the Jalomak district, which has hitherto been quiet, and also from the Oltenie district.

"Troops from Moldavia have arrived in the Mehedinintzi Department, where the devastation is widespread, and the village of Oprishoru has been bombarded."

BUCHAREST, April 3.—Reports have been received from all the Prefects that complete quiet prevails everywhere in Roumania, and that the recent agitation may now be considered ended.

The estimatea in the official press place the material damage due to the agrarian revolt at $8,000,000.

The landowners assert that the losses incurred are much greater than this.

CRISIS IN DUMA TO-DAY.

If Budget Is Rejected Czar Is Likely to Dissolve Parliament.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 3.—The action of the Duma to-morrow is likely to determine the question whether it will immediately be dissolved. A vote will be taken on the Constitutional Democratic motion to refer the budget to a committee. There is a Social Democratic amendment to reject the budget totally, and it is learned that the passage of this amendment would be regarded as justification for dissolution.

The vote is expected to be very close. The Social Democrats have succeeded in aligning the Social Revolutionists, the Populists, and a part of the Group of Toil, altogether 210 Deputies, on their side. The Constitutional Democrats have a slight lead; they expect to have 240 Deputies, but the reactionaries, who are scheming to overturn the Duma, may repeat the tactica of March 28 and vote with the Social Democrats against the Constitutional Democrats.

It is not true that the Cabinet has already decided to dissolve the lower house. Some of the reactionary members of the Cabinet maintain that the House should be dissolved on any pretext, but the matter was not discussed at any of the last three sessions of the Cabinet.

The Group of Toil will introduce in Parliament to-morrow bills for the abolition of the death penalty and of martial law.

The Council of Empire has rejected by 104 votes to 25 a proposal to disqualify Prof. Maxim Kovalevsky as a member of the lower house.

CROMER FEARS MOSLEMS.

He Says the Pan-Islanic Movement Requires Careful Watching.

LONDON, April 3.—In his report on the progress of the various administrative departments of the Egyptian Government, issued by the Foreign Office to-night, Earl Cromer, the British Agent in Egypt, deals at length with the anti-British movement known as "Egyptian Nationalism." This Lord Cromer describes as a plant "of exotic rather than indigenous growth," and "deeply tinged with pan-Islanism," thereby meaning "a combination of all the Moslems throughout the world to defy and resist the Christian powers."

Viewed in this aspect, Lord Cromer says, the movement requires to be watched carefully by all European nations, as it may possibly lead to sporadic outbursts in different parts of the world. He adds:

"We were within very measurable distance of such an outburst last Spring, when the European inhabitants of Egypt flocked into the towns. Their alarm was not at all unreasonable.

NO BERING STRAIT TUNNEL.

Russian Cabinet Rejects the Plan of an American Syndicate.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 3.—The Cabinet to-day rejected the proposal made on behalf of an American syndicate for the construction of a railroad tunnel under Bering Strait, by which it was hoped ultimately to connect the Trans-Siberian Line with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The scheme for a tunnel under Bering Strait and an all-rail route from the United States to Europe has been under consideration for some time, and the matter has been pressed in Russia by Baron Loicq de Lobel, who repreaented the American-Trans-Alaskan-Siberian Company.

A year ago dispatches from St. Petersburg said the Russian Government was disposed to consider this plan favorably.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

STOCKHOLM, April 3.—The projected departure of King Oscar and Queen Sophia from Stockholm has been postponed, as his Majesty's health is not altogether satisfactory.

ROME, April 3.—It is reported from an authoritative source that Mgr. Bisleti, the Papal Major Domo, will be the seventh of the Cardinals to be created at the Consistory to be held April 15, but that he is to be reserved in pectore, and that therefore his name will be kept secret even after the Consistory is held.

PLYMOUTH, England, April 3.—The First Cruiser Squadron, under the command of Rear Admiral Neville, sailed for the West Indies to-day on its way to Hampton Roads, where the British warships will participate in the international review in honor of the inauguration of the Jamestown Exposition.

PARIS, April 3.—Speculation relative to the labor demonstration on May 1 and predictions of disturbances occupy a large space in the newspapers. The Secretary of the Federation of Labor declares that the stoppage of work will be general in France on that date. The Government's precautions to prevent disorders are complete, and the officials believe that May Day will pass off peaceably.

BERLIN, April 3.—It is announced that Emperor William does not approve of the movement for holding a World's Exposition in Berlin in 1913, the twenty-fifth year of his reign. The project will doubtless be abandoned.

BOGOTA, Tuesday, April 2.—The National Assembly met yesterday. Dionicio Jimenez was elected President of the Assembly, and Evaristo Garcia Vice President. Complete calm prevails throughout the republic.

LIMA, Peru, April 3.—The agreement reached on March 27 between the Peruvian Corporation of London and the Government of Peru was signed yesterday. The newspapers give high credit to William Eyre, the representative of the corporation, for his efforts in bringing about an amicable adjustment of the differences between the Government and the corporation.

FILIPINOS PLOTTING UNION WITH JAPAN

Manila Telegram Says Uniforms Are Being Made for Natives Who Wish to Fight.

A PRO-JAPANESE SOCIETY

Seal of a Reorganized Katipunan Bears the Clasped Hands of a Japanese and a Filipino.

MANILA, April 3.—A factory in which uniforms are being made for Filipinos who desire to fight for the Japanese has been discovered at Tayabas, sixty-two miles from Manila.

The Government here has been informed of this discovery, but the facts regarding it have not been made public.

The Governor of Laguna Province has discovered the existence of a reorganized Katipunan, or Tagalog anti-Government society, similar to that formed under Spanish rule. It is headed by Dominador Gomez. The remodeled seal of the society shows the clasped hands of a Japanese and a Filipino. The oath of the members ends with the words "without quarter."

In Nueva Ecija, Laguna, Pampanga, Bulacan, Tayabas, and Cavite Provinces the pro-Japanese sentiment is apparently being used in order to incite the people against the Government.

The President's proclamation fixing July 30 as the date for the election of a National Assembly finds a somewhat involved political situation in the islands. The Progress Party is not considered likely to elect its whole ticket, as the Independent Party is making a strong showing.

Advices from the provinces indicate that both parties pose as friends or as enemies of the Americans as the situation demands.

Ladronism still exists in the Iloilo and Capiz districts, but the constabulary control the situation, and in the Samar and Leyte districts matters are improving slowly.

INVESTIGATION BY CHINA.

Commissioner Coming to Learn the Condition of Chinese Students.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—Proclamations were posted throughout Chinatown yesterday stating that Liang Hing-Kwei, a noted education authority of China, had been commissioned to come to this country for the purpose of investigating the condition of Chinese students. The proclamation was signed by the Chinese Minister at Washington.

The Chinese Consul stated last night that he had been notified from Washington that the Imperial Government at Pekin would send Liang Hing-Kwei as Commissioner to this country to study the status of the Chinese students in the schools of the United States.

ANARCHISTS EVADE POLICE.

Delegates, After Various Failures, Succeed in Meeting in a Field.

BERLIN, April 3.—The German Anarchist Congress met yeaterday near Mannheim under peculiar difficulties. The place originally selected for the meeting was Mulheim-am-Rhein, Rhenish Prussia, but the police would not allow the anarchists to assemble there.

Then an unnamed village near Offenbach was chosen and about forty delegates from all parts of Germany assembled there on Sunday. Detectives appeared on the scene and arrested the supposed anarchist leader, a man named Holzman, but, discovering that they had the wrong man, the detectives released Holzmnn from custody.

The delegates then ostensibly dispersed, but gathered yesterday at Mannheim, where the local authorities, who had received notice of the anarchists' coming, received them at the station with a large force of police, partly mounted. The delegates went to the hall selected, but the police forbade the meeting, declared all present to be under arrest, and took the delegates to the station house. There the pedigrees of the anarchists were taken, after which they were discharged.

The delegates next took walks about the city and finally, evading the police who were detailed to watch them, held a meeting in an open field across the river, where the congress adopted a resolution to form an organization extending throughout the empire, with groups in each State, and headquarters in Berlin.

Three anarchist publications here were chosen as official organs of the anarchist party.

CAPTURED BY MOORS.

Son of a Spanish Governor Taken Prisoner After Being Beaten.

TANGIER, April 3.—A son of Gen. Delbrell, Governor of the Spanish fortress of Alhucemas, on the north coast of Morocco, was recently beaten and captured by trucsmen at Devnsso, Morocco. Some soldiers in the service of the rebellious leader Roghi came up in the course of the disturbance and made everybody prisoner.

The Spanish General in command at Melilla is making representations to Roghi for the release of the prisoners, but so far without success.

Prof. Gentry of the French Geodetic Mission was interviewed here to-day on his arrival from Morocco City. He said that the anti-European excitement of the population was not appeased.

The professor considered that more energetic measures than the occupation of Oudja were necessary in order to produce an impression on the population, as the Moors took no notice of diplomatic protests.

FARMER KILLS HIS CHILDREN.

His Act Attributed to "Spontaneous Mental Combustion."

MONTREAL, April 3.—William Simpson, a prosperous young farmer of St. Charles, on the bank of the Ottawa River, in his wife's absence, yesterday afternoon, shot and killed his two daughters, two months and two years old, and then tried to kill himself. He was brought by train to the Notre Dame Hospital here to-day, and is in a critical condition. Simpson comes of a good family, and has relatives all over Canada. Physicians say that the act was the result of excessive affection for his children, which caused "spontaneous mental combustion" and eventual "brain storm."

OIL TRUST GAINS A POINT.

Judge Dismisses 350 Counts in Indictments—1,550 Counts Remain.

CHICAGO, April 3.—As a result of nineteen motions for dismissal of counts in the indictments against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, charged with accepting illegal rates on shipments of oil, Judge Landis in the United States District Court to-day ordered that 350 of the counts be stricken out, because of defects in the drawing of them.

In most of the instances where the motions for dismissal were upheld, attorneys for the Government admitted that there had been either a mistake in the indictment or that there was something lacking in the evidence.

The Government attorneys expressed little concern at the dismissal of the 350 counts, saying that there are still 1,550 counts on which the indictments can stand.

BRYCE'S PLEDGE TO CANADA.

British Ambassador to Fight in Washington for Her Interests.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, April 3.—"I will fight at Washington for your interests," was, in effect, an important portion of a speech to the Canadian Club this afternoon by the Hon. James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington.

The diplomat had concluded his speech setting forth the advantages of Canada and lessons on democracy from Switzerland, when Lieut. Gov. Clark, in moving a vote of thanks, alluded to the necessity for Canada being on her guard against the aggression of the United States, and threw out a hint that Great Britain had not guarded with sufficient care the interests of Canada.

Mr. Bryce laughed at the Lieutenant Governor's thrusts and in reply said:

"I cannot enter into the issues that have been raised, but I ask you to suspend judgment on the past, on the allegation that British diplomacy has not done its best for Canada and Canadians. I speak to you as Ambassador—for the home Government—when I state that the idea that the British Government is in different to the sentiment of Canadians is an entirely mistaken one. Let me tell you that in every section the British people are eager, nay, insistent, that all just claims and rights of Canada shall be secured in every respect.

"I am persuaded, as a representative of the British Government, that this is a duty—that it is, in a sense, my duty at Washington, and it shall be a paramount duty."

The sentiment was punctuated by volley upon volley of wild applause, and then the enthusiastic members rose to their feet, waved their handkerchiefs in the air, and cheered and cheered again.

FEARS AMERICAN REPORTERS.

One Reason Why Kaiser Hesitates to Send One of His Sons to Harvard.

BERLIN, April 3.—Count von Eulenburg, Emperor William's chief Court Marshal, who is in constant attendance on his Majesty, says he has not heard of anything tending to confirm the report that the Emperor intends to send his fifth son, Prince Oscar, to Harvard.

The Emperor, it is learned from other sources, has often discussed the propriety of sending Prince Augustus, his fourth son, to Harvard, without having come to a positive decision. The Empress did not wish Prince Augustus to go, and some of the officers of the household and also some Americans with whom his Majesty talked, believed it would be most difficult for the Prince really to share university life in the United States, as he would constantly be accompanied by his adjutant, would live in a separate house, would have his own establishment, would never be able to detach himself from the distinctions of his birth, and would unceasingly be followed by newspaper artists and reporters.

NEW MONTAGNINI DISCLOSURE

Merry del Val Urged Demonstrations Against Separation Law.

PARIS, April 3.—The Temps this afternoon published the text of a letter from Papal Secretary of State Merry del Val to Mgr. Montagnini, recommending the organization of demonstrations against the passage of the law providing for the separation of church and state, but advising him not to compromise himself.

The British Ambassador, Sir Francis L. Bertie, lengthily conferred with Premier Clemenceau to-day on a subject not divulged, but supposed to relate to the disclosures contained in the documents seized at the Papal Nunciature, in which Sir Francis figures.

EARTHQUAKES IN AZORES.

Violent Shocks All Over St. Michael's Island—Panic in Villa Franca.

PONTA DELGADA, Island of St. Michael's, Azore Islands, April 3.—There were violent earthshocks throughout this island last night.

The worst disturbance was at Villa Franca, where the panic-stricken people fled to the outskirts of the town.

The wealthier inhabitants are leaving Villa Franca, the ancient capital of St. Michael's, which has twice been destroyed by volcanic eruptions, being practically swallowed up by an eruption of mud in 1522.

St. Michael's, or San Miguel, is the northern island of the eastern group of the Azores, and Ponta Delgada is the principal city of St. Michael's and commercial capital of the Azore Islands.

The town of Villa Franca is of considerable importance. Three and a half miles north of the town is a crater named Lagoa de Fogo, with fifteen fathoms of water in it. Villa Franca is situated fourteen miles east of Pontn Delgada, and in 1900 had a population of about 7,500.

BITLIS AGAIN SHAKEN.

Fresh Casualties and More Houses Destroyed—Wide Area Affected.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 3.—Consular dispatches from Erzerum, Turkish Armenia, dated yesterday, say that stronger earth shocks were felt at Bitlis throughout the night of March 31, resulting in fresh casualties and the destruction of houses. The greater part of the Vilayet of Bitlis has been affected by the earthquakes, and there has been considerable loss of cattle. The British Consulate at Bitlis was damaged and the majority of the buildings there are unsafe.

Though individual efforts are being made to relieve the distress, it is hoped that serious relief arrangements will not long be delayed.

Slight shocks were continuing at Bitlis when these advices were forwarded to Erzerum.

St. Vincent Volcano Inactive.

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent, B. W. I., April 3.—Dr. Tempest Anderson, who has just made a study of the present condition of the St. Vincent volcano, La Soufriere, reports that the crater of the volcano is inactive, except for a small discharge of steam in two places. The lake is restored and vegetation is growing up to an altitude of 1,400 feet. An examination of the materials thrown out during the last eruption confirms the conclusions set forth in the report made by Dr. Anderson to the Royal Geographical Society in 1902.

BRITISH COLONIAL SCANDAL.

Ex-Governors Said to Have Used Influence to Get Concessions.

LONDON, April 3.—The circular issued by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Earl of Elgin, advising all ex-Governors of Colonies to refrain from engaging in commercial enterprises in the territories which they formerly administered has resulted in establishing the fact that there has been an increasing tendency of late years on the part of retired Governors of the smaller colonies to take a prominent part in the management of companies which have obtained profitable concessions in the territories which these officials administered.

A number of questions on the subject were asked in the House of Commons in the course of the past session, some of them intimating that ex-Governors had used their political pulls to secure specially remunerative concessions.

The dominant note in men's fashions is athleticism. Our suits and overcoats designed for this Spring's service faithfully carry out the spirit. They are incorporated with all the innovations and possess a character and distinctiveness infinitely higher than the rest of their kind.

Pictures
Shown in a New Way.

THE INSTALLATION of the swinging rug racks in the Rug Store was a Loeser innovation instantly and widely appreciated by Brooklyn people, and already either copied or on the way to be copied by progressive Brooklyn Stores.

Now the same principle is applied to the convenient and ready showing of framed Pictures.

You will find the new swinging rack at the rear of the Picture Store. You will find that you can see and examine the four hundred framed Pictures it holds in about a third the time it would formerly have taken.

The idea is one more bit added to the Store's good service.

Send Your Furs to Loeser Cold Storage.

THE SIMPLEST, safest and most satisfactory way of caring for your furs and costly garments is in a cold, dry air storage room, where, after being thoroughly cleaned, they are simply hung on racks—not beaten or treated with ill-smelling chemicals.

The Loeser Cold Air Storage Plant has given service to thousands of Brooklyn people. This is simply a reminder that it will give such service to you—and for an insignificant charge.

REPAIRING AND REMODELING FURS should be put in work now. It costs less if done at this season and the leisurely work possible now insures at least as good a result as if the work is done under high pressure near the time when furs are needed for wear.

The Burlington Proofs.

The Finest Reproductions of Famous Paintings Ever Made at Low Prices.

WE COUNT IT ONE OF THE BEST THINGS that the Loeser Picture Store has ever done to have introduced a full collection of these Burlington Proofs to Brooklyn people.

No one will realize without seeing these pictures the perfect fidelity with which the new mezzogravure process has reproduced not only the drawing, but also the very atmosphere of some of the most famous and beautiful paintings in the world.

And yet the Burlington Proofs cost only FIVE DOLLARS APIECE. We can provide them in artistic wood frames for as low as $7.50 apiece.

They bring the best art within the reach of a moderate expenditure, as it has never been brought before. They will delight the most critical taste. They will astonish, by their low pricing, those who are familiar with the usual cost of fair reproductions of famous paintings.

NEW SPELLERS MEET AND SAY GO SLOW

No New Changes Unless Three-fourths of the Board Gives Approval.

PRAISE FOR ROOSEVELT

His Service to the Cause of Orthographic Improvement Pointed Out — Thanks for Carnegie.

"Tired of being held responsible for actions with which they had had nothing to do," as one prominent educator expressed it, the Simplified Spelling Board, at its first meeting held yesterday in the Waldorf-Astoria, took from the Executive Committee that almost unlimited power in matters orthographic which it had exercised. Now any new ideas about spelling will not be passed upon by the Executive Committee alone; each of the fifty members of the board will consider each proposed change and vote upon it, and none will be suggested or recommended to the public unless three-fourths of the members of the board approves.

This rather revolutionary change was precipitated by the action of Dr. David Starr Jordan, President of the University of California. Dr. Jordan sent his resignation to the Chairman of the board late last Fall, so it came out yesterday, explaining that while he favored the simplification of the English language he yet was unwilling to remain associated with a body with whose work he had nothing to do, although his name was subscribed to its actions. Prof. Brander Matthews, the Chairman, urged him to reconsider, and suggested that a meeting of the entire board be held. That was just what Dr. Jordan wanted, and so he withdrew his resignation.

When the college professors, authors, publishers, editors, jurists, and financiers who comprise the board met in executive session yesterday Dr. Jordan was there, having come with two other Californians —Judge William W. Morrow of the United States Circuit Court and Dr. George Hempl, Professor of English in Leland Stanford University—especially to attend. He lost no time in explaining to the other members of the board his reason for sending his resignation, and a number of them agreed with him, especially William T. Harris, formerly United States Commissioner of Education and now editor of Webster's International Dictionary. Dr. Harris said that he had thought of resigning because he felt about it as Dr. Jordan did—that his name was being used in matters with which he had had nothing to do. It seemed to be the feeling of the members, especially those in distant States and abroad, that they had a right to be consulted before their names were subscribed to the actions of the Executive Committee, and so it was voted that each project of the board or committee or of any individual he submitted to each member of the board who, after careful consideration of it at his home, should forward his vote on the question to the Chairman of the Executive Committee. That officer should be empowered to take necessary steps to bring before the public such proposed changes as had been approved by three-fourths of the members.

It was decided at yesterday's meeting also to incorporate the board under the laws of the State of New York. This step was suggested by Judge Morrow of California. In order that the accounts might be in proper shape before the incorporation, an Auditing Committee, consisting of Andrew Carnegie and Lyman J. Gage, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, was appointed.

The board decided also that it should have a President, and unanimously elected Thomas R. Lounsbury, Professor of English in Yale University. Heretofore the Chairman, Prof. Matthews, has been the executive head. The new Executive Committee elected consists of Isaac K. Funk, editor and publisher of the Standard Dictionary, New York; Henry Holt, publisher and author, New York; Prof. Matthews, Charles P. G. Scott, etymological editor of the Century Dictionary, New York; Benjamin E. Smith, editor of the Century Dictionary; Charles E. Sprague, President of the Union Dime Savings Institution, New York; Calvin Thomas, Professor of Germanic Languages and Literature in Columbia University, and William Hayes Ward, editor of The Independent. This committee probably will elect its officers before the next executive meeting of the board on Friday morning. At present Mr. Scott is Secretary and Mr. Sprague Treasurer.

No New Spelling Now.

Some time ago a report was published that the board would issue at this time another list of simplified spellings, but Prof. Matthews said yesterday that none was ready, and it was not likely that any new suggestions would be made for some time. The plan adopted of submitting each proposed change to all of the members of the board meant that it would take several weeks at least to get through even the first of these. The board, however, did not take any action on the matter of policy or procedure yesterday, confining itself to questions of organization.

Mr. Carnegie, who gives the board $15,000 a year, listened blushingly while resolutions of thanks to him were read.

Chairman Matthews in his report gave the history of the simplified spelling movement in the United States from the time when Mr. Carnegie was "askt" to give his support and the board was "establisht," down "thru" the many months of arduous labor to convince the public that English is not a "fixt" language, and that "logic must conquer sentimental objections" to the proposed remedying of "the unsightly condition of spelling."

He declared that there had been widespread misunderstanding of the action of the Executive Committee in preparing the famous list of three hundred simpler spellings. All that had been done, he explained, was to counsel those who believe in the progressive improvement of English orthography to testify to their faith that is in them by preferring the briefer of two spellings already in use.

"Of course," said Dr. Matthews, "the board expects sooner or later to propose further simplifications of its own devising —since that is really the reason for the board's existence."

Roosevelt's Aid.

President Roosevelt's indorsement of the 300 simpler spellings was discussed at considerable length.

"This act of Mr. Roosevelt," said Prof. Matthews, "arrested the attention of the civilized world, and altho he wisely yielded to the protests of those Congressmen who recoiled horror-stricken from 'thru' and 'kist' he did a service to the cause of orthographic improvement which it is impossible to overestimate. He awakened an interest in the subject among countless thousands who had never before given it a thought. The President of the United States is now a most welcome member of this board."

Nowhere did the action of President Roosevelt arouse more comment than in Great Britain, Prof. Matthews said, "and not a little of this comment was courteous and most cordial." This interest suggested to the Chairman the possibility of extending the work into England, and he added that "any British board or committee or association undertaking a task parallel to ours may be assured in advance of our best wishes and of our good offices."

Although many men of science had accepted the board's proposed simplifications, the most vociferous opponents had been men of letters, Prof. Matthews said. "But it is indisputable, also," he added, "that some writers of prominence have revealed themselves as tied fast in the bonds of prejudice, and as glorying in their enslavement."

Concerning Prof. Matthews's reference to the prospect of a Simplified Spelling Board in Great Britain, William Archer, the author and dramatic critic who had come from London to attend the meeting, said that although prominent educators in England had considered the matter it had not yet been determined what would be done. It was practically certain, he said, that some organization would be formed, but the details had not been arranged. The headquarters might be in London or at Oxford or Cambridge.

THE SPELLERS DINE.

Carnegie Presides and Bryce Writes, Indorsing Them.

The prospect of extending the campaign for simpler spelling into all English-speaking lands grew brighter at the dinner of the board at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. William Archer of London, William F. MacLean, editor of The Toronto World and a member of the Canadian Parliament, and Alexander H. MacKay, Superintendent of Education of Nova Scotia, spoke in favor of spreading the work, and bespoke the heartiest co-operation of the people of England, Canada, and Australasia. In addition the British Ambassador to the United States, James Bryce, whom Andrew Carnegie considered "the man who knows more than any other man in the world," declared his high opinion of the proposed reform, saying, in part, in a letter which was read at the dinner:

Speaking in no sense either officially or semi-officially, but merely expressing my own personal opinion, I may say to you, that I have long felt that the time must come when those who use the English language will have seriously to consider the necessity of bringing our spelling into closer accord with our pronunciation. I recognize and admit all the difficulties—they are undeniably great—that lie in the way of such a reform. But the advantages to be gained outweigh those difficulties. One of them is the enormous saving that would be effected in the time spent by children in learning to read and spell. Another is the swift and wide extension that would be given to the use of English as a means of intercourse all over the world, by foreign nations as well as by the American and British people in their dealings with foreigners. Sooner or later this question must be faced. What particular reforms to propose is doubtless a matter requiring much thought and prolonged discussion. But we cannot begin too soon to consider this subject seriously, for it will take a great deal of time and pains.

I am delighted to see it is beginning to be so considered here, and can assure you that in England also some of our leading philologists and scholars feel its importance and are disposed to co-operate with you in endeavoring to consider how it can be dealt with in a practical way. But the first thing is to make the public understand that it is not, in the least a chimera. It is eminently a question of substance, a problem whose solution would be an immense practical gain.

Mr. Carnegie, who was the toastmaster, said that he believed that spelling reform would succeed because the great law of development, of evolution, would carry it on.

"I never lie awake nights troubled about the future of the Republic," he said, "nor about the future of the race, nor even about my own future." And when the diners laughed Mr. Carnegie added: "And I suppose my own future is, after all, the most important—to me!"

Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the venerable New England author, in his speech referred to the part President Roosevelt had taken in the reforming of spelling, saying:

"We have come to thank those who have led this movement from the beginning, including that very high official who bravely tried to do it with a whole Senate, not like Caesar, at his heels, but confronting him and keeping him back, and who found that he could not reform the whole English-speaking world at one session of Congress."

The souvenirs were miniature reproductions of the New England primer of the middle seventies. The paper cover, the color and texture of the pages, and the style of type were like those of the age that has gone, but the spelling was that which the Simplified Spelling Board recommended last year, and some modern verses were put in in place of the old-fashioned rhymes. The first of the alphabetic verses, hitting Mr. Carnegie was as follows:

A.
Since Andrew fell
Beneath the spell
Reform's lookt well,

Another verse that made the diners laugh was:

The whiles Reform
Hath been difeuit,
Time's wofut-Sithe
Blusht red with Rust.

"The Calf Path," a poem loved by every New England schoolboy, past and present, also was published in the little book, with the new spelling, of course.

WHY MRS. CLAUSSEN WAS NOT PRESENTED

Minister Graves Sends to the State Department Samples of Her Letters

AND CREDENTIALS SHE GAVE

Card of "the Handsomest Man in Paris" and a Note from One Seeking an Appointment.

Charles H. Graves, United States Minister to Sweden, has sent to the State Department in Washington his answer to the complaint filed with the department by Mrs. Ida M. von Claussen to the effect that Minister Graves refused to present her at the Court of King Oscar. As part of his answer he inclosed two letters written by Mrs. von Claussen to his wife. They appear below.

Mrs. von Claussen arrived here on March 23, on the French liner La Provence. She said then that she was going to Washington to lay her grievance before the President personally. She is the daughter of Adolph Claussen, a retired merchant of this city. At 19 she married Dr. William Francis Homan, but in 1905 obtained a South Dakota divorce from him, resuming her maiden name. Her grandfather was Matthew Byrnes, a building contractor of this city.

Here are the letters:

"Elysée Palace Hotel, Paris, Jan. 5, 1907.

"My dear Mrs. Graves: An American is in a terrible predicament and it is this. I have anticipated being presented at your court the court of Sweden I mean for over six months. I had the pleasure of meeting His royal Majesty in Wiesbaden and he was so sweet and kind to my little daughter five years old that it made me think of a part of the world that I was not familiar with namely; Sweden and so through Mr. and Mrs. Linberg I have been under the impression that upon my arrival in Sweden I would be presented to a Countess whose name I at this minute forget but a friend of Miss Linberg's and through her to Her Royal Majesty the Queen but Miss Linberg has just written to me here that she is informed that I must be presented through the wife of 'Our American Ambassador' and so I am taking the liberty and may I say the pleasure of writing to you.

"I do not know what to do at this late date and for my own dignitys sake cannot afford not to be presented as many many people know about it both in this country and in America. My cousin could, but I will not oblige myself to my family, give me all the credentials necessary. He is Geheimrat von Bramann with ten decorations of honor from the Emperor of Germany for operating on Emperor Fritz and other deeds of distinction. My Aunt is Baroness von Tronchin. These both families live in Halle Salle Germany. Admiral Dewey, Mrs. Dewey and son are my friends in America I am sorry I have just four weeks ago sent a letter of introduction to the Hon. Mr. Bishop in the House of Representatives otherwise this might be what you require. Mr. Brander Matthews and family are my friends they are also personal and intimate friends of President Roosevelt.

"I assure you that I am entitled to the 'courtesy' of presentation through my entire family, in Germany and my 'intimate friends of position in America and Canada. I was to have been the guest of honor at Lady and Sir Adolph Carron's reception of the Duke and Dutchess when they visited Ottawa in 1901 I believe that was the year. He was member of Parliament. I also know here in Paris Mons. Achille Adam former member of Parliament and Princess Estrada but I could weary you with what must be very uninteresting to you but do not refuse me the courtesy that I have understood from Mr. Consul Linberg was going to be conferred upon me just when all my gowns and Court Costume is completed. It would be like a bride left at the altar and I am too well known socially to have such an indignity thrust upon me so for the honor of America I appeal to you dear Mrs. Graves to see that no mistake is made.

"Another thing. Mr. Depews nephew, no not nephew but some relative Mr. and Mrs. Hustes were my intimate [underlined] friends but they are now dead going on three years. I am part owner in the Hotel Lorraine 45th st. & 5th Avenue. which I named and so son & so on—Trusting that you will arrange everything for me and of course accept my heartiest thanks and I could almost hug you and love you for not allowing any failure to what should be a grand and glorious success for I assure you America has worked hard in developing me and has given me many things to be thankful for. I assure you will take great pleasure in knowing me as your country [underlined] woman.

"Most sincerely wishing you a happy new year and if you will be kind enough to let me hear from you at Grand Hotel Stockholm, I believe that is the name, at any rate I will call for a reply there and trusting you will take me under your protection believe me,

Most cordially,
IDA VON CLAUSSEN

"P. S. His Majesty King Oscar has honored me with his signed picture this in itself is credential enough. I arrive Jan. 10."

"Mrs. Graves—

"Dear Madam: In a roundabout way I have been informed that you, at least, appreciated my friendly inclined letter, but you 'could not present me as you did not know me' but you took no pains to find me out and what is more 'we' are not asking any favors to be presented by you, but in fact it was just a courtesy extended to you and to please me that my friends here sought your permission, or might I say, sought your courtesy in exchange to allow them to present me at their Court. I find through the highest officials here it was not necessary for me to have paid my respects to you and you know what I have received at your hands for my 'friendly impulsiveness thinking you would be flattered by my thoughtfulness and consideration.'

"I am afraid that you do not or have not understood the situation. I have come to Sweden at the suggestion and repeated invitation of the King, who has honored me by his signed photograph saying it would be a 'passport' throughout Sweden as he smiled at me. Naturally it is a 'passport' in his own land above anywhere else. He also asked me to accept his name for my baby's fifth birthday and call her after him which I did. Baroness Daelman is willing to present me at Court will you kindly extend the courtesy to her. I have sent to America for papers telling you who I am and would have brought them with me if I had not been put on the boat in a dying condition. I have been very ill until these past four weeks having been given up for dead only six weeks ago.

"I am sending you a few little papers that will introduce you to me I mean pardon me, introduce me to you until my German papers arrive from my father's sister Baroness von Tronchin and my cousin the Geheimrat von Bramann who operated on the Emperor of Germany and for his wonderful career has received seven decorations of honor.

"I am the granddaughter of (old) Sir Matthew Byrnes who built up half of old New York and died leaving millions and your humble servant. The U. S. M. T. CO's letter I am sending you identifies me. The Princess Estrada of Paris letter will at least let you know that I am in a position to invite the best to my 'feasts.' I tried to be modest and retiring in coming to Sweden allowing my friends to be greater than I, but you see, I am of some importance after all and maybe a great deal more than I care to admit. So I am sure that the little obstacle of 'not knowing me' is removed and you will let Baroness Daelman know at your earliest convenience that she may present me as I think its only American courtesy to that lady who has been most gracious in her offer, or perhaps you yourself for the honor of America will present me for I am sure you will at least agree with these nobles of Sweden that I am a 'fair' representative, if you will but once take a look at me. Thanking you for the return of the enclosed papers at your leisure and convenience I beg to remain

"Very truly
"Mrs. Ida von Claussen.."

With this letter were inclosed, Minister Graves reports:

A bill for 1,50 marks for surgery, indorsed "This is the Surgeon who took 1,500 marks worth of appendix from me."

Three regrets for dinner invitations.

Letter from a New York Trust Company about her account.

Several visiting cards of gentlemen, one indorsed "This is the handsomest man in Paris."

Letter from a Frenchman saying "could not live without seeing her again" and asking for an appointment in London.

HOSPITAL STAFF INTACT.

Report of Resignations at Washington Heights Institute Denied.

Ex-Coroner Gustav Scholer, who is a director of the Washington Heights Hospital, said yesterday that there was no truth in a story that the hospital staff of physicians, nurses, and ambulance drivers had resigned.

"Two doctors resigned on March 31," said Dr. Scholer, "after trouble with the police over the removal of an insane patient. The ambulance driver who left got a place that pays him a little more money, and I was the man who obtained it for him, so that nails that lie. As to the nurses, we did have a case in which nurses were reprimanded for a slight violation of our rules, but these same nurses are now at work in the hospital, perfectly satisfied.

"It is evident that some one tried to give us a black eye by circulating these trouble rumors, but as a matter of fact we have two new physicians at work in the places of the two who resigned, and everything is running smoothly now."

John R. Walsh Pleads Not Guilty.

CHICAGO, April 3.—John R. Walsh, ex-President of the Chicago National Bank, indicted on charges of misapplying the bank's funds, was arraigned to-day in the Federal Court. He entered a plea of not guilty, and the trial was set for Oct. 15. Judge Anderson announced that he would hear arguments on the defendant's motion for a bill of particulars.

TO REVIVE MONO-RAIL PLAN.

Rapid Transit Board Will Discuss To-day New Line to Coney Island.

An effort will be made at the meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission to-day to revive the proposal to build a mono-rail road from Brooklyn to Coney Island in accordance with the Behr system. The matter has been in abeyance some time owing to the illness of the President of the board, Alexander E. Orr, but an endeavor will be made to get it through before the board goes out of office under the Public Utilities bill.

The Interborough at this meeting intends to call the attention of the board to the need of additional tracks at Ninety-sixth Street to facilitate the switching of the local and express trains at that point. This, it is said, is largely responsible for the poor service in rush hours.

The Interborough's plan is to build the Broadway centre track down from 100th Street to Ninety-sixth, moving the present Lenox Avenue tracks over to where the Broadway local tracks now are and making five tracks in the station instead of four. By this means, it is said, the switching of local and express trains can be separated and much confusion and loss of time avoided.

AMORY SUIT CALLED OFF.

Complaint Against Lawyer Nason Is Declared Ambiguous.

The suit of Col. William N. Amory against Daniel Nason, an attorney, was stopped yesterday and his counsel was permitted to withdraw a juror. This was because of a defect in the complaint.

Col. Amory sued for the recovery of $15,850, alleging that he had divided with Nason the profits of a stock deal on false representations. The complaint was ambiguous. The case will now go on the general calendar.

Charles E. Rushmore, who appeared for the defendant, asked that the complaint be dismissed, but after a long argument consented to the withdrawal of a juror and the submission of the complaint to the Special Term of the Court.

Night Crash in the Harbor.

The British steamer Grecian Prince, while outward bound for Santos, collided with a scow in the harbor late on Tuesday night. Several of her plates above the water line were broken. She is now at anchor off Stapleton, S. I., and repairs are being made. She will probably be able to proceed to-morrow.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the appoval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

CAUGHT UNDER FIRE IN COMPRESSED AIR

Sandhogs' Flight for Life on the McAdoo Terminal Site.

FLAMES SWEPT OVER THEM

Some Fell Unconscious as They Made for the Outer Air—Oddest of Fires.

On the wooden frame of a window in a compresser shed at the north of the temporary structures over the terminal site of the McAdoo tunnel at Church and Fulton Streets a tiny tongue of fire appeared early yesterday morning. The flame raced around the woodwork until the entire frame was afire. Presently the pane cracked with a crash and a volume of smoke poured forth. Soon the entire building, which was made of highly inflammable yellow pine, covered with a thin sheathing of corrugated iron, was crackling like a log in a fireplace.

Suddenly a wall of fire rose up ten feet in height at the north end of the terminal bordering on Fulton Street. Fanned by stiff breezes it raced across the terminal in the direction of Cortlandt Street. A power house two stories high and several hundred feet long, in the middle of the site, collapsed before the approaching wall like a house of cards. When the sheet of flame had passed the building lay, a smoldering heap of ashes, on the floor of the excavation, fifty feet below the street level.

Beyond the power house was a tall derrick, and on either side of it smaller derricks and caissons. For a moment several fantastic spires projected above the jagged top of the wall of fire, then it sped on, leaving odd blackened skeletons in its wake.

Beyond this there was little for the wall to attack. Gradually the wall of flame itself crumbled away into a long line of fire, stretching across the terminal. Then it disappeared altogether. In its wake it had left a ruin where the temporary structures of the O'Rourke Construction Company had been. Never had a field of stubble on a Western prairie been turned into smoking ashes quicker. The whole fire was over in half an hour.

Eighty Men Below Ground.

But many things happened in that brief half hour. When the fire started eighty "sand hogs" were working in eleven caissons. These caissons are wooden cylinders, equipped with a shaft and sealed on the outside with air locks. In the shaft there is a ladder used for emergencies and an iron bucket which lifts out the dirt. The air lock is equipped with two heavy iron doors used in admitting the compressed air into the caisson. Into the locks ran tubes connecting with the air compressors scattered throughout the plant.

At each caisson an engineer is stationed. He attends to a donkey engine used in operating the bucket. It is his duty also to warn the "sand hogs" of any danger and to take them out in the bucket. When these engineers saw the wall of fire bearing down upon them yesterday it seemed like certain death to stick to their posts. In a prairie fire a man can save himself by cutting a circle of grass around him. They had no such chance. But not a man ran. Climbing up the outside of the caisson, which in some cases rose above the street level ten feet, they sounded the danger signal on the locks with a hammer:

Tap-tap-tap-tap-tap-tap-tap-tap.

The "sand hogs" dropped their shovels and picks and ran for the buckets and the emergency ladders. Eight taps meant "Danger, quick!" In Shaft 22B, a caisson sixty feet deep, these men were at work: Foreman William Connoll of 426 Fifty-sixth Street; Edward Murphy, John Prendergast, Michael McDonald, and John Burns.

One Man Falls Unconscious.

Prendergast, Murphy, and Connell mounted the ladder in the order named, and the others jumped into the bucket. Suddenly the shaft became black. The electric lights had gone out. The dynamos had been destroyed. From their pockets the men drew candles, which they carry for emergencies, and lighted them. The bucket disappeared above in the faint glimmer of the lights. The men on the ladder climbed on. With a cry as if suddenly hurt Murphy doubled up and fell from the ladder, carrying Connell with him.

"How are you below?" asked Prendergast from above, after waiting some minutes and not hearing a sound.

"Not dead yet, but I guess Murphy's done for!" came back a faint reply from Connell.

Prendergast felt a tremor on the ladder, as if somebody was mounting with a burden. He held the candle out from the wall of the shaft in an effort to throw some light into the gloom below. Soon Connell appeared carrying Murphy thrown over his shoulder.

"Couldn't leave Eddie down there," he said to Prendergast.

The three were soon out of the caisson. Murphy was turned over to Ambulance Surgeon Beeuwkes of the Hudson Hospital. "The bends," was his diagnosis. Murphy was taken to the hospital.

When the men scrambled out of the locks they found themselves in peculiar positions. Some were behind, some in the middle, and some in front of the wall of fire. Those behind let themselves down quickly from the caissons and picked their way cautiously over the field of charred and burning wood to safety. They needed no invitation to run.

One of them was injured. He is John O'Hare of 56 West Fifty-fifth Street. When the wall had swept by he was picked up by his comrades, unconscious, and removed to the Hudson Hospital. The ambulance surgeon said he had been overcome by smoke.

Fire Swept on at Express Speed.

When the fire started there were several hundred machinists, carpenters, and other mechanics in the excavation. The roof of the excavation was made of yellow pine, as was the rest of the plant. This went up like a tinder box. Those who had a chance rushed for ladders leading to the surface. They appeared in droves, like bees smoked out of their hive. Others, seeing no opportunity to escape by the ladders, which were crowded, sought places of safety around the excavation. Over their heads there was a roar like a long roll of thunder. Showers of sparks fell near them. At first it was thought that some of them were injured. But the company accounted for all its men.

Firemen were on the scene soon after the fire started. Chief Croker came with the first alarm. He promptly sounded another. The firemen had difficulty in fighting the fire because of the many deep holes in the roof of the excavation and in the excavation itself. The holes were deeper than the hatchways of a ship and much more dangerous. The firemen did their work, however, without any of their number being injured. The structure of the Sixth Avenue elevated railroad caught fire twice. The firemen saved it both times.

Valuable Dynamos Are Destroyed.

Various estimates were made as to the damage. Chief Croker, who went to the fire on the first alarm, put it at $100,000. General Supt. Seymour, when first seen, would not hazard a guess. Later, he said it probably amounted to about $30,000 or $40,000. This was after a cursory examination, which showed that several large and valuable dynamos were destroyed; that five out of six compressors were out of commission; that all the lifts except one on the large derrick were practically useless; that the wooden sheaths of nine caissons had been destroyed, and that other minor damage had been done.

NEW YORK FAREWELL TO BRITISH CONSUL

Sir Percy Sanderson Told of Friendship He Has Won Here.

GUEST OF BRITISH CLUB

Bishop Potter and Admiral Coghlan Join in Tributes to the Retiring Official.

To Sir Percy Senderson, retiring British Consul General at this port, the British Schools and Universities' Club gave a farewell dinner at Delmonico's last night and presented an address beautifully illuminated and bound in red morocco. Sir Percy has been a member of the club almost from its foundation and has served as its President. The members in bidding him good-bye expressed not only their appreciation of his work as Consul General here, but their regret at their own loss of a tried and faithful friend.

The banquet hall was hung with the Royal Standard of England and the Stars and Stripes. Dr. Walter Eyer Lambert, the President of the club, gave as the first toast of the evening "The King" and "The President." Then Dr. Lambert read the address of farewell from the club. It was in part:

"On retiring to England he takes with him the high esteem of his fellow-members and the affectionate wishes that in the ease of honored retirement after a long official life of duty well and nobly done, he may enjoy the reward of signal services rendered in various parts of the world to his sovereign and to his country in the course of a brilliant and useful public career."

As Sir Percy rose to reply he was greeted with "For he's a jolly good fellow" and three hearty rounds of cheers. He referred to the club as unique among the British associations of New York. They all demanded some qualification of birth or descent for membership, but it united all men, whether British subjects or American citizens, who had had a British education and could claim the same associations not only of literature but of sport. As Sir Percy mentioned sport a deep "Hear, hear" ran through the room.

"At these dinners," he said, "one goes back to the days of one's youth and is sometimes startled to find what a distance that means, how in telling of cricket one has to recall it is not ten or fifteen years since one has played, but forty or fifty years. Then the lengthening shadows tell us the day is passing and the twilight approaches, when one enjoys a rest and a talk over the incidents of the day."

Bishop Potter spoke of the American Consular system.

"Any one who has traveled over the globe," he said, "has a varied experience of the genus Consul, and I must say that my experience with Consuls representing my own country has not always been felicitous. I remember in a semi-tropical country full of historical associations and beautiful scenery, sitting upon a veranda with the United States representative and asking him: 'What has impressed you most in this country?' He replied: 'The bugs.'"

Three qualifications for a Consul, according to Bishop Potter, are that he must be a gentleman, a student, and have sympathy with the people among whom he lives. All of these, he declared, Sir Percy had in the highest degree.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, speaking for the "Sister Societies," paid a warm tribute to the retiring Consul General.

"We do not ask you to come back officially, for promotion would lead you to Washington, and we would lose you again," he said. "You will take many hearts with you as you sail away. You are one more link in the chain that binds the two great nations, and God forbid there should be anything to come between them."

As he sat down Sir Percy walked over to his seat and shook him warmly by the hand.

Admiral Cogblan told of the Kentucky Colonel who offered a drink to two Easterners. One took Apollinaris, the other milk. Then the Colonel spoke, "Barkeep, Suh, under the circumstances, give me a piece of pie."

"Like the old salt who stuck a copy of a prayer over his bunk," he said, "and remarked every night, 'Lord, them's my sentiments,' I can only say Gen. Woodford has expressed mine. But I will say this: Sir Percy has lived under the influence of Wall Street, but he has not been hurt by it. He has always tried to do something for somebody, and never somebody for something."

The Rev. Dr. Patton of Princeton University thought that Mr. Bryce might be a persona gratissima at Washington because he was the first man in postdiluvian times to ascend Mount Ararat. He added:

"With the increased use of the cable the office of the Ambassador may become less important. Business between the two countries may now be easily carried on by the Secretary of State and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, but with the rapid growth of commercial intercourse the consular office will increase in importance. It is not singular then that England should have set so high a standard for her consuls and has invariably appointed men like Sir Percy to represent her with distinction and success.

"If ever there should come a war between this country and Great Britain, which may God forbid, it would take some time after peace was declared to determine the victor. We should have to find out on which side of the international balances sheet the debit lay, so close are the commercial relations between the two peoples."

Among the other guests were Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, Sir William Preece, K. C. B., F. R. S., the electrician; John S. Kennedy, Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce; Bishop Courtenay, the Rev. Dr. Parker Morgan, and Dr. Wolfred Nelson.

Rockefeller Hair Oil Resold—$80 for Santos-Dumont's Flying Machine.

The sale of unclaimed merchandise remaining in the Appraisers' storehouse, which was begun on Tuesday, ended yesterday, the total receipts aggregating between $6,000 and $7,000. It developed that S. Schmidt, who on Tuesday purchased the hair oil sent to John D. Rockefeller, had failed to make the cash deposit required, and the preparation was again put under the hammer.

F. Cuneo bid $2 and got it. The airship imported by Santos-Dumont for the St. Louis Exposition, and which has not been claimed, was sold to B. J. Green of 40 Richard Street, Brooklyn, for $80. He said he bought the flying machine for use, and would test it soon.

"Consul," the stuffed chimpanze, was bought by William Woodbridge for $33. Mr. Woodbridge represented a social organization known as the Swans. Bostock's pet will hereafter grace the rooms of the organization at 36 Sixth Avenue.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the pure food law, the Government sold 232½ pounds of "adulterated" sugar. The remaining articles all brought good prices.

Thinks City Should Construct an Office Building of Its Own.

The Sinking Fund Commission met yesterday and authorized the payment of $97,000 for rent of offices in the Park Row Building, although Controller Metz demurred and thought the city ought to take up the construction of a municipal building of its own.

The Commissioners passed a resolution approving the beginning of condemnation proceedings for a new landing place for the Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, ferry, and approved Commissioner Bensel's plan for improving the North River water front between 129th and 134th Streets.

The expenditure of $28,500 for a new drill hall for the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, in Brooklyn, was also authorized.

W. T. STEAD HERE TO TALK OF PEACE

Comes as Guest of Carnegie to Attend Opening of the Institute.

TO ACT WITH ENGLAND

Hopes for Good Results of the Next Conference at The Hague—Other Carnegie Guests.

William T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews, and international advocate of peace, who has come here as the guest of Andrew Carnegie to attend the opening of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg, and also to attend the peace conference in this city, arrived last night on the Cunarder Caronia. He was accompanied by Mrs. Stead, who visits America for the first time. In discussing his visit he said that besides coming as the guest of Mr. Carnegie to attend the celebration in Pittsburg on April 11 and the peace conference in this city on April 16 and 17, he had a third reason for visiting America, and this was to take soundings in influential quarters as to the wishes of Americans and the American Government concerning The Hague conference.

"One idea that I have in coming to America is this: that Americans should carry one step further the principle which Mr. Hollis incorporated in The Hague Convention of 1899. Article 8 recommended that the usages of duels—which are nothing less than private wars—should be extended to wars which are international. No action had been taken on this recommendation, though it was unanimously made. The conference should make it obligatory. Article 8, you may remember, recommends that when two Powers have a dispute they are unable to adjust by the ordinary means of diplomacy they should not resort to hostilities the moment they sever diplomatic intercourse, but they should call a special mediator, just as the principals in a duel would have their seconds make a last appeal for peace, who shall have a period not exceeding thirty days in which to try to settle the dispute and so establish peace without recourse to war, and so avert the awful bloodshed which must accompany the settlement of trouble by war."

"How would this operate in practice?" Mr. Stead was asked.

"It would give the world an absolute guarantee from the sudden outbreak of war, and so restore more confidence to the world.

"As a believer in the world's peace you are, of course, interested in the armament question?

"I am certainly interested in the question, though I do not expect any but an educational result from its discussion this year. I am more interested in the proposal that the executive governments of the world endeavor to promote peace by other and more direct methods than by merely preparing for war.

"They ought to support the work of the peace societies and provide funds for the adequate exercise of international hospitality. What a great work they could do toward the peace of this world if they spent money for that purpose. If they spent at least one dollar to promote peace for every hundred dollars they spent on war something practical could be done. This is a point which has been widely discussed, and many men of prominence are of the opinion that the days of universal peace could be materially hastened if only the war fund was devoted to bringing it about instead of its being spent in the purchase and the fitting out of all that goes to make for war. In this such men as Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Prince von Buelow are agreed, and they have given the question much study."

"What will England do on this question?"

"To me the English-speaking world is a single entity. They stand side by side and will act together. England will support the United States when she comes to the front with any question looking toward the common-good, and I hope that America will back up and support England when she takes the initiative. The English-speaking people stand shoulder to shoulder. It is their nature, and they always will. At The Hague in 1899 the Republic and the empire acted as a unit. I hope that history will repeat itself in 1907."

"What about the peace pilgrimage?" Mr. Stead was asked.

To this question he replied after several seconds' thought: "That depends upon the Americans. If the people of this, the New World, decides to appeal to the sovereigns and the statesmen and peoples of the Old World to make effective use of this great opportunity, the thing will be done, but otherwise not."

Mr. Stead added: "I have known Mr. Carnegie for more than twenty years. It was in The Pall Mall Gazette that his 'Gospel of Wealth' was first made famous in Europe, and since then down to the publication of his manifesto, 'My Partners, The People,' I have always been in touch with him. I am glad to be present at the opening of one of the greatest of the benefactions he has conferred upon 'His Partners,' the people of Pittsburg.

"I will speak on 'The Next Step Toward International Peace,' at Pittsburg. I have also accepted an invitation to speak at the New York Ethical Society's meeting on Sunday, April 14, at Carnegie Hall. I will also speak at the meeting of the Peace Conference, but that's all. I have declined all offers to lecture.

Mr. Stead went to the Hotel Belmont.

On the Caronia also arrived Sir William H. Preece, former Engineer in Chief of the British Post Office, and J. M. W. Van der Poorten-Schwartz, the author who writes under the nom de plume of "Maarten Maartens," who also comes to attend the opening celebration of the Carnegie Institute. He was asked whether he would write a book on America as a result of his visit here.

"I don't remember whether I am Maarten Maartens," he said. "All I remember is the motion of the boat. As to whether I will write a book, that depends on America. I am here on an inquisition visit."

Sir William Preece will remain over to attend the opening of the new home of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in this city on April 18.

HERE TO HONOR CARNEGIE.

Kaiser's Representatives to Attend Carnegie Institute Opening.

On the big North German Lloyd Line steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II., which arrived yesterday from Bremen, came three distinguished visitors, guests of Andrew Carnegie, who are here to attend the opening of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg on April 11. They are Lieut. Gen. von Loewenfeld, Adjutant in the Kaiser's military household, and personal friend of the German Emperor; Lieut. Col. Gustav Dickhuth of the German General Staff, and Prof. Friedrich Schaper of Berlin, member of the Royal Academy of Art, and one of the foremost sculptors in Germany.

"At the Captain's dinner on board last night Ambassador Tower proposed the health of the Kaiser, and it fell to me," Gen. von Loewenfeld said, "to propose the health of President Roosevelt. It was to me a most pleasant task, for this country and my own are friends in every relation in which one country comes into contact with another."

Prof. Schaper has never been in this country before, and he was on deck early in the morning even before the sky line of New York was visible, and remained there until the vessel reached her Hoboken pier. He was enthusiastic over what he had seen, and declared that from the water front this was a city of great beauty.

As a sculptor he was especially interested in the Statue of Liberty.

This is the first visit of Lieut. Col. Dickhuth, and he, too, remained on deck while the vessel was coming up the bay. He is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ilse.

None of the visitors had heard of the proposal for the Kaiser's youngest son to attend Harvard, though Lieut. Gen. Loewenfeld said that it would be a splendid idea and would result in much good.

Another passenger on the Kaiser was Walter Dierfeld, Principal of public schools at Deutsch-Eylau, who is en route to Mexico City, where he will teach for three years, during which time he is under a leave of absence. He is an enthusiastic believer in the plan to exchange teachers between this country and his own.

Others arriving on the Kaiser were: Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., the Hon. Charlmagne Tower, United States Ambassador at Berlin; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorpe Vare, Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Oppenheim, Ogden Mills Bishop, William F. Sheehan, Murray Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Leslie, Max Warmser, H. W. Cary, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Ely, M. A. Craig, William H. Forster, Miss Gladys Greeley, C. W. Kohlsaat, Mrs. Howard Taylor, G. Thornton Warren, and Fitz Hugh Whitehouse.

DEWEY AT PEACE CONGRESS.

Many States Also to be Represented at Carnegie Hall Conference.

Copies of resolutions passed by the Massachusetts Legislature relating to the second Hague Congress were received yesterday by the Secretary of the National Peace Congress from Gov. Curtis Guild, Jr. They call upon the President and Secretary of State to use their influence to induce The Hague Congress to adopt the disarmament resolutions and other peace measures approved at the recent London Conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. The congress will convene at Carnegie Hall on April 14 and remain in session four days.

Admiral George Dewey will be Chairman of the Committee on Patriotic Societies, and Gov. Stokes of New Jersey has appointed six delegates to the congress from his State.

Mrs. Donald McLean, General President of the National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, has written promising to serve on the Patriotic Committee. Nine Governors, nineteen Congressmen, and ten United States Senators will be members of the legislative committee. It is probable that the distinguished visitors from other lands will be entertained while in New York by the members of the New York Legislature.

SEE RESCUE AT SEA.

Passengers on Liner Watch Man Who Jumped Overboard Picked Up.

As the result of a brain storm, which reached its height when the big Kaiser Wilhelm II., which sailed from Bremen on March 16, was one day out, William Mills, a second-cabin passenger, jumped overboard in the North Sea. The vessel stopped and her officers did some quick work, which resulted in the man being brought aboard again. All this happened within twenty-five minutes, and the passengers, who arrived yesterday on the liner and who watched the whole proceeding, told the story and complimented the officers on what they had done.

As soon as Mills struck the water he began to cry for help, and being a good swimmer he managed to reach a life buoy which was thrown out by an officer. A small boat was lowered and picked him up. Mills, who said he lived "near New York" and was an American, declared that he did not remember jumping overboard.

When nearing Quarantine the Kaiser Wilhelm II. broke a piston and had to signal for tugs to assist her to dock.

DUNNE ON HIS DEFEAT.

Chicago Mayor Says Money Power of the Whole Country Did It.

CHICAGO, April 3.—The revised unofficial returns of yesterday's election show that Busse, the Republican candidate for Mayor, has been elected by a plurality of 13,016 over Dunne. The entire Republican city ticket was elected with the exception of Edward C. Young, the candidate for City Treasurer, who was beaten by John E. Treager, Democrat, by 7,983. The City Council will be Democratic by the same number as the old Council—36 Democrats to 34 Republicans.

Mayor Dunne to-day gave out the following statement:

"I was defeated by the money power, not only of this city, but of the whole United States. I fought a fair fight and lost. After I have had a week's rest I shall return to the practice of law."

The traction ordinances recently passed by the City Council over the veto of Mayor Dunne, and which provide for the immediate rehabilitation of the street-car systems, were carried by a vote of 163,648 to 132,720.

The election also added to the extent of the city by bringing in the suburb of Morgan Park, which will add about 3,000 to its population provided the citizens of Morgan Park approve the annexation. Their election is to be held in two weeks.

ST. LOUIS, April 3.—Complete returns show the election of the entire Democratic City Council ticket and fifteen Democrats of the twenty-eight members of the House of Delegates.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 3.—The latest returns from yesterday's judicial election show that Roujet D. Marshall, Republican, was re-elected Justice of the Supreme Court by a good-sized majority over Henry T. Scudder on a non-partisan ticket.

HEARST BLAMES MACHINE.

Says Dunne Was Defeated by Corrupt Democratic Organization.

In response to a request from The Chicago Record-Herald for his views of the result of the municipal election in Chicago, William Randolph Hearst issued a statement last night in which he says:

"The usual thing has happened. An honest Democratic candidate, running on a distinctly Democratic platform, has been defeated by a corrupt Democratic machine.

"It has been known all along that a great many of the machine Democratic leaders would probably betray Dunne on election day, and the result seems to indicate that they have done so. So far as I can see Leffler, "Hinky Dink" (Convict) Brennan, "Bathhouse John," and other distinguished Democratic statesmen of that type have been convinced for some mysterious reason that the traction ordinances are good things, for themselves, at least, if not for the City of Chicago.

"It seems that Mayor Dunne made a very fine showing in the Republican wards and in the Independent wards, but lost in the Democratic wards, or in those wards where the Democratic machine leaders hold full control.

"It is another indication of the fact that the Democratic Party in many localities has neither honest principles nor honest leaders, and that the honest citizens who are enrolled in the Democratic ranks in the hope of promoting the principles of Jefferson should realize that they can best achieve their object by joining the Independence League."

"PADDY THE PIG" ARRESTED.

Septuagenarian from Up-State Says He Was Swindled at Roulette.

Patrick O'Brien, better known as "Paddy the Pig," who keeps a saloon at 642 Sixth Avenue, was locked up in Police Headquarters late last night on a charge of grand larceny made by William F. Sinnell of Suffern, N. Y. Sinnell, who is 70 years old, says that early in March he and a friend went to O'Brien's saloon and played roulette, each putting up a check for $100. After a while he looked at the wheel and remarked: "Why, I wouldn't play with that wheel. It is fixed. Give me back my check for $100."

Sinnell says that O'Brien handed him a piece of paper which he thought was the check, and, without looking at it, he tore it up and went out. A few days ago he had returned from his bank the check for $100, indorsed "Herman F. Moss." He then notified the police.

"I don't mind the money," said Sinnell last night, "but I hate to have such a game played on me."

IT'S EASY TO LIVE A SIMPLE LIFE HERE

Miss Fielde Says New York Is a Good Place in Which to Practice.

THROW AWAY THE TRASH

Many Homes Full of Stuff That Only Collects Dust, She Tells Political Leaguers.

Miss Adele M. Fielde talked to a large gathering of women and a few men at the League for Political Education yesterday morning on the practicability of living the simple life.

"She is so practical," said one of the women listeners at the close of the address. Several women took notes, so many houses in the city may be depleted of unnecessary adjuncts in the Spring cleaning as a preparation for simple living. Getting rid of unnecessary belongings was what the speaker advised for a beginning.

"What is the simple life?" queried Miss Fielde in opening. "Can it be lived in New York, and is it worth living anywhere? Simple life is the undistracted following of one main purpose, and it is not necessarily inexpensive. A vocation is necessary, though it need not be followed for any great remuneration. When we cease to work, life becomes expensive, because we must be amused. The mind requires its pabulum as well as the stomach. Work simplifies life, especially when done from choice. Women suffer most in that way because their lives are so petty, while men have the great things of the world to do.

"To begin on the simple life, I should suggest in the first place elimination. Go over your dwellings and remove everything that is not going to be used the coming year. I could mention hundreds of houses in this city crowded from garret to cellar with things that only collect dust that will not be used for fourteen years, that are not beautiful and only add to the labor in keeping things as they should be in the home—spotlessly clean.

"Can't we free ourselves from the desire to retain everything we ever possessed; things that have no beauty, no utility? I know two spinsters, the last of their race, who live in houses filled with heirlooms, which it requires the greater part of their time to take care of. I said to one of them: 'Why do you not give some of these things to museums? Take some of that old English pewter that is not made now. You have enough to give to five different museums. There it would be priceless, many people would have the benefit of it, it would be in a fireproof building, which your home is not. You would know that it is placed as you would like it to be while you are still alive, and you would free yourself for reading, travel, and entertaining friends."

"It would be more simple if we should stop giving presents at stated intervals. We wish to make presents to our friends, but when it is necessary to do so at a certain time, when we may be busy or ill, it becomes a burden. Let us abandon the practice. It would be better for the giver and better for the receiver. I would do the same with wedding presents. In olden times when a young couple were married they needed many things for the household which their friends gave them, but that time is passed now.

"In giving we should at least allow people to select their own presents. I know of one, charming young woman who received from an aunt a large and costly vase as a wedding present. It did not suit the color scheme of any of her rooms and it did not suit her taste in any way. Finally, having borne it as long as she could, she said one day to the maid: 'Mary, if that vase should be broken even a little I would give it away.' The maid reported in a few days that the vase had been broken, and it was duly disposed of. Have we any right to put people to subterfuges of that kind?

"We can simplify our houses and their furnishings. Have moldings and door casings made with no place for dust, and select furniture with the same end in view. A woman I know who has been building a house has had both stone and wood work made so that it will not hold dust, and it is a great saving of time and effort.

"I know a young woman with a small but sure income who lived in an apartment downtown on the east side, which she has furnished simply and prettily. She finds her social circle in the neighborhood in which she lives and is quite happy. But I do not say that it is necessary to go down on the east side to live the simple life. There are others living in Paris and making Paris simple.

"'Spontaneity and simplicity' are the two wings on which the soul rises,' says an Oriental writer. I would have all our actions as far as possible spontaneous. A woman I have in mind, whose life had been one of good deeds, had mortgaged her time so far ahead—engagements, some for two years in advance—that in looking forward over this long list of things that must be done at a certain time and place, her nervous system broke down entirely. Make even social engagements for as short a period in advance as possible.

"There is no better place in which to live the simple life than New York. Here you can get any fabric for your gown that you wish without effort—it is the same with furniture and a habitation—and one can always walk unhindered and unobserved in a crowd."

SPRING IN CITY HALL PARK.

The Old Elm Tree Is Budding and a Bird War Begins in Its Branches.

There is a gnarled old elm in City Hall Park, between the City Hall and the Court House. So old is it that it must have looked upon the building of the City Hall itself. It is marked by the Spring sun and by the many people who pass to and from their work, for because of the two buildings that stand north and south of the trees in this spot it is the first to feel the warm rays of Spring.

Yesterday there appeared on the tree the first dainty yellow leaves. Many of the folk who go to and fro stopped and looked at the old tree. In its branches a bird rested with a blue crest and yellow wings. He had been there only a few minutes when a cloud of the little vagrants of the New York streets—the sparrows—had surrounded him and were chirping their war song.

He disappeared and the onlookers went their ways with smiles on their faces. Spring had come.

BARS JOHN E. ROOSEVELT.

Court Orders That He Must Not Visit His Sister-in-Law, but His Wife May.

Supreme Court Justice Davis decided yesterday that Mrs. Nannie Roosevelt, wife of John E. Roosevelt, should be permitted to visit her sister, Mrs. Constant Andrews, three times a week. Mrs. Andrews is a patient in a Westchester sanitarium.

Under another order, Mrs. Roosevelt was permitted to see her sister only twice a week. Justice Davis orders that Mrs. Andrews's abode shall not be changed except by order of the court, and that Mr. Roosevelt shall not be present at any of the interviews between the sisters.

Mrs. Andrews's estate is valued at $1,600,000, and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt are the committee of her estate. There is considerable litigation between the Andrews and Roosevelt families.

Mr. Andrews is also named as a co-respondent in a suit for divorce instituted by Frank Klemme against Anna M. Klemme, at one time housekeeper for Andrews.

TWO PRACTICAL MEN.

The Mulligan letters were arguable. Mr. BLAINE'S impassioned speech of denial in the House sufficed for his admirers, while impartial or even adverse judges were impressed by the strength of the exculpatory statements prepared with greater deliberation and minuter care in his campaign year. Mr. BLAINE'S latest biographer reviews the evidence and acquits him.

Upon the Harriman correspondence there can be no argument, since the recital of Mr. HARRIMAN is confirmed by the admissions of Mr. ROOSEVELT, and upon the darkest episodes of the shocking story the two are in perfect accord. The President did invite the powerful railroad chieftain to the White House in 1904, and the immediate consequence of that visit was the raising of $200,000 by Mr. HARRIMAN, himself contributing $50,000. The money was paid to the Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, the inference being that it was used to pay the National Committee's debt to the New York State Committee, which was in desperate straits, and Mr. ROOSEVELT'S success in New York was thought to be dependent upon the triumph of the State ticket. Mr. ROOSEVELT'S denial that he asked Mr. HARRIMAN "to raise a dollar for the Presidential campaign of 1904" is, in view of the grave nature of the charge, so evasive and trivial an answer that coming from a less distinguished source it would be called a quibble. Neither for present exegesis nor for future review does this correspondence offer any basis or any hope of exculpation. The facts are proved by the agreed-upon statement.

"Now, my dear Sir, you and I are practical men," wrote the President to Mr. HARRIMAN on Oct. 14, 1904. The nature of the transaction in which these two practical men were engaged in the White House conference "about Oct. 20" is now made plain. Practical men know what they want. Mr. ROOSEVELT wanted power, as a means of obtaining it he wanted to be elected President, and to make his election more certain he wanted Mr. HARRIMAN to raise campaign money and to use his powerful influence to avert the existing dangers in the "New York political situation." Mr. HARRIMAN wanted protection in his railroad business, protection from Federal assault, just as the manufacturing interests by precisely that method have for a long period of time obtained protection against imports of foreign goods. Mr. ROOSEVELT was "frying the fat" out of Mr. HARRIMAN, precisely as Senator PLUMB advised that the campaign chest of a former year be replenished by "frying the fat" out of the beneficiaries of the Republican tariff.

Mr. ROOSEVELT got what he wanted, HARRIMAN'S money, HARRIMAN'S influence, and the election. The tariff-blessed contributors of "fat" used to get what they wanted. Mr. HARRIMAN did not get what he wanted. He got instead such blows and mishandling, such menaces of prosecution, and suffered so grievously through the Administration's furious assaults upon the railroad corporations that when the innocent SHERMAN solicited him for a contribution in the Congressional and Hughes-Hearst campaign year 1906 his wrath uncontrollably flamed up. He had had enough of pulling chestnuts out of the fire only to be repaid by black ingratitude.

It was a cold-blooded transaction altogether. Mr. HARRIMAN has not to our knowledge set up any maxims of conduct that ring false when tested by these disclosures. But what becomes of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S million professions of high virtue? In 1901 he declared, in his Minneapolis State Fair speech, that "the vast individual and corporate fortunes, the vast combinations of capital which have marked the development of our industrial system, create new conditions and necessitate a change from the old attitude of the State and the Nation toward property." But in 1904 he writes to Mr. HARRIMAN "it has been a real pleasure to see you this year." The campaign year was, indeed, a pleasant year to see HARRIMAN, who is about the most conspicuous of the heads of great combinations of capital, and the possessor of a great private fortune. We must have some of your money this year, my dear Mr. HARRIMAN, to intrench us in a position where we can change the attitude of the Nation toward your railroads and your fortune next year.

That is the essence of the transaction in which Mr. ROOSEVELT engaged with Mr. HARRIMAN. There was not in the whole country a man whom he could with so little propriety invite to the White House for political conference, none from whom the solicitation or the acceptance of a campaign contribution would have been more flagrantly incompatible with the President's avowed policies and intentions.

Mr. ROOSEVELT'S comment upon Mr. HARRIMAN'S angry outburst about buying Legislatures and courts is that it shows "deep-seated corruption." "Don't you think we had better leave honor out of the question?" was the inquiry addressed to Mr. Joseph Surface.

MR. HILL'S FUTURE.

The definite announcement that Mr. HILL'S son has succeeded to the Presidency of the Great Northern Railway leaves no room for incredulity regarding his father's retirement. When Mr. HILL senior "retired" on the last previous occasion the information speedily followed that he would devote himself to the construction of another road from the lakes to the Pacific. Presumably nothing of that sort is now to be expected, since the strategic possibilities have been exhausted, at least to those of less insight than the greatest living master of transportation by land. But it is remembered easily that his latest public expression was devoted to the possibilities of canal transport in the United States. In nothing else has be shown a greater independence of judgment. Other railway men have been jealous of canals as though they considered them "suckers." Mr. HILL regards them as feeders, arguing that a dog which will bring a bone will carry one. The fact is that there is no way of reducing the volume of freight traffic by moving any portion of it in any way. Trade makes trade as truly over railways as in other methods of exchange, and the volume of water-borne freight will grow commensurately with the overland movement.

What the railways have to fear most wholesomely, and what the railways' customers have to hope for most heartily, is that the development of the waterways may check the railways in their rate making. Apart from his views regarding the stimulus of railway traffic by canals, Mr. HILL has so little to fear on the ground of competitive ratemaking that there is no reason to anticipate that he should be faint-hearted in promoting this sort of relief of the railways in their task of finding five billions of dollars to bring their capacity up to the demand, to say nothing of meeting future growth.

That such a mind as Mr. HILL'S should sink into idleness at the maturity of his powers is unthinkable, and it would be hard to imagine a fitter task or one more in the public interest. The shareholders in the Great Northern are not to be too much condoled with upon their loss. Mr. HILL'S son's capacity and training are in good degree the explanation for his father's readiness to take a supporting instead of a commanding position. Those curious in such matters may run over the list of railway magnates almost in vain in search of another just such case.

THE MANTAGNINI LETTERS.

"Mr. ROOSEVELT, who, after all, is a freethinker," according to the late Secretary of the late Papal Nunciature at Paris, has no occasion to regret the publication of the letter so characterizing him. It is so rare a satisfaction for the President to view with complacency the unauthorized publication of a letter concerning him that he is entitled to make the most of it. The publication of the confidential reports of the Papal Nuncio at Paris to the Vatican is a more or less indiscreet performance. But the President is not injured by the indiscretion. On the contrary, the ground he took in discharging "the STORERS" from the Diplomatic Service is strengthened by these disclosures that the Vatican, with which France had broken off all diplomatic relations, was nevertheless trying to influence the appointment of the American Ambassador to the French Republic. The remark imputed to the President that it was impossible at the time to name an Ambassador to Paris who was a Catholic was the clear dictate of prudence and good sense, while of course the appointment of a Catholic Ambassador to Austria, where there is no burning religious question, was quite unobjectionable. It is worth noting that in other parts of the correspondence the German Emperor is said to have declared that a Catholic Ambassador from Great Britain to Germany would not be acceptable. And for this also we may suppose him to have had good reasons, even though he had been in the habit of naming Catholics as German Ambassadors to London.

The general question of the propriety of the seizure of the papers of the Nunciature at the time of the expulsion of the Secretary has been hotly debated within these last few days in the Chamber of Deputies, and has been hotly defended by the Premier. It is to be borne in mind again that diplomatic relations had been broken off by, the action of the Vatican, that the Vatican made no secret of its opposition to the existing Government of France, and that the Secretary left in charge of the Nunciature, if not exactly an alien enemy, was an emissary of a foreign power, suspected, and with much show of reason, of assuming to direct French citizens in their political conduct. When the rupture became even more complete than before, by the rejection by the Vatican of the Separation act and of the modus vivendi offered by the republic, the expulsion of the Secretary and the seizure of the documents in the Nunciature seem to have a fair color of justification. The seizure, be it noted, not the publication. For the publication the French Government disclaims all responsibility.

INCOMES AND VALUES.

Another leading railway yesterday increased its dividend to a 6 per cent. rate, and promptly joined the numerous ranks of those which are rated worth less at the higher rate than at the lower. The day's movement downward may be disregarded as an example of the familiar fact that the well-informed always have a supply of stock to sell upon good news, but it is necessary to take a more serious view of the other fact that in a relieved and still relaxing money market standard 6 per cent. stocks are selling below par. There are even good industrials paying 7 per cent. below par. These are the facts regarding prime of securities in each class. New York Central, which yielded only a small fraction above 3 per cent. as a 5 per cent. stock, sold down upon the increase to 6 per cent., so that it now yields nearly 5 per cent. As a 6 per cent. stock Pennsylvania yielded something above 4 per cent. last year, but as a 7 per cent. stock it now yields approaching 6 per cent. The leading industrials which have changed their rates afford less striking examples, but the stability of dividends under improved conditions of business of course creates a wider margin of insurance of continuance of payment. National Lead affords one example. It has doubled its dividend, yet is actually selling 25 points lower. There are instances of even more extreme declines for exceptional reasons, as in the case of Consolidated Gas, but the classic instance is Steel preferred, which has lost half as much as Lead, and struggles in vain to stay above par.

Ordinarily these facts would indicate a doubt regarding the stability of both trade and dividends. Indeed, there is no certainty that such is not the indication now. But the trouble is that those who hold this view have been contradicted for months and even years. They have been justified by the sole fact that prices are down, and as yet are confronted by the fact that all the customary reasons why prices should fall have been falsified. So notorious is this contrast between booming trade and shrinking security values that some are moved to infer divorcement between Wall Street and the country at large, while some, but very few, and without apparent reason, even resort to questioning the asserted prosperity.

This phenomenon is not local. During the recent decline London telegrams reported a loss of principal values of £200,000,000, or about half what some reckoned the loss here. France had suffered previously. L'Economiste Européen reckoning in 1906 a loss of 2,101,800,000 francs upon a face capitalization of 56,669,500,000 francs. The figures for Germany are not available, but they are similar, while Russia's are worse. The universal factor is the dearness of money, and the world-wide question is how and when it will end. The general expectation is that it will end by declining trade and reduced demand for credit, but there is an alternative that, whether or not trade declines, prices may advance through the abundance of gold. In this view what we are experiencing is not a decline of stocks, but a revaluation of the dollar, pound, mark, and franc. There is a large prize to those guessing the answer, which this is not an attempt to indicate, beyond hazarding that our position is less difficult than others.

We actually have the gold other nations lack, and our problem is rather to apply the gold we possess than to get more. Moreover, our command of the gold in other nations' possession is demonstrated, and in a contest we could command what we require. And there is this word of comfort to investors who have seen their bonds and shares shrink away in nominal worth without parting with them—if they bought them for income they are getting it, and are as likely to get it as at any previous time. It is true that they might have sold out and repurchased the same securities at a lower range, but they could only have done this at some sacrifice of their quality of investors. The true causal relation, the real valuation of capital, is the discounted worth of income. That has not altered, except for the better. If the worth of the income is less because it will procure less goods, that is not a matter of the stock market. It presents an economic problem before which the wisest may hesitate, while only those excessively extended need fear the answer. Any self-supporting industry will survive upon any scale of values, higher or lower, and the progress to a higher plane is not of the painful sort characteristic of a decline.

THE RUSSIAN BUDGET.

Nothing more credible or more promising for the peaceful modernization and the peaceful progress of Russia has happened than the debate on the budget. It is such a discussion as we should expect in a country fully accustomed to parliamentary institutions and constitutional government. The appeal of the Minister of Finance to the Duma to consider the questions he raised from a national and not from a partisan point of view seems to have met with a cordial response.

This is the more remarkable and the more hopeful because in our own "Anglo-Saxon" political history, at least, the evolution of individual liberty and political progress has attended the increasing share of the people in the levy and the disposition of the taxes. The power of the purse has been the lever by which free institutions have been raised. And there is good hope in the frank appeal which M. KOVOVSOFF has made to the representatives of the Russian people. He seems at least to lay his cards on the table, explaining his resources and his liabilities, and calling for the assistance of the people in the work of carrying on the Government. If he is met in the same spirit then, as in English history, the redress of popular grievances may well become the condition of the grant of supplies. The redress of the most crying grievances, "administrative punishments" perhaps excepted, has already been proposed and promised in detail by M. STOLYPIN, and in such a form that the Government can be held to them. If the Duma limits itself to practical demands, there seems to be no reason why they should not be granted. And upon the whole the Duma has shown a reasonable and considerate temper.

One very noteworthy omission appears from the dispatches. There is no mention of appropriations for the army or the navy. Possibly these are reserved. But it is to be hoped that, in the present avowed poverty of Russia, the demands of the Government will be limited to mere maintenance, and that no immediate attempt will be made to replace the fleet destroyed or captured by Japan. In that case Russia is more urgently interested than any other power to bring before the Peace Conference, which owes its existence to the initiative of the Czar, the question of disarmament, which is to say of a proportional reduction in military expenses. Sir HENRY CAMPBELL BANNERMAN'S unofficial declaration in favor of the process is not, it seems, taken very seriously, especially since there is no chance that Great Britain will in any event consent to reduce her navy below the "two-power standard." The opinion of Continental Europe seems to be that the subject may perhaps at most come up for "unofficial" discussion. Of course that would be better than nothing. But the interest of Russia, which is sure to be a very strong factor in the proceedings of the conference, seem to urge her to bring forward proposals framed in a really serious spirit.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Telegraphy an Exception.

In promptly offering a detailed explanation of the advance in its rates made this week, the Western Union Telegraph Company has shown commendable appreciation of the public's newly asserted right to be well informed as to the operations and policies of corporations of its sort. We think, however, that the explanation is in several ways surprising, and that it will be held to be, on the whole, unsatisfactory.

For people have supposed, and have often been told by many high authorities to suppose, that knowledge and the application of knowledge were advancing more rapidly in the domain of electricity than anywhere else in the industrial world, and it therefore causes a very distinct shock to learn from this statement that "modern improvements" have done almost nothing for telegraphy; that "90 per cent. of the messages transmitted now are transmitted in the same old way that was in operation in the days of MORSE." Surprising, too, is it to hear that it takes the operators of to-day as long to send seventeen ten-word messages as it took those of former years to send twenty-five. That is almost as remarkable as it was to learn that iron wire now rusts out much faster than it used to do.

That the vastly increased demand for the services of messenger boys has made them hard to get and therefore higher priced, and that the cost of telegraph poles has advanced, is comprehensible enough, and so are some other items in the long list presented, but the impression one gets after going over them all is that the telegraph business must be different from other business if, with a steady increase of public patronage, it can keep up its profits only by increasing the tolls demanded from its patrons. The almost inevitable tendency, in such circumstances, is to suspect that possible improvements in methods have not been made—that an undue conservatism has prevented changes in management that would have saved the company from becoming an exception almost unique in the business world.

We are particularly troubled by the charge of relative inefficiency against the modern telegraph operators. To what is it due? Have the men themselves or their skill deteriorated, or have the conditions of their service so changed as no longer to attract men of the same quality as of old?

Another Sex Problem.

Our attention has been called—with a shade of possibly justified reproach in the calling—to the fact that in commenting yesterday on the sale by a stenographer to a newspaper of one of Mr. HARRIMAN'S private letters, we neglected to note the gender of the treacherous employé. The omission was quite unintentional, and we are not at all sure that it was important.

In other words, we would hesitate long before asserting that Mr. HARRIMAN would not have had what we must assume was his highly unpleasant experience if he had hired a woman instead of a man to "take" his letters. We would, indeed, refuse to do it, because we do not know with any certainty, and do not have any definite reason for believing that in these confidential positions women, as women, are more trustworthy than men, as men. That the women are sufficiently trustworthy for such employment needs no saying, for thousands of them get and retain such places in all parts of the country, and it must be that the service they render is at least reasonably satisfactory, else would not their number be, as it is, constantly increasing. But because women make good private secretaries, to whom can safely be intrusted business and other secrets of the greatest moment, is not proof that men are not equally efficient and equally loyal and honest.

In this as in so many other occupations that bring men and women into industrial rivalry it is probably true that in the lower ranks and well up into the higher the qualifications of the women surpass those of the men, and that, therefore, the employer for whom a private secretary is not an assistant of first importance and highest responsibility will probably be better served if he chooses a woman. But it is also probably true that the very best private secretaries and stenographers are all men, and, of course, "best" includes fidelity—the power to resist the very last and greatest of temptations. Perhaps in the last analysis this figures out into the rule that, as a rule, more confidence can be placed in a woman secretary than in a man secretary.

And it may be pertinent to add that we heard, the other day, of a man who preferred to have a woman secretary for the very curious reason that she did her work well but mechanically, and neither understood what she was doing nor remembered it after it had been done. So, in his opinion, she had no temptations to talk to others about her work, while a man would be apt to see in the information intrusted to him an interesting topic of conversation and sometimes a means of advancing his own interests as against those of his employer. There may be a little something in this theory, but we fear it will not be received very graciously by those who criticised our failure to state that Mr. HARRIMAN'S unfaithful secretary was a man. And, of course, in hundreds and hundreds of cases, both of men and of women, the theory does not apply.

Of the Same Opinion Still.

It is evident that our elaborate arguments have failed to convince Mr. L. J. CALLANAN that canned foods should bear the date of manufacture. That is particularly unfortunate, since those made by him in reply to ours have left us quite unconvinced, and the prospects are that the only course is for us to agree to disagree—which is always unsatisfactory when, as in this case, one's antagonist is a man for whom one has a high regard and with whom one is accustomed to agree.

But we can't—we simply can't admit that canned meats are either good to eat many years after they were put up or else they were never edible and the whole canning business should be abandoned. There is absolutely no relation, that we can see, at least, between our correspondent's premise and his conclusion, and if he would get them into syllogistic form he would see what was the matter at once. And we are sure that he is inaccurate in denying that the deterioration of canned foods from perfect, or near-perfect, healthfulness, through the unwholesome to the deadly poisonous, is often a long, slow process. The dealers in photographic plates, the antitoxins, and not a few other wares find it practicable—because of admitted necessity—to date the wares they sell, and we do not believe that the dealers in preserved foods, if they followed the same custom, would be half as much injured or annoyed as they fear they would be.

As for Mr. CALLANAN'S invitation to a luncheon, of which the first course is to be fourteen-year-old soup, and the others of comestibles almost as ancient, we fear that a previous engagement will prevent acceptance. It certainly will if we can arrange one in time, and we think we can.

RAILROAD INVESTMENTS.

Merely to Get Back What You Put In Is Not Enough.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial in to-day's issue, entitled, "Not Reassuring," is right to the point.

No man in possession of his senses is going to invest money in that most risky of all legitimate undertakings, a railroad enterprise, simply for the purpose of getting back what he puts in. He can do that by staying out. Yet there are thousands of obtuse individuals, taking their cue from President Roosevelt, who have got that notion.

It is no more "stock watering" to capitalize a well-earned prestige than it is to put a prestige value on the land which owes its prestige to the railroad, which has made such prestige possible.

A successful railroad has to be well managed, and has an immense creative value. How much creative value has an inert mass of land, which, by reason of the railroad service, often receives a prestige value increase of from 400 to 500 per cent., and in many cases a great deal more?

There has got to be one of two things done. Either the Government has got to construct any additions to the present railroad systems or a decent and honest consideration has got to be shown to the private capital which takes the risk of creating them. Do away with the inane twaddle about limiting corporations to the "cash actually paid in." Capitalists invest in railroads for the purpose of making money, and have a perfectly legitimate right to do so. It is not their purpose simply to get back what they put in while running the risk of not even doing that. This may be news to minds of certain calibre, but it is a fact nevertheless.

Let any fair-minded person stop and calculate how much the land of this country, with its mines, timber, products, city and town sites, would be worth if the railroads were to stop operating. When this is approximated an idea can be obtained as to how much the prestige value of land and its contents and appurtenances is owing to the creative value of railroads. Is this prestige water? If not, are not the creative railroad enterprises fairly entitled to a decent proportionate share for themselves?

Oculists and Opticians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As I have been a regular subscriber to your Saturday edition for some years and quite frequently read other issues, and am an optician of twenty-five years' experience enjoying the confidence of a large number of Binghamton's leading citizens, I feel it to be a duty to both you and myself to take exception to your scathing denunciation of even the best of opticians in your recent editorial on "Eyesight and the Schools."

There are many opticians in the State of New York who are acknowledged to be more skillful in optics than oculists who profess ability in a department of science which is in nowise related to medicine. It might be news to you to learn that even so-called oculists are not required to intelligently qualify in optics and that they are therefore at best only amateurs in optical science. At present both oculists and opticians gain practically all their theoretical knowledge in optics from books on Physics, which in the optician's case is further supplemented by his practical experience with the applied science, of which oculists have little conception.

I fear your conclusion has been reached too hastily from an experience with some optician, not one of the "best of them," and that a knowledge of the advance made in optical science by the leading opticians of the country in the past fifteen years would give you a more enlightened view of the situation.

E. R. MASON.

Binghamton, N. Y., April 2, 1907.

"Senator Roosevelt."

Senator Tillman in Collier's.

It would be presumptuous in me to advise the people of New York as to what they ought to do or what kind of a man they ought to send to represent them in the Senate. If President Roosevelt, after his retirement from the White House, should be elected Senator, it would be a revelation to him as to what kind of a body the Senate is, and also to the country as to what sort of man he is.

AN IMAGINARY CONVERSATION.

Report of a Conference Between Mr. James S. Shireman and Mr. E. H. Hurryman concerning the Capitalization of a Campaign.

Mr. Shireman—Mr. Hurryman, I need your financial assistance in the conduct of the Congressional and State campaign in New York.

Mr. Hurryman (absently)—Ah, that dollar fund. I'll send you my check for one dollar. I'll send a letter with it you may publish—one like the President's, congratulating you upon the success that bids fair to attend the movement.

Mr. S.—Really, Mr. Hurryman, this is a serious matter. The President has assured me that you will give us substantial backing. Of course, we couldn't force through a nomination for Governor agreeable to Mr. Bedell—not this year. It's all we can do to save the organization.

Mr. H. (gruffly)—Don't you understand that under the New York publicity law I can't contribute a cent above $200 without disclosing my name?

Mr. S. (coaxingly)—Ah, but this is not a campaign fund, it is an election fund, you know. Besides, technically, I am not a collector of State contributions. You are delivering the cash to the Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee.

Mr. Hurryman maintains a sullen silence.

Mr. S. (warming to his subject)—Now, my dear Sir, you and I are practical men—(Mr. Hurryman starts violently, but with a strong effort controls himself, as Mr. Shireman proceeds.) As I was saying, we are both practical men. Dollar funds are good advertisements of a campaign, but they don't marshal the blocks of five. If Mr. Hearst is elected this Fall the National edifice of the Republican Party will totter—it would be involved in the wreck of the State machine. Hearst might step into the Presidency in 1908, and he would begin forcing his Government ownership policy upon Congress. We simply must have money to insure the New York State and Congressional elections. Mr. Rosenfelt said you might be willing to contribute $50,000; that at his personal solicitation you were good enough to give that much to Chortleyou in 1904, and you collected $150,000 more in Wall Street. Now, this year, as in 1904, there are between 2,200 and 2,300 election districts in Greater New York, where the expenditure of, say, $50 in each district for campaign purposes, not including the watchers, would take more than $100,000. (Mr. H. clutches his chair.) I tell you, Mr. Hurryman, the railroad and financial interests can't afford to withhold—

Mr. H. (stricken with brainstorm)—!—!—!—! Blankety blank the State, Congress, the party, the whole—— crew of you! Practical-practical! The President and I were "practical men" in 1904, were we not? That's what he said. He invited me down to Washington and asked me for money to buy his ——— election, and I was bunkoed. I helped raise it. I raised $200,000 in four hours. There was an implied promise, an obligation. What did he take my money for? What did he give me for my money? It carried the State, as he said it would. His letters to me —— my letters to him —. Quill, my stenographer has them. They'd show him up. What did I get? Pah! Not even an Ambassadorship for my friend up the river! Where do I stand, I say? Hearst—the Hearst people are crooks—honest crooks—not the sanctimonious kind. When they bargain they deliver the goods. I'll be glad to see Hearst carry the State—I'll help him buy the Presidency! Then when I buy the State Legislature I'll get it, and when I buy Congress I'll get it, and the courts—I'll get the courts, too. My $200,000 in 1904—half of it turned at least 50,000 votes in this city, it made a difference of 100,000 votes in the election! Now the ingrate—rends me. Why, I capitalized his campaign, yes, overcapitalized it. Now he not only withholds the dividends of the election, he's planning to rob me of my rail-roads. And you—you've come from him to bunko me again? You—

But Chairman Shireman had fled for a train for Washington.

$100,000 MAP IN COURT.

Blue Print of Coalfields Exhibited in Suit Against Baltimore & Ohio.

BALTIMORE, April 3.—Clarence W. Watson, President of the Fairmont Coal Company, testifying for the defense in the suit of the Pitcairn Coal Company against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and others, in the action alleging discrimination in the distribution of cars to the independent coal operators, exhibited a map said to have cost $100,000. It was a blue print about twelve feet long by ten feet broad, on which was shown every mine in the West Virginia and Maryland coal regions, together with the large area of coal lands which are as yet undeveloped.

Mr. Watson testified that his company had had to buy 2,000 additional cars to meet the demands of its new dock facilities on the Great Lakes.

ASTOR ESTATE SUES THE CITY.

Action Brought to Recover $880,000 for Bronx Property Damages.

Proceedings have been instituted in the Supreme Court to recover $880,000 for damage to property of the Astor estate in the Bronx. The plaintiff in the action is William Waldorf Astor, and the defendant is the Change of Grade Commission. The city was made a co-defendant yesterday by an order signed by Justice Bischoff.

The Change of Grade Commission was created to ascertain and pay the amount of damages to lands and buildings caused by the changes of grades made in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards.

The Jewish Situation in Roumania.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The political and social condition of the Jews in Roumania, as described in THE NEW YORK TIMES of to-day is put in the most euphemistic manner. To describe the Jews as rackrenters and to attribute to them the characteristics of Irish landlords is very unfair, because you do not make allowance for the circumstances under which Jewish agents become middlemen. Since Benjamin F. Peixotto was American Consul at Bucharest the emancipation of the Jewish subjects of King Charles has proceeded but slowly, and I doubt very much whether the law prohibiting Jews holding title in land has ever been abrogated. If Jews are acting for the "boyars," they are acting as employes and not as "rackrenters."

A JEW.

New York, April 3, 1907.

THE PRESENT CRAZE.

Tell me, doctor, tell me truly.
Tell me plainly, I beseech,
Are my eyeballs all unruly?
Do I stutter in my speech?

Are my facial muscles jerking?
Is my vision but a glare?
Are my ganglia overworking?
Is there wildness in my air?

Is my wording disconnected?
Are my sentiments abstruse?
Are my thumbs at all deflected?
Am I given to abuse?

Am I foolish in my actions?
Is there weakness in my knees?
Am I subject to distractions?
Do I know my A B C's?

Tell me, doctor, tell me quickly,
As the chills go up my back,
Am I just a little sickly
Or a para-no-i-ac?

STUART PAINTINGS FOR ART MUSEUM

Two Valuable Additions Made to the New Picture Gallery.

WORK WAS DONE IN 1794

Portraits of the First Spanish Minister to the United States and His Wife.

In the Metropolitan Museum of Art Monthly Bulletin for April, just issued, announcement is made of numerous valuable acquisitions, including two notable paintings by Gilbert Stuart, the early American portrait painter.

The paintings by Stuart have been purchased by the Museum for its permanent collection of American paintings. The two pictures are portraits of Don Josef Den Jaudenes y Nebot, the first Spanish Minister to the United States, and his wife. Both portraits are three-quarter length, seated. As the inscriptions on the portraits state, Don Josef was born in Valencia in 1764, and was, therefore, 30 years of age when his portrait was painted by Stuart in 1794. The wife of the Spanish Minister was only 16 years of age when her portrait was painted, having been born in New York in 1778. Both canvases bear the signature of the artist, G. Stuart, R. A., and the date Sept. 8, 1794. The Spanish Minister is dressed in a dark-blue coat lined and faced with scarlet, a scarlet waistcoat and breeches, and white stockings.

The portrait of the lady is attractive and the fair sitter is depicted with the high head dress of the period. Her gown is of white and she holds a fan. It is said the portraits were taken to Spain on the recall of the Minister, and that they remained in that country until purchased by a New York art firm. They now return to the city in which they were painted. They hang at present in the room of new accessions, but later will probably be placed in the gallery devoted to American paintings.

"The Corn Husking," by Eastman Johnson, is another American picture recently acquired by the museum.

An important acquisition of sculpture is a group of four examples by Frederic Remington. These have been purchased by the Museum, and include the following groups in bronze: "The Old Dragoons," "The Broncho Buster," "The Mountain Man," and "The Cheyenne," all reflecting life of the West. Another purchase includes a bronze statuette, "Canto della Vita," by Angelo del Nero, an Italian sculptor.

Among the medals recently acquired are one struck in commemoration of the coronation of King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, by Emil Fuchs, the gift of the sculptor, and one struck to commemorate the eightieth anniversary of Archduke Rainer, uncle of the Duke of Austria, and a gift from Edward D. Adams.

An interesting series of reproductions covering the remarkable phase of metal work as developed in Ireland has been added to the collection. Copies of the Ardagh Chalice, the Tara Brooch, and the Cross of Gong in the National Museum of Dublin have been obtained for the Metropolitan's collection. The Chalice is an exquisite example of Celtic decoration. Another interesting piece is St. Patrick's bell of the fifth century. The shrine, a fine example of goldsmith's work, was made to cover and protect the bell.

Among the recent accessions in the Department of Textiles is a collection of fragments of silk and velvet acquired through the Rogers fund.

GERMANY OUR WARM FRIEND.

Ambassador Tower Says the Kindly Feeling Toward Us is Marked.

Charlemagne Tower, United States Ambassador to Germany, arrived yesterday on the North German Lloyd line steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II. from Bremen. He will spend a month in this country.

When the Kaiser was far out to sea the Ambassador received a wireless message notifying him that his wife had entirely recovered. Mr. Tower refused to discuss the tariff issue pending between the United States and Germany on the ground that the commission recently appointed to visit Germany and report on the question had returned to Washington, and that their report was now made to the Government.

In discussing American-German relations the Ambassador said that they were in such an excellent condition that no talking was necessary.

"I have never known a more general and kindly feeling of good will in Germany toward the United States than now," he said. "I am impressed by the pronounced confidence the German people have in the United States, their faith in our economic future and our development, but above all their confidence in our spirit of fair play and determination to deal fairly where American interests touch those of other countries abroad. Germany, the German Government, and the German people trust the people of the United States. Diplomatic negotiations between the two countries is, therefore, free from suspicion and a search for hidden and ulterior motives.

"The conviction that we will always take the high-minded view makes it agreeable to do business in Germany, and ever insures from the German sovereign and Government friendly consideration for any serious proposition coming from this side of the water."

Mr. Tower, in reply to a question, said that from what he had been able to gather Germany believed a discussion of disarmament or limitation of armaments at The Hague was inopportune, as the German Government was convinced that no practical results in that direction could be expected at this time. Indeed, he was inclined to fear that the raising of either question might endanger the important works inscribed in the programme of the conference.

Speaking of the report that the presentation to the Kaiser of Harry Lehr had aroused criticism, the Ambassador said that the story was false, and that Mr. Lehr's presentation had not aroused criticism.

"Mr. Lehr," he said, acted like a gentleman and dressed like one."

At the Captain's dinner on the last night of the voyage Ambassador Tower made a speech in which he spoke of the happy relations between the two countries, and declared that at the present time Germany and the United States were fast friends. He proposed the health of the Kaiser, whereat there was much cheering.

A CATHOLIC CHAPEL CAR.

To Carry the Sacrament to Roman Catholics in the South and West.

CHICAGO, April 3.—The annual meeting of the Catholic Church Extension Society was held here to-day, with Archbishop Mesmer of Milwaukee acting as Chairman. Several well-known prelates of the Catholic Church throughout the country were present. Methods of distribution of aid to co-religionists were discussed.

Announcement was made of the gift to the society by Ambrose Petry of a chapel car, to be used for administering the sacrament to Catholics scattered over the Southern and Western States, where it is difficult for the Church to reach them otherwise.

LORD CHARLES DEPARTS.

Saying Nothing in an Interview Because He's Now on Full Pay.

Lord Charles Beresford, who has been in this country settling up the affairs of his brother, the late Lord Delaval Beresford, before sailing yesterday morning on the White Star Line steamer Teutonic gave a parting interview.

"Pleas say," he said, "that Lord Charles Beresford is now on full pay. If I was on half pay I would tell you everything, but if I talk they will bring in some old grievance of mine against the Government, and that would not be etiquette."

MISS CRIMMINS AN EASTER BRIDE

Mgr. Lavelle of St. Patrick's Unites Her in Marriage to Frederick R. Childs.

LARGE RECEPTION FOLLOWS

Ceremony at the Crimmins Home in Sixty-eighth Street—Other Weddings of Yesterday.

One of the largest home Easter weddings of the week was celebrated yesterday by the marriage of Miss Constance L. Crimmins, a daughter of John D. Crimmins, Sr., to Frederick R. Childs of this city. The wedding took place at 3:30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. Crimmins, 40 East Sixty-eighth Street.

Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle of St. Patrick's Cathedral, assisted by the Rev. Neil N. McKinnon of the Society of Jesus, rector of the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, performed the ceremony. American Beauty roses in profusion formed the floral decorations.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin with a long plain train, but otherwise elaborately trimmed with point lace and a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was lilies of the valley and gardenias, and she wore a string of pearls.

The bridesmaids weer the Misses Mercédes and Evelyn Crimmins, sisters of the bride; Miss Katherine McCann of New York, and Miss Anita Harvey of San Francisco. They were frocked in white chiffon painted with pink roses about the hems and having pale blue ribbon arranged to outline panel effects. Their white hats were trimmed with large pale pink roses and blue ribbons, and each carried an armful of Killarney roses.

The best man was Harris D. Childs, a brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Arthur Sargent of Boston, and Thomas E. Chimmins, E. D. Morgen Rowland, and Duncan Harris of New York.

The wedding ceremony was witnessed only by the immediate members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

ASHMORE-MATTHEWS WEDDING

Young Couple to Spend Honeymoon in Canada—Will Live in New York.

Henry Taber Ashmore, son of Mrs. Townsend Ashmore and grandson of the late Dwight Townsend, and Miss Grace Eulalie Matthews, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Matthews, were married at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, 898 Madison Avenue, by the Rev. N. N. McKinnon, S. J. The ceremony took place in the drawing room, which was decorated with flowers and palms. Relatives and intimate friends only were asked to the ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, who was given in marrisge by her father, wore a white satin princess gown with guimpe and sleeves of rose point lace, her tulle veil was edged with rose point and caught with orange blossoms, and she carried lilea of the valley and white orchids.

Her attendants included Mrs. Lloyd Aspinwall and Mrs. W. Lewis Stevens of Castle Point, matrons of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Ashmore, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Gwenn Matthews, sister of the bride, and Miss Madeion Matthews, a cousin of the bride. All were frocked in pale pink chiffon, embroidered in pink roses, and having Dutch necks and yellow lace "Vs." Their white hats were trimmed with pink roses and ribbons, and they carried bouquets of pink roses.

John Hone Auerbach was Mr. Ashmore's best man, and the ushers were Lloyd Aspinwall, Alfred Ely, Jr., Carlton Bunce, George Matthews, Jr., Frederick Lutz, George M. Kobbe, Howard Pillow, and Reginald Bolter of Montreal.

The honeymoon will be spent in Canada, and afterward the young couple will make their home in New York. Among those invited to the reception were:

HATCH—VIOLETT.

The Couple Met Last Summer While Competing in a Swimming Match.

W. Denison Hatch, Jr., and Miss Corinne Violett met about six months ago at a swimming match participated in by some smart folk of the society Summer colony on the Sound. Mr. Hatch and Miss Violett swam six miles from the Westchester side of the Sound to a point on the Long Island coast.

This six-mile swim was the occasion of the couple's first meeting. Miss Violett's great endurance in the contest was much commented on at the time and excited the admiration of Mr. Hatch.

Mr. Hatch, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Denison Hatch of New Rochelle, and Miss Violett, who is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Atwood Violett, were married yesterday afternoon. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, 50 West Fifty-sixth Street, the Rev. Dr. Tenney of Christ Church, Pelham Manor, officiating. The bride, gowned in a white satin princess robe, with bertha and guimpe of duchess lace, wore a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

She was attended by her young sister, Miss Thelma Violett, who wore a simple white organdy frock and carried Killarney roses. Marvin J. Keogh, Jr., was best man. Relatives only were asked to the ceremony, which was followed by a large reception. Mr. Hatch and his bride will make their home after a honeymoon trip at Davenport Neck, New Rochelle.

MISS CUTLER A BRIDE.

Weds Charles M. Marsh in Home Her Thrice Great-Grandfather Built.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 3.—One of the most interesting events of Morristown society in Easter week was the wedding this afternoon of Miss Genevieve Wilder Cutler, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Willard W. Cutler, to Charles Mercen Marsh of New York City. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Augustus W. Cutler of Cutler Place.

The "Old Homestead," as it is called, was built by the great-great-greatgrandfather of the bride, and was the house in which she was born. It was tastefully decorated with smilax, palms, jonquils, and daffodils. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. Frederick W. Cutler of Yonkers, N. Y., the bride's uncle, and he was assisted by the Rev. Albert Erdman, D. D., pastor of the South Street Presbyterian Church of this city.

The maid of honor was Miss Julia Hinchman Cutler, sister of the bride, and the best man was Frederick Beasley Marsh, brother of the bridegroom. The ribbon boys were Masters Ralph Hinchman of Brooklyn and Ralph Cutler of Morristown. The bride was dressed in white satin, richly trimmed with Point lace, and carried a bouquet of white lilies and wore a necklace of baroque pearls, the gift of the bridegroom. The maid of honor wore white mousseline de Paris and carried daffodils.

Only relatives and a few personal friends were present at the wedding, which was followed immediately by a reception. The bride's table, arranged for eighteen guests, was decorated in white and green. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Marsh will live in New York.

LAST NIGHT'S DANCES.

Mrs. Charles Wall Entertains for Her Granddaughter, Miss Ladew.

Mrs. Charles Wall gave a dance last night in the ballroom of the Hotel St. Regis for her granddaughter, Miss Elise Wall Ladew, a daughter of Mrs. Edward R. Ladew. The event was arranged for about a hundred young people not yet out, and was not a coming-out dance for Miss Ladew, as had been elsewhere announced.

The young people had supper at 11:30 o'clock, which was followed by a cotillion. The cotillion was led by Harvey S. Ladew and his sister, Miss Elise Ladew.

The favors consisted of Easter hats, silver ornaments, and other fancy srticles. Some of the figures danced were uncommon, and one represented the girls as butterflies. The young women wore wings, and the young men endeavored to catch them with nets attached to long sticks. Calcium lights were used for the light effects. Those who received were Mrs. Charles Wall, Mrs. Berry Wall, Mrs. John di Zerega, and Miss Leary.

Mrs. W. H. Parsons of 324 West End Avenue and Mrs. Parker D. Handy of 5?? West Eighty-seventh Street were hostesses of an Easter vacation dance for young people given last night at Delmonico's. The event was given for about 100 young people who are not yet out. Mmes. Parker D. Handy, William H. Parsons, David S. Cowles, William Crittenden Adams, and Louis Stearns received the young people as they entered the ballroom. There was a supper, after which the cotillion was danced. W. H. Parsons, Jr., and Edwin B. Cowles led the cotillion.

GIVE HONOR DAY LUNCHEON.

United Daughters of 1812 Entertain at Delmonico's.

The National Society of United Daughters of 1812 gave their honor day luncheon yesterday at Delmonico's. Edwin Markham was the principal spenker of the occasion, and an entertainment was given by the following: Mrs. N. P. Bosworth, reader; Miss Snelling, contralto; Miss Jennie Hebbard, soprano, and Miss Clara Farrington, violinist. Among those present were:

Mrs. J. Alexander Brown, Mrs. Charles Henry Gallagher, Mrs. William J. Taylor, Mrs. James H. Ross, Mrs. Rowley, Mrs. E. B. Hinsdale, Mrs. J. A. Baker, Miss M. Louise Edge, Miss Sarah Colburn, Mrs. J. A. Brown, Mrs. I. Sparks Kress, Mrs. Edward B. Williams, Mrs. Elliot B. Whiting, Mrs. Francis M. Rice, Mrs. K. A. Martin, Mrs. Washington L. Mann, Mrs. J. Anthony Wilkins, Mrs. George A. Ludin, Mrs. D. B. Harrison, and Mrs. George E. Sterry, Jr.

Miss Richards will give her final talk on "Current Events" for the Daughters of 1812, State of New York, to-day at Delmonico's instead of to-morrow, as originally planned. The society, of which Mrs. William Gerry Slade is President, has been unable to notify each member personally of the change of schedule. This series has netted about $500 for the pension fund for the benefit of the "real daughters" of those who fought in the war of 1812.

400 SINGERS COMING.

Famous Vienna Choral Society to Make a Tour of the United States.

The Vienna Male Choral Society will give two concerts in Carnegie Hall on May 7 and 9. It was announced yesterday. This body of singers was organized in 1843, and is one of the most famous organizations of its kind in Europe. Schumann, Meyerbeer, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Wagner, Bruckner, Johann Strnuss, and other composers dedicated works to it.

The chorus numbers 380 voices, and 180 of the singing members will make the American tour. The whole party, however, will number 400, including about twenty women singers. They will come on a chartered steamer via Genoa, Gibraltar, and Madeira, and their American hosts will be the German Liederkranz of New York. They will go to Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Buffalo, and Milwaukee.

The members of the choir are of the highest business and social standing in Vienna; among them are Government officials, artists, professors, financiers, lawyers, and merchants. The President of the society is the largest hat manufacturer in Europe.

TEACHERS' PLAY BARRED.

It Lacked Dignity and the Dean Forced Another Selection.

The dramatically inclined students of the Teachers College decided recently that since their neighbors over nt Barnard seemed to be getting so much fun out of class plays, minstrel shows, and Greek games, it would be a good thing for them to give a play. In due time a play was selected and it came to the hands of Dean Russell, but has never since come to light. It was not sufficiently dignified or serious, she said.

The committee got together again and this time obtained permission to produce "David Garrick" and "Our Aunt from California," which will be given to-night in the Horace Mann Auditorium.

Mansfield Will Recover.

Dr. Floyd M. Crandall, who has been attending Richard Mansfield at his home, 316 Riverside Drive, said yesterday that the condition of the actor had much improved, and that if his progress continues as favorable as in the last two days Mr. Mansfield will be able to make the trip abroad planned before his illness. Mr. Mansfield expects to sail for England on May 4.

To Give "Aida" for Garibaldi Fund.

A special performance of Verdi's "Aida" will be given at the Manhattan Opera House next Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Garibaldi Memorial Fund, under the auspices of the Italian Consulate and the Italian colony of New York.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The repertoire for Novelli's fourth and final week at the Lyric, beginning on next Monday, is: Monday, "Othello"; Tuesday, "The Basket of Papa Marun," by Cormon and Grange; Wednesday, "King Lear"; Thursday, "Oedipus Rex"; Friday, "Shylock"; Saturday afternoon, "Papa Lebonnard"; Saturday night, "The Taming of the Shrew."

The two-hundredth performance of "The Three of Us" will take place to-night at the Madison Square Theatre, with Carlotta Nillson in the leading role. At the close of the New York engagement the production will be taken to Chicago for a Summer run.

The two-hundredth performance of "Wine, Women, and Song" will be given at the Circle Theatre to-night, and souvenirs will be distributed.

Ann Warrington, recently with Henrietta Crosman at the Bijou, has been engaged for the production of "Anna Karenina" by the Shuberis in Philadelphia on April 15. Virginia Harned is to play the title role.

Frank Connor has been engaged to play the role of Mr. Bob in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" when Liebler & Co. produce the play in London.

"The Girl in White," James K. Hackett's latest production, will open at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, on April 8.

Robert Dempster in "That Affair at Huntley's" will be one of the features at the Actors' Society benefit at the Hudson Theatre on the afternoon of April 9.

Mrs. F. W. Upham Critically Ill.

Mrs. Francis W. Upham is critically ill of double pneumonia at her residence, 247 Fifth Avenue. She is the widow of Dr. Upham, the well-known Biblical authority. Mrs. Upham has been known for many years for her interest in philanthropic work, and with Gen. O. O. Howard has been interested in raising an endowment fund for Lincoln Memorial University in the Cumberland Mountains.

CONDUCTS ORATORIO IN A MONK'S GARB

Chorus Joins Audience in Applauding Father Hartmann's "St. Peter."

A WREATH FOR COMPOSER

The Sincerity of His Efforts in the Work Inspiring, but the Piece Not Truly Great.

Father Hartmann's oratorio "St. Peter" was given in Carnegie Hall last night for the first time in New York before a small but enthusiastic audience. The father-composer directed his own work. He wore the garb of the Franciscan brotherhood.

Father Hartmann, whose full name is P. Hartmann von an der Lan-Hochbrunn, entered the Franciscan order at Salzburg in 1879, and there he studied the organ, harmony, and composition with Peter Singer. In 1893 he was called to Jerusalem, where he acted as organist and choir director of the Church of the Holy Savious. Later he went to Rome, and in 1906 came to America, where he has been since last Fall.

"St. Peter" is the first of four oratorios of which he is the composer, and its date is 1899. The others are "St. Francis," "The Last Supper," and "The Death of Our Lord."

Cardinal Parrocchi, it is said, suggested to Father Hartmann in April, 1899, that he write an oratorio for the jubilee celebration to be held in Rome and throughout the Catholic world in 1900. The friar consented, and chose as a subject the foundation of the Church and the giving of the keys to St. Peter. Cardinal Parrocchi compiled the Latin text from the Bible and from liturgical works.

The oratorio is divided into three parts: Part I, "The Calling of Peter"; Part II, "The Miraculous Draught of Fishes"; Part III, "St. Peter's Confession" and "Christ's Promise."

Besides the chorus, organ, and full orchestra, the work demands the following solo parts: Christ, (baritone,) St. Peter, (bass,) St. John the Baptist, (tenor,) St. Andrew, (tenor,) two disciples, (tenor and bass,) Narrator, (soprano). The part allotted to Christ is always accompanied by the organ, and the singer is concealed.

Most of the work is choral in character. The solo parts in most instances are short and of little importance. There is scarcely any sustained work for any of the solo voices. The most graceful of these is that allotted to Christ, which, withal, is rather monotonous in character, as it is always accompanied by the organ.

Polyphony à la Gounod, instead of in the Bach manner, is employed, and there is never a lack of harmony. The work is pleasing, and does not offend the ear, but it does not ascend to true greatness. Several of the chorus parts particularly the "Confiteantur Domino" and the "Posuit Flumina," which end the first part of the oratorio, are very effective, and under the Friar's direction proved almost inspiring. The prelude is a piece of beautiful writing.

Father Hartman in his friar's garb presented a novel picture, but he was so sincere in his conducting that even the singers were moved, and after many of the choruses not only the audience but all the people on the stage applauded. After the first part there was a wreath for the composer.

The soloists were Marlesa Lange-Verena, soprano; Dan Beddoe, tenor; Albert Jampolski, baritono, and H. H. Barnhart, bass.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra, and Franklin Palmer at the organ, furnished the accompaniments, and the chorus was large and earnest.

LAST HONORS TO MUSICIAN.

Philharmonic Orchestra Plays "Eroica" In Memory of Its 'Cellist.

An unusual tribute was paid at a memorial service yesterday at Carnegie Hall to a musician by the members of the Philharmonic Orchestra, who played the funeral march from Beethoven's Third Symphony, "Eroica," in honor of Frederick Bergner, the 'cellist who died on Sunday night.

"Der Alte Bergner," as he was affectionately called, had served the society longer and more faithfully, in many ways, than any one associated with the organization in its sixty-four years of existence.

Bergner was born in Germany on Feb. 1, 1827. His early musical education was obtained in the fatherland. He came to America in 1847, and in 1853 joined the Philharmonic Society. In addition to his work with this orchestra he was well known as a teacher of the 'cello. He was a member of the famous Thomas-Mason Quartet, of which William Mason, Theodore Thomas, George Matzke, and Joseph Mosenthal were fine members.

He frequently played as a soloist at the Philharmonic concerts and on other occasions.

'MARTHA' DELIGHTFULLY SUNG

Charming Performance of Flotow's Opera Given at the Manhattan.

An entirely delightful performance of Flotow's "Martha" charmed a large audience at the Manhattan Opera House last night. Except Marguerite nothing in which Mme. Donalda has appeared in New York becomes her so well as the part of Lady Henrietta. To it she brings spontaneity and enthusiasm, a charming presence, and a sweet and attractive voice. Mme. de Cisneros, as Nancy, shared deservedly with Mme. Donalda the honor of the evening so far as the feminine portion of the cast was concerned. Both vocally and dramatically she gave a finished and pleasing performance. Mr. Bonci was the Lionel. Although early in the evening his voice seemed thin and ineffective, he later warmed to his work and in the third act carried away the audience so completely that Mr. Tanara, who conducted, had no choice but to allow a repetition of the big aria, which insistent demands had failed to secure for "The Last Rose of Summer." As Plunkett Mr. Arimondi was irresistible, and Mr. Gianoli-Galletti made an excellent Sir Tristan. There were times when the orchestra got away from Mr. Tanara's control and overpowered the singers, but on the whole both orchestra and chorus did efficient work.

Jessie Shay Gives a Recital.

Jessie Shay, an American pianist, gave a recital in Mendelssohn Hall last night. Miss Shay commenced her programme with Beethoven's "Variations on a Russian Theme." In later numbers she acquitted herself with more credit. She played among other things two of her own compositions, an "Arabesque Mignonne" and a "Musical Moment."

According to tha programme at Weber's last night Amelia Bingham and her own company appeared in a "new comedy by Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland and Beulah Marie Dix." What the audience really saw was a howling farce. First-night audiences are proverbially patient. But if the actors are wise they will hereafter appear behind a net.

"The Lilac Room" is supposed to be haunted by a ghost. But no self-respecting ghost would so far forget himself as to make that place a habitation. It would be essier to describe what did not happen in "The Lilac Room" than to tell what did. And yet the one thing that was supposed to happen never happened.

The audience waited patiently and longingly for the moment when the villainous villain and his cockney accomplice would make their appearance from behind the door where they had secrcted the counterfeiting plates. And Miss Bingham, propped up in bed, with all the lights turned on, also waited. But nobody came except the maid with the coals, tha butler with the hot water, and the beautiful young sister with a secret sorrow gnawing at her heart.

There was a trained candle in this act that gave the most enlightening performance in the piece. Alone and unaided it flooded the great chamber with radiance, and when it was removed, as frequently occurred, the room was plunged in almost total dnrkness. Even the electric lights, which were turned on full tilt, could not penetrate the gloom that resulted from the candle's absence.

In the second act, which, according to the programme, took place in the library "the next morning," the heroine, one of those dashing American girls, who began with a negro dialect and continued in a language which in some quarters is regarded as English, held up the villain at the point of a toy pistol filled with cologne and made him give up "those letters." Then, for revenge, the villain touched the button and the room was shrouded in darkness.

People had been going in and out of the room at their own sweet pleasure up to this point, but it now developed that Wyngate Priory, in addition to its trained candles and lamps, had trained door locks as well. For when the hero demanded an entrance it appeared that the door was locked, though there had been no previous intimation of the fact. He was dreadfully shocked, of course, to find his American sweetheart alone with "that man."

Thereupon he took himself away in sorrow if not in anger, making his exit through another door which had been standing ajar all the time. Presumably the villain and his accomplice got their just deserts at last. But there are no laws against bad plays and bad acting. So some of the others who deserved a sentence no doubt escaped.

Rosalie Dupre, Jessie Glendenning, Charles Hammond, and Charles Butler managed to emerge with some slight credit to themselves despite the conditions of servitude.

For the others, n life sentence in "The Lilac Room" would be too light.

DAVIDGE HELD FOR SHOOTING.

Nurse the Actor Wounded Appears in Court and Testifies Against Him.

William T. J. Davidge, actor and a member of the well-known theatrical family, who was arrested on March 16 on a charge of shooting Rosalie D. Wilbert, a trained nurse, was held without bail for the Grand Jury by Magistrate Steers in the Flatbush Court, Brooklyn, yesterday.

Miss Wilbert, who was able to leave the hospital last week, was in court as the principal witness against Davidge. She had completely recovered from the effect of the chest wound she received.

The nurse said Davidge met her on the night of the shooting at a drug store near 768 Franklin Avenue, where she was attending to patients. As they walked back toward the house he accused her of being in love with some one else. She did not deny this, but told him, she said, that the matter was none of his affair.

Then, she said, Davidge took her pocketbook and began to look over the cards in it. He followed her into the vestibule and shot her.

The nurse admitted writing several affectionate letters to Davidge, which were offered in evidence by Davidge's lawyer.

WAGNER BILL PASSED.

Aimed to Prevent Collusion Between Theatres and Speculators.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 3.—By a vote of 92 to 9 the Assembly to-day passed the Wagner bill, which is aimed to prevent collusion and division of profits between theatres and ticket speculators and ticket agencies. The bill does not prevent ticket speculation, but it does prevent what Assemblyman Wagner declares "illegal sharing of profits."

Culliver, a McClellan man, and Foley, the representative of Charles F. Murphy's district, made a determined fight against it. Foley declared it was unconstitutional. "Honest speculation in theatre tickets is not prevented," said Wagner. "Hotel ticket agencies are not affected unless it can be shown that they are in collusion or in league with the management of a theatre for the extortion of advanced prices from the public. The measure aims to get after barefaced collusion, not legitimate ticket speculation."

While the Saxe bills aimed at theatre ticket speculation were overwhelmingly defeated last week in the Senate the Wagner bill is believed to stand a better chance.

Concert for Sisters of St. Francis.

A concert in aid of the Missionary Sisters of St. Francis, an Italian order, whose work is the instruction of Italian children in lacemaking, carpet weaving, embroidery, and fine sewing, will be given in the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom to-night. The concert will be under the personal supervision of the Countess Spottiswood Mackin. Among those announced to appear are Mme. de Cisperos, Miss Claire, and Albert Janpolski.

Benefit Play in French.

The Cercle Dramatique de l'Alliance Française, whose performances have heretofore been presented monthly at the Carnegie Lyceum, will give a three-act play at the Hudson Theatre on Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Friendly Aid Settlement. The play selected is "Château Historique," by Alexandre Bisson and Berr de Turique, one of last year's successes at the Paris Odéon.

"Lion and the Mouse" Winding Up.

"The Lion and the Mouse" celebrated its six-hundredth performance at the Lyceum Theatre last night, the management distributing silver jardinieres as souvenirs. Preparations are under way to make the farewell performance on Saturday, April 6, a special occasion. The next attraction will be "The Boys of Company B," with Arnold Daly, opening on Monday.

Dillingham to Produce a Klein Play.

Charles Dillingham's next production is to be a new play by Charles Klein. The piece was named yesterday, "The Step-Child." Among the players engaged for the production are Chrystal Herne, John Finley, Grace Filkins and William Sampson.

Support Harlem Vice Crusade.

Five hundred Harlem residents who are interested in the crusade against vice and crime met in the Harlem Presbyterian Church at 123d Street and Mount Morris Park West last night and promised support to the Harlem Law and Order League, organized on Tuesday. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Pastors' Association of Harlem, and about thirty-five churches were represented. Special reference was made by the speakers to the penny arcadea and cheap theatres in Harlem, which, it was asserted, are the sources of much evil to young people.

CAN'T ESCAPE THAW TRIAL.

Jerome Dives Into Subway, but Strikes New Argument on the Case.

Seeking a moment's rest from his assistants, his insanity experts, and the hordes of newspaper men covering the trial of Harry K. Thaw, Mr. Jerome dived in to the Subway at Worth Street yesterday, pulled a little volume from his pocket, found a seat in an uptown train, and started to read during a round trip to anywhere and back under the surface of the city.

In the next seat to the District Attorney was a man apparently just arrived in New York, who was reading a report of the Thaw trial in one of the afternoon papers.

"Now, what d'ye think of that!" suddenly exclaimed the newspaper reader to the District Attorney.

"What, Sir?" asked Jerome.

"This fellow Jerome has proved this fellow Thaw insane and sane, and the counsel for the defense have proved him sane and insane. What are they trying to get at, anyhow? Whatcher think of Jerome's position in the case?"

"I think Jerome has a pretty clear idea of what he's doing," replied the District Attorney. "At least he has been doing everything in his power to satisfy his conscience and to make a fight against the unfortunate survival of an old statute on insanity."

"You mean Section 20?" asked the newspaper reader.

Mr. Jerome was arguing with his casual acquaintance when the train reached Fourteenth Street. There seemed no end in sight for the Thaw case, so he bounced from his seat and hurried out of the car.

A negro sitting near the loquacious newspaper reader rolled his eyes and said so that all in the car could hear him:

"Mah goodness, them two gemmen sho' has rainstorms."

HINTS FOR THE GOURMAND.

New lettuce is in from Long Island this week. It is 12 and 15 cents a head.

The second crop of new Bermuda potatoes is selling now and is much better than the first crop which started in about Christmas. The potatoes sell for 18 cents a quart.

Southern spinach is still in the market. It brings 30 and 35 cents a half-peck.

Charleston and California asparagus is reasonable at 50 and 75 cents a bunch, the thicker asparagus bringing the higher price.

Charleston strawberries can be found for from 25 to 35 cents a box. Those from Florida are 20 and 25 cents.

Hothouse tomatoes are from 25 to 35 cents a pound. The best bring the higher price. The best Florida tomatoes cost 25 cents.

This is the second week for Long Island rhubarb, raised under glass. It can be had for 10 cents a bunch.

The day for the appetizing dandelion salad has arrived. Dandelions cost 20 cents a quart.

Endive should be made the most of at 30 cents a head, for the season is near an end. It cannot be shipped from France after the warm weather sets in.

Southern lamb will be in next week and will be cheaper than the milk fed Jersey Spring lamb, which leaves nothing to desire in quality. This costs for the forequarter $2.50 to $3 and hind quarter $4 to $5. Winter lamb is developing into mutton, the season is nearly over, and the prices are 2 cents higher than they have been.

Sweetbreads are in their prime in April and May. They cost now, according to size, 50 cents or $1 a pair.

Turkeys are becoming scarce. They cost 28 cents a pound.

It is getting late for guinea hens. They are $1.50 a pair.

VANDERBILT FAVORS TOURING CAR RACES

Cup Donor Says Foreign Tendency Is Against Abnormally Constructed Machines.

READY TO DISCUSS PLANS

Will Meet Parkway Directors and Racing Board This Week—Thomas Wants Weight Limit.

If the comments made by William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., yesterday on automobile racing conditions abroad mean anything, they indicate that the future long-distance road competitions will be restricted more and more to regular touring cars.

"The tendency," said Mr. Vanderbilt, "is toward a gradual abandonment of racing events for which particular cars of abnormal horse power and other features of construction must be built to make a successful showing. The races of the future in which manufacturers and prospective owners will take the deepest interest will undoubtedly be those limited to regular stock touring cars, and I am glad to learn that such contests have been arranged for this country."

Mr. Vanderbilt arrived after a four months' trip abroad on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. He was more interested in talking about the pleasures of his 2,000-mile automobile tour through Europe than in discussing conditions for the Vanderbilt Cup race this season.

"I practically know nothing about it," he added, "or what changes may be deemed necessary for the race this year. That will be for the Racing Board to decide, but I should judge, owing to the lateness of the season, that no radical modifications will be made. I shall be glad, however, to talk the matter over with the members of the board as soon as I am informed that a meeting has been called."

Neither Chairman Thompson of the American Automobile Association Racing Board nor the officers of the Long Island Motor Parkway heard anything direct from Mr. Vanderbilt yesterday. The Plan and Scope Committee meeting of the Parkway Directors, which was to have been held in the afternoon, was postponed in the hope that Mr. Vanderbilt will be able to be present within the next week. Mr. Thompson also said that he was ready to call a meeting of his board this week, provided Mr. Vanderbilt can attend.

The cylinder displacement idea, however, is not meeting with universal favor among American makers. E. R. Thomas, who is remodeling for the forthcoming race the three cars he entered last year, came out boldly in favor of the weight limitation.

To Mark Prospect Park Auto Route.

Through the efforts of the Long Island Automobile Club a more direct route has been selected for motorists to use in going from Brooklyn Bridge to Prospect Park. Permission has been secured from the telephone and telegraph companies to use their poles for the placing of large signs marking the roads to be followed at the turns. One pole will be erected by the club at the corner of Degraw Street and Fourth Avenue. Twelve sign boards in all will be erected, each two feet long by one foot wide, and they will be plainly marked on both sides. The route will be from the Brooklyn Bridge Plaza up Liberty Street, across Fulton, passing under the elevated railroad into Clinton Street, then to Pacific Street, turning left into Fourth Avenue, and then turning left into Degraw Street, which leads up to the Prospect Park Plaza. Work will begin this week in placing the sign boards under the auspices of the Runs and Tours Committee of the club.

DURLAND'S HORSE SHOW.

Saddle Class Was the Feature of the Ring Contests.

The boxes made up the greatest part of the attendance at the Durland Spring Horse Show last night, and the show of fashion easily held first place, in spite of the fact that the crowd refused to agree with the judges on all occasions. The features of the ring competitions were two saddle horse classes and a contest for single horses driven by women. In the chief of the saddle horse classes, a big ring competition, for horses up to heavy weights, a remarkably fine lot of horses, new to the show ring, were sent out, and the professional element scored with a hearty cheer when the veteran Kentucky saddle horse won. Col. C. L. Railey, showed the winner in Mrs. W. S. Elliott's chestnut gelding, Judge Cantrill. The contest of the ladies' pairs also stirred the crowd to enthusiasm, when with ladies driving, Mrs. William Orr Barclay won with her chestnut gelding Sandow. Of the notable people in attendance were the following:

Harness Class, pairs exceeding 14.3 hands and not exceeding 15.1 hands.—Won by Mrs. William Orr Barclay's Sandow, ch. g., 9 years, and Sultan, ch. g.,; Miss Emily H. Bedford's Hildred, ch. m., 9, and Plymouth Champion, ch. g., aged, second; W. Watson's Ringling Bells, ch. m., 6, and Narina, ch. m., 7, third.

Saddle Class, horses exceeding 15.2 hands, three years old and upward.—Won by Mrs. W. S. Elliott's Judge Cantrill, ch. g.; Otto H. Kahn's Elsa, ch. m., 8, second; McGibbon and Collier's Evelyn, b. m., 5, third.

Harness Class, pairs not exceeding 14.3 hands.—Won by C. W. Watson's pair, Kitty Gray, ch. m., aged, and Chatter Box, ch. m., 6 years; Mrs. John Gerken's pair, Newsboy, ch. g., 9, and Shop Girl, ch. m., 7, second; William Seidig's pair, Miniature Forest King, br. g., 6, and Miniature Forest Queen, br. m., 7, third.

Saddle Class, ponies not exceeding 13 hands.—Won by Charles Holloway's Cardiff, b. g., 8 years; Cyril L. Carr's Pattie Penibroke, rn. m., 5, second; Miss Grace F. Anthony's Dewdrop, b. m., 4, third.

Jumping Class.—Corinthian competition, open to qualified or green hunters—Won by the Westchester Farm's Taconite, b. g., 6; Robert E. Tod's Nicholas, ch. g., aged, second; the Westchester Farm's Jack Frost, ro. g., aged, third.

Harness Class.—Pairs of ladies' harness horses —Won by Mrs. William Orr Barclay's pair, Sandow, ch. g., 9 and Sultan, ch. g., 9; Miss Emily H. Bedford's pair, Donner, blk. g., 9, and Blitzen, 9, second; C. W. Watson's pair, Ringling Bells, ch. m., 6, and Kitty Gray, ch. m., aged, third.

Saddle Class, Horses over 15 hands and not exceeding 15.2 hands.—Won by H. G. McElwaine's Delmas, ch. g., 4; Mrs. John Gerken's Moyo, ch. m., 7, second; Rufus L. Patterson's Caratoman, ch. g., 5, third.

LONDON HORSE SHOW PLANS.

Prize List and Rules Governing Exhibition Issued by Committee.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Copyright, 1907.

LONDON, April 3.—The prize list and rules governing the distribution of prizes for the International Horse Show to be held at the Olympia the first week in June were issued to-day. Red, white, and blue will be the distinctive colors of the exhibition. The selection was made regardless of nationality, but London sporting men are saying in a spirit of fun that it was due to the influence of the American directors, Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Clarence H. Mackay, E. T. Stotesbury, and Lawrence Jones that these colors were decided upon.

A number of handsome cups will be offered for competition, and the prizes generally are of exceptional value. Alfred Vanderbilt has presented prizes for the polo pony class to be judged by a committee of American, English, and Continental polo players, and in the cabe and turnout class to be judged by himself. Walker Winans, an American living in England, has offered a cup designed by himself.

Among the other cups offered are: Appointment class, by James T. Hyde; harness class, by Richard S. McGann; harness and carriage class, by Lawrence Jones; chargers, by Earl of Lonsdale; and qualified hunters, by James L. Hever. Special cups will go to the winners of the pony, brood mare, etallion, harness horse, and tandem classes. Mr. Vanderbilt hopes to win the trophy in the latter class.

The rules specify that no entry will be received later than June 5, and all entries for the show must arrive at the Olympia before midnight of June 6, from which time they will be subject to conditions governing the show, which will remain in force until the show closes June 15.

The Vanderbilt horses continue to provide interesting articles for the daily press. His return to England is largely awaited by the leading spirits of the exhibition.

NEW YORK RUNNERS WIN.

Take All the Open Events in Newark Regimental Games.

New York athletes won all the open events in the indoor games of the First Regiment of the National Guard of New Jersey, held in the regiment armory in Newark last evening. The New York Athletic Club team won the mile relay race handily, while Frank Kear took the 600-yard handicap, and George Merz the 75-yard dash after especially good races. The interscholastic relay went to St. Paul's School after a lively contest, in which the lead was interchanged on every relay, while a number of well-known New York runners who are members of the regiment took the majority of the closed events. The summary:

One-Mile Run.—Won by M. Diaz, Holy Cross Lyceum, (160 yards;) W. S. Logan, Cornell University, (70 yards,) second; H. G. Odell, Irish-American A. C., (45 yards,) third. Time—4:25.

Quarter-Mile Novice.—Won by Lewis Hado, Company L; William Waugner, Company E, second; Wesley Segen, Company L, third. Time—1:00 4-5.

600-Yard Handicap.—Won by Frank Kear, unattached, (16 yards;) Joseph Dask, 23d Street Y. M. C. A., (25 yards,) second; P. J. Murray, Xavier A. A., (30 yards,) third. Time—1:16 1-5.

One-Mile Interscholastic Relay Race.—Won by St. Paul's School, (Scott, Hennis, Halsey, Packard;) Montclair High School, (Clement, Osborne Harris, Barnes,) second. Time—3:44.

75-Yard Three-Legged Race.—Won by McLaren and Jenkins, Company D; Bart Freeman and J. Small, Company B, second. Time—0:09 4-5.

One-Mile Relay Race.—Won by New York Athletic Club, (McIntyre, Pilgrim, Sarrell, Stout;) Clark House, (Steeps, Buderman, Bernstein, Weinberger,) second. Time—3:33 4-5.

Sack Race.—Won by T. M. Jenkins, Company B; W. P. Smith, Company H, second; W. Byron, Company E, third. Time—0:13.

Potato Race.—Won by Bart Freeman, Company B; J. Walker, Company E, second; G. B. Leubke, Company B, third. Time—0:44.

Military Courier Race, One Mile.—Won by Company B, (Gierding, Freeman, Leubke, McNormand;) Company C, (Murray, Dugo, Menty, Thornworth,) second. Time—3:55.

Quarter-Mile Run.—Won by Carl Seger, Company I, (12 yards;) Harry Schmale, Company G, (8 yards,) second; John Fernworth, Company C, (20 yards,) third. Time—0:54.

75-Yard Novice.—Won by C. Calness, Company D; Boyce Miller, Company E, second; J. H. Dugal, Company I, third. Time—0:08 4-5.

75-Yard Dash, Open.—Won by George Merz, Xavier A. A., (16 feet;) Owen Langen, Irish-American A. C., (11 feet,) second; O. J. Telschow, St. Bartholomew's A. C., (16 feet,) third. Time—0:07 4-5.

75-Yard Handicap.—Won by Carl Seger, Company I, (10 feet;) C. H. Lawhury, Company E, (8 feet,) second; John Fenworth, Company C, (7 feet,) third. Time—0:08 1-5.

Half-mile Run, Heavy Marching Order.—Won by O. E. Gierding, Company D; F. W. Marks, Company D, second; Charles Henne, Company C, third. Time—2:27 2-5.

FAST TRACK FOR GAMES.

Military Athletic League Carnival to be Held in 13th Regiment Armory.

The indoor track of the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, where the annual carnival of the Military Athletic League will be held on Friday and Saturday evenings, is the fastest in the world. Many of the indoor records of the Amateur Athletic Union were made on the track, which is an eight-lap one. Melvin W. Sheppard on Saturday night covered 600 yards in 1:13 2-5, the fastest time ever made for the distance on an indoor track. Among the other records made on the track are: Harry L. Hillman, Jr., quarter-mile, 0:50 1-5; Bernard Wefers, 100-yard, 0:10; Andy Walsh, one-mile, 4:26, and Harvey W. Cohen, half-mile, 2:00. E. J. Sweeney established the indoor high-jumping record of 6 feet 3½ inches in the armory. Many of these athlets and a number of others almost as good will compete in the Military Athletic League games, when several new records are expected to be added to the list.

One of the most interesting features of the carnival will be the wall-scaling contest, for which six teams have entered. The Forty-third Company of Coast Artillery team from Fort Terry, which will be among the competitors, holds the world's record for the event. The other entries are Thirteenth, Twenty-second, Seventy-first, and Twenty-third Regimental teams of New York and the Fourth Regiment of the National Guard of New Jersey.

TROTTER STOPPED SUDDENLY IN RACE

Lou Dillon's Breakdown in Gold Cup Contest Mystifies Owners and Trainers.

APPEARED TO BE DRUGGED

Veterinarian Testifies That Mare's Condition Indicated That She Was "Doped."

Expert testimony was introduced in the Memphis Gold Cup case yesterday in an effort to prove that the famous trotting mare Lou Dillon was drugged in her race with Major Delmar at Memphis, Oct. 18, 1904. The trial, which is attracting the attention of the entire light harness world, was resumed before Justice Grenebaum and a jury in the Supreme Court, when evidence was presented in an effort to substantiate the charge made by Murray Howe, Secretary of the Memphis Trotting Association, that E. E. Smathers, owner of Major Delmar, was responsible for Lou Dillon's defeat in the race for the Gold Cup.

Dr. Springler, who had, by the character of the examination to which he had been subjected, been elevated to the distinction of testifying as an "allenist," said that some drug must have been given to Lou Dillon to make her stop in the manner in which she did in the race. The veterinarian was not prepared to swear to the actual drug administered, but said that aconite or nicotine would produce such a condition as that presented by Lou Dillon after the first heat. The witness explained that the effect of aconite on an animal would be to depress it and cold sweats would follow and it would paralyze the heart. This effect on the heart, he said, was made manifest by great distress and exhibited by a fluttering movement of the heart.

The first witness was Henry K. Devereaux, a trotting horse owner of Cleveland, who was present at the race in question in which Lou Dillon broke down and lost to Major Delmar.

In describing the race he said that the pair trotted head and head to the first quarter, which was made in 0:30½. After leaving the quarter Lou Dillon gradually fell behind until the half was reached, when the mare's head was about at Major Delmar's quarter. A few seconds later the mare quit suddenly. She did not die out gradually, but quit all of a sudden. When Major Delmar finished a long way ahead of the mare it was in 2:07. The witness said he kept his watch on Lou Dillon, which was far down the stretch, until she went under the wire in 2:18¼. She appeared very tired at the finish, and when he saw her later she showed signs of being sick and was very jaded.

The witness went to the stable the next morning and saw Lou Dillon. She appeared nothing more than normal, and in her work on the same day she appeared to be her natural self. In reply to cross-examination he said that he knew both Mr. Smathers and Mr. Billings in 1903 and 1904, and believed both to be honorable men.

Charles Tanner, stable manager for Mr. Billings, followed Mr. Devereaux to the stand and testified that he had been present when Lou Dillon trotted all her fast miles excepting ut Detroit. He described the race in 1903, in which Lou Dillon beat Major Delmar two straight heats, both in 2:03¾. He described the preliminary work of Lou Dillon preparatory to the Gld Cup race in 1904. The witness substantiated the testimony of former witnesses as to the manner of the mare's treatment on the day of the race.

The witness said Lou Dillon was in perfect condition when she came out of the last mile she worked prior to the race. While scoring down the first time she broke and floundered around, according to the witness, seeming not to have good use of her legs, something the witness declared he had never seen her do before.

Westlake Manager of Newark Team.

James A. F. Westlake of Belleville was yesterday elected manager of the new Newark team of the Atlantic Baseball League. "Pop" Westlake has played baseball for several years, beginning with the old Woodsides, and later as a member of the Seton Hall College nine, the Chatham team of the Lackawanna League, and the Paterson Club of the Hudson River League. Last Fall he went with the All-American team to Cuba, and played there throughout the winter months. He will play his regular position as catcher on the Newark team. Charley Speer, the Verona boy, who pitched for the Chatham Club of the Lackawanna League team for several seasons, will be secured by Newark.

Joe Gordon Retires from Presidency.

Under the new order of things in the Greater New York Baseball Club of the American League, which will go into effect at the opening of the championship season, Frank J. Farrell, the principal owner of the club, will assume the office of President. Joseph Gordon, who has been the chief executive of the organization ever since the club came into existence in 1903, has made arrangements for an extended trip abroad during the Summer and for that reason would be unable to properly attend to the duties required of the position. Mr. Gordon, however, will become the Vice President of the club.

Pratt Beats New York University.

Pratt Institute defeated New York University by the score of 7 to 2 in a loosely played baseball game on Ohio Field yesterday afternoon. Martin, the Pratt pitcher, fooled the New York batters throughout the game. The score by innings follows:

Pratt .....0 5 0 0 0 1 1 0 0—7
New York .....1 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 0—2

Hits—New York University, 6; Pratt, 6. Errors—New York University, 5; Pratt, 2. Batteries—Pratt, Martin and Bunn; New York, McDonald, Van Clef, Lellis, and Frederick.

Atlanta Easy for Brooklyn.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—Brooklyn had things pretty much its own way in to-day's game with Atlanta. However, Eason was hit hard in the sixth inning, and Atlanta made four hits, after which he was replaced by Whiting. In the fourth inning Alperman made a home run, which was one of the longest ever made on the local grounds. Parker's running catch of a long drive was the feature of the playing for the locals. Score:

Brooklyn .....2 1 0 2 2 0 0 0 2—0
Atlanta .....0 1 0 0 0 0 3 0 0—4

Batteries—Eason, Whiting and Butler; Schoff, Zeller and Sweeny.

GIANTS WIN BY A RUN.

Strang's Good Hit in Ninth Inning Sends Browne Across Plate.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 3.—Manager McGraw's New York Giants won the game from the Louisvilles at Eclipse Park this afternoon, but only after the champions had received a genuine scare.

The score was 6 to 5, and it was not until two men were out in the last inning that the winning score was made.

McGinnity, the "Iron Man," and Bresnahan were in the box for the Giants, and Wright and Hughss officiated for the locals when the game opsned. The Giants annexed two runs in the first inning and one in the second. Their next was in the fifth. When Louisville went to the bat in the sixth inning Cscil Ferguson, formerly of the bome team, started in to pitch. His wildness coupled with several timely hits and two passed balls by Bresnahan gave the locals four runs and tied the score. Taylor then relieved Ferguson.

The Giants forged ons ahead in their part of the sixth, and the Colonels tied them in the seventh. Then, in the ninth, with Browne on first, Strang hit for what looked like a three-bagger and Browns scored. "Cy." Seymour made the first home run of the seaeon, bringing in the first runs of the game.

Bowerman played first base, McGann being away on a visit to his home in Shelbyville, Ky. The score:

TIGERS ROUT COLUMBIA.

Bat Both Lee and O'Connell Freely and Make Big Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 3.—The Tigers routed Columbia this afternoon in the first game played here this year. The score was 13 to 1. Although neither Heynlger or Sides played, Princeton had no trouble in scoring. The hitting was excellent, especially Harlan's. Clark started in the box for the Tigers and lasted seven innings. He had good control and showed marked improvement. Carey did the twirling in the last two innings. Lee and O'Connell, for Columbia, were both batted freely. The score:

McGUIRE TAKES TEAM AWAY.

Greater New Yorks Split Up and Will Play at Richmond.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 3.—The youngster division of the Greater New York team, in charge of Catcher McGuire, left to-night for Richmond Va., where they will play Friday. Griffith gave his men a farewell practice this morning. McGuire took plenty of pitchers to Richmond, but still will have only nine men, including himself. "Joe" Doyle will pitch in Richmond Friday. The Cleveland team shared the park with the New Yorks this morning. Lajoie and his team left Atlanta this afternoon and wanted to take a little exercise before their long ride to Dayton.

When the New Yorks and Clevelands came in from the park after the morning practice they were greeted by members of the Brooklyn team, which had just arrived from Macon. All told, there are more ball players in Atlanta to-day than ever before. Of the bunch nearly 100 are major Leaguers.

Griffith and his men have been here four weeks and the manager is well satisfied with the results of the period of training under Southern skies. His pitchers have come up to expectations and he knows what the others can do.

"Phillies" Beat Athletics 1 to 0.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.—The annual Spring series between the Philadelphia major league baseball teams began here to-day with a victory for the Nationals. The single run made was scored on an error, a sacrifice, and a base hit.

Fordham Takes Opening Game.

Fordham defeated St. John's College of Brooklyn in her opening baseball game yesterday by a score of 6 to 1. Fordham tried out three twirlers—Keller, Heydorf, and Egen—all of whom pitched splendid ball. The Brooklyn boys scored their single run in the first inning on two hits and an error. Fordham battsd poorly, but made every hit count by bunching them with errors.

Manhattan Downs Commerce Nine.

Manhattan Freshmen defeated High School of Commerce at baseball yesterday afternoon on the Catholic Protectory grounds, Van Nest, by the score of 7 to 6. Barrett and Palmer pitched for Manhattan Freshmen and Mellan for the Commerce boys.

MARTIN BEST SHOT.

Breaks 95 Out of 100 Targets in Metropolitan Championship Tourney.

One hundred and fifty gunners participated in the trap shooting tournament held under the auspices of the Montclair Gun Club at its grounds in Upper Montclair yesterday, and the splendid weather conditions prevailing developed some good marksmanship. It was one of the largest fields of trap shooters that has been seen on any grounds in the East in many years. The prizes at stake, the metropolitan championships for individuals and teams, evidently being the magnet for the large attendance.

Something like 15,000 targets were thrown from the two sets of traps from 10 o'clock in the morning until darkness set in, and when the scores had been completed it was found that the Bergen Beach Gun Club had carried off the principal honors of the day among the amateurs. John Martin won the first individual prize with the high score of 95 out of 100. George Kouwenhoven took the second prize, with 94, and Dr. Gleason of the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn and of the Boston Athletic Association was the third highest shooter, with 91. Among the professionals W. H. Heer had the highest score, 93 out of 100; H. S. Welles was second, with 92, and J. S. Fanning was third, with 86.

The scores of the contestants breaking 70 per cent. of their targets follow:

Lush May Be Totally Blinded.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 3.—E. J. Thompson, Yale's graduate athletic manager, who remained in Washington to look after Coach "Billy" Lush and Trainer Tennant, who were injured after the game with Georgetown and taken to the hospital there, reports that Lush will not only lose one eye in consequence, but may not retain the sight of the other. The stone thrown by one of the small boys who followed the Yale coach did its work thoroughly. Tennant, who was kicked by a horse while rushing to Lush's aid, has, it is found, sustained a double fracture of his leg and will not be out of the hospital for weeks, if he ever recovers the full use of the limb. The Yale Faculty has ordered Manager Thompson to urge the thorough investigation of the stone throwing, and may forbid Easter trips in future as a consequence of the deplorable accident.

COPPERS

BALAKLALA
TRINITY

I have many times explained to the public how difficult it is to find a new, good copper property.

How next to impossible it is for one man to find many such in his lifetime search.

I have told the public of Trinity, as I told them of Butte at 2, Tri-Mountain and Copper Range at 10, all three of which went to 180 and 105, respectively. Trinity has doubled in price since I told the public its story—later it will double and double again. Another new good property is now ready to have its story told.

I refer to Balaklala, the property situated next to Trinity—the property I have watched grow from the grass to its present great state, when its first 1,000 ton smelter is about finished and its second 1,000 ton one coming along—the property with which Trinity has entered into a ten years' contract to smelt its ores.

Owing to my being overloaded with affairs on the eve of my departure to shape up copper affairs of import, I cannot tell the Balaklala story here, nor is it necessary. Any intending buyer can have the Balaklala story from any New York or Boston Stock Exchange house.

The purport of this advertisement is:—I advise all my following who hold Trinity to buy Balaklala. Its stock is about 11. It should advance first to 85, then to over 50. Its affairs have just been passed upon by the Boston Stock Exchange. It has been listed to-day and will be traded in to-morrow, and later will be traded in on the New York Stock Exchange. My only interest in the stock is a number of thousand shares I have just purchased for personal investment at the same price the public may buy for. I have no official connection with the company, but from my knowledge of the people who have created it and who are now in control, and my knowledge of its past, I think I am qualified to speak of it by the card.

For general and for special reasons which I will set forth later at length, I wish to see every Trinity stockholder a holder of Balaklala.

MARSTER FIRST IN WELL-RUN RACE

Gen. Townes's Gelding Qualifies for Carter Handicap at Benning Track.

MADDEN SPRINGS SURPRISE

His Two-Year-Old Servile, at 15 to 1, Finishes in Lead—Radtke's Good Riding.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Marster, a four-year-old gelding by Fatherless-Eostre, owned and trained by Gen. W. T. Townes, to-day qualified for the Carter Handicap, which will be run on the opening at Aqueduct.

Marster won the last race of the day, defeating Lord Boanerges, Holscher, and other fair horses, and, though he was driving at the end to stall off Bulwark, his performance was a good one, for he forced the pace all the way.

Marster's history is an unusual one. Until Saturday he was a maiden, and a four-year-old maiden at that, and when a horse reaches four years of age without earning brackets it is safe to put him down as a no-account thoroughbred. Last Fall Marster was chasing fourth-rate maidens around Benning, always landing in second or third place after showing a burst of speed. This Spring, upon the occasion of his first appearance under the silks, Gen. Towne told his friends that Marster was a good thing, and he was perhaps as heavily played as any horse at Benning this year. Gen. Towne declared that he expected to win some good races with the Fatherlese gelding this year, explaining his poor form of last Fall by stating that Marster had raced off three weeks' training.

A fair day brought out a good crowd, and, though there was no feature on the programme, the racing was interesting, three of the events furnishing stirring contests, and, as four of the winners were heavily played by the public, the day's sport was satisfactory.

John E. Madden provided the surprise of the afternoon when his Planudes gelding, Servile, captured the fourth race at odds of 15 to 1, while Easter Belle, another long shot, finished only a head behind. Jockey Radtke carried off the riding honors with two victories. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Selling; for three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Belle of Jessamine, 101 pounds, (Radtke,) won; Scarfell, 108, (McIntyre,) even and 2 to 5, second; Water Dog, 103, (Johnson,) 3 to 1, third. Time—1:23 2-5. Verness and Conjecture also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For maidens, two years old; four and one-half furlongs, old course. Trey of Spades, 104 pounds, (J. Johnson,) 7 to 5, and 1 to 2, won; Blember, 104, (Noone,) 7 to 2 and even, second; Laudable, 104, (Radtke,) 4 to 1 third. Time—0:57. Bob Callahan, Jr., Marston Cartwheel, Kate Carney, and Desideratum also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Buttons, 107 pounds, (Radtke,) 2 to 1, and even, won; Jerry C. 107, (J. Johnson,) 4 to 1 and 9 to 5, second; Parkville, 110, (J. O'Brien,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:30. Delphie, The Cricket, Beldemo, Winchester, Tavannes, Hoot Mon, and Ballad also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Selling, for two-year-olds; four and one-half furlongs, old course. Servile, 87 pounds, (Goldstein.) 8 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Easter Belle, 87, (McCarty,) 15 to 1 and 4 to 1, second; Kitty Smith, 96, (J. Johnson,) 7 to 2, third. Time—0:57 3-5. Superstition, Beget, and Stronghearl also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Maiden three-year-olds and upward; one mile, Columbia course. DECLARATIONS FOR CARTER.

Twenty-two Horses Withdrawn from $10,000 Aqueduct Handicap.

Twenty-two nominations have been declared out of the Carter Handicap at the Aqueduct track on April 15. The list includes several prominent candidates, which have not been properly conditioned owing to the cold weather this Spring. The reduction will not seriously affect the running of the $10,000 event.

August Belmont's candidate, Okenite, and James McLaughlin's Oxford received public trials for the Carter Handicap on Monday at the Benning track, and both performed in a manner to stamp them as almost certain startere. The list of declarations follows:

Watertight, Blandy, Inquisitor, Pulsus, Ironsides, Suffrage, Handzarra, Red Friar, Cressina, Jacquin, Israfel, Vendor, McCarter, Superman, Hermitage, Core, Zambesi, Zienip, Cabochon, Tom Dolan, Belle of Iroquois, and Halifax.

Dr. Jennings Beats Boyd at Billiards.

Dr. Jennings, handicapped at 245, defeated Frank Boyd, who had 240 to make, in the 14.2 balk line billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Academy in Brooklyn last night by a score of 245 to 229. Dr. Jennings averaged 3 41-88, and his high runs were 38 and 14. Boyd's average was 3 28-87, with high runs of 28 and 20. The final game of the tournament will be played to-night between C. E. White (275) and Dr. Jennings. (245.) If White is returned the victor, he will receive first prize. If Dr. Jennings wins, he and White will tie.

PINEHURST GOLF SURPRISES.

Moore Beats Wood and Herreshoff for Championship Cup.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 3.—Nathaniel F. Moore of the Onwentsia Club, Chicago, and Allan Lard of the Columbia Club, Washington, will meet in the final thirty-six-hole round to-morrow for the championship cup as the result of to-day's play in the second and semi-final rounds of the seventh annual united North and South amateur championship golf tournament. Moore defeated both Warren W. Wood, the championship title holder, and Fred Herreshoff, winning both matches on the home green. The match with Herreshoff was stroke for stroke, the players never being more than a hole apart, Moore winning the match on the last hole by 4 strokes to 5. Moore's match with Wood was still more spectacular, the title holder being four down at the twelfth hole, but losing the match on the home green.

Lard won his semi-final round at the nineteenth hole, beating David Fleming, Jr., of Philadelphia, and in the first division consolation event, T. S. Lippy of Chicago defeated Dwight Partridge of Bedford on the nineteenth green.

Burns is Columbia's Tennis Captain.

Grant Burns was yesterday elected Captain of Columbia's tennis team, and has ordered practice for the season to start this week on the South Field courts. Burns, who paired with Le Roy last year and played a strong game in the doubles, is, next to Le Roy and Hendricks, the best individual player in the university. Hendricks is the University of California baseball star, who was debarred from the nine by the one-year residence rule, but this does not prevent his tennis play. Members of last year's team eligible again are Thomas, Banks, Boorman, and Cole. Le Roy can play in all contests except the intercollegiate championship. Dual matches with Yale, Princeton, and Cornell have been already scheduled.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK.

MAX MARX, plaintiff, against TELLY LUBITZ and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 12th day of March, 1907, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey St., in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 16th day of April, 1907, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain plot, piece, or parcel of land, being the northerly one-half of Lot No. 240 and all of Lot No. 239 on a certain map entitled "Map of the Village of East Tremont in the Town of West Farms, Westchester County, New York," dated West Farms, September 1st, 1868, made by William G. Livingston, C. E. and Surveyor, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of the Bronx, in the City of New York, and more particularly bounded and described as follows, viz.: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the easterly side of Mohegan (formerly Grant) Avenue, with the northerly side of 179th Street; running thence northerly along said easterly side of Mohegan (formerly Grant) Avenue ninety-nine (99) feet to the division line between Lots 238 and said map; thence easterly along the division line between Lots 238 and 239 on said map, one hundred and fifty (150) feet to the rear of Lot 239; thence southerly along the rear of Lots 239 and 240 on said map ninety-nine (99) feet to the northerly side of 179th Street; thence westerly along the northerly side of 179th Street, one hundred and fifty (150) feet to the point or place of beginning. Excepting therefrom so much of said premises as has been taken by the City of New York for the opening or widening of Mohegan (formerly Grant) Avenue.

HARRY ALLEN MENDELSON, Referee.

LEWIS S. MARX, Attorney for Plaintiff, 128 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold:

The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $2,644.17, with interest thereon from the 1st day of March, 1907, together with costs and allowance amounting to $254.98, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is $4,336.18 and interest. The premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage of $2,500 and interest thereon at 5% per annum from February 1, 1907, and to a second mortgage of $7,500 and interest thereon at 5% per annum from January 25, 1907, now liens on said premises.

Dated New York, March 20th, 1907.

INTERNATIONAL BILLIARDS.

Americans Will Offer Challenge Trophy to Attract Foreigners Here.

Action has been taken upon the plan of sending an American amateur billiardist to the international tournament to be held in Paris, France. In this city the Liederkranz Club voted yesterday to enter J. Ferdinand Poggenburg and defray his expenses. News was also received by the officials of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players that the Chicago Athletic Association had taken similar action with regard to Calvin Demarest.

Maurice Daly said yesterday that the stand taken by the New York and Chicago organizations practically made certain an American amateur competing. But whether or not both Demarest and Poggenburg will go remains to be decided. Each club has only agreed to enter its own player.

According to a letter from Paris which Daly received yesterday both Perolle and Morgier have come through a Parisian tournament with flying colors. The former, who three years ago defeated Wilson P. Foss, won the tourney. His grand average was a fraction better than 20, while Morgier's was also stated to be very high, although not given in actual figures. Demarest's grand average in the recent National championship was a slight fraction above 14.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—ELIZABETH GIES MEYER, plaintiff, against BERNHARD GIES et al., defendants.

In pursuance of a 2d interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made in the above entitled action, and entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York, on the 18th day of March, 1907, I, the undersigned, the referee in said interlocutory judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 4th day of April, 1907, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, by Bryan L. Kennelly, auctioneer, the premises directed by said interlocutory judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

All that tract or parcel of land, with the buildings erected thereon, situated in the City, County and State of New York, described as follows: Beginning at a point on the southerly side of Sixty-sixth Street, distant three hundred (300) feet easterly from the southeasterly corner of Sixty-sixth Street and Second Avenue; running thence southerly, and parallel with Second Avenue, one hundred (100) feet; thence easterly, and parallel with Sixty-sixth Street, sixteen (16) feet and eight (8) inches; thence northerly, and again parallel with Second Avenue, one hundred (100) feet to the southerly side of Sixty-sixth Street; and thence westerly, and along said southerly side of Sixty-sixth Street, sixteen (16) feet and eight (8) inches, to the place of beginning. Said premises being known as No. 828 East Sixty-sixth Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

Dated New York, March 14, 1907.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Heavy and Irregular—Call Money Rates, 3¼@ 1 Per Cent.

REFUNDING PLAN FAVORABLE

Dividend Announcements Offset by Profit-Taking and Speculative Operations.

Prices on the Stock Exchange yesterday moved with the same irregularity displayed on Tuesday, but the tone of the trading was noticeably heavier. At the close of the day there were fully as many losses recorded in the list of active stocks as there were gains, although in most instances the declines were confined to unimportant fractions. The selling of stocks for London account, together with profit-taking and a renewal of operations by bearish speculators were more influential in directing the course of the market than were the many favorable news developments of the day. These developments included Secretary Cortelyou's offer relative to refunding and redeeming the Government 4 per cent. bonds maturing on July 1 next, an increase to 6 per cent. in the annual dividend on Atchison common stock, an initial dividend on Kansas City Southern preferred stock, and further ease in the money market, together with continued improvement in the bond market. While the Treasury's offer to refund into 2 per cent. bonds $50,000,000 of the maturing 5 per cent. issue seems to work something in the nature of injustice to holders of these bonds residing so far from Washington as to make it difficult for them to file their applications speedily enough to secure the advantages of the priority rule established by the department, nevertheless, as a whole, the plan is above criticism, and should result, through its release of money and its provision of a basis for additional circulation, in maintaining the easier position in which money markets are now beginning to find themselves. The Atchison system has more than earned the money necessary to provide for the increased dividend authorized by the Directors yesterday, and while some stockholders may think that action of this kind might well have been postponed owing to the current questionings regarding the continuation of business at its present high tide, still on the other hand the traffic of the road is enormous and the prospect for its maintenance is excellent. A sentimental influence was exercised upon speculative operations by the aftermath of the Harriman-Roosevelt controversy, and also by the uncertainty which still attends the negotiations under way in Chicago over the dispute between railroads and their employes regarding wages and hours. The market was at no time weak, and its resistance to the speculative pressure brought to bear upon it was again marked.

Owing to the increasing ease in money lenders found it impossible yesterday to secure more than 5¼ per cent. for the short time periods, while call money was obtainable at almost nominal rates. The banks continued to gain from the Sub-Treasury, and will be further benefited by the refunding and redemption operations which will soon be put under way by the Treasury Department. The changed position in regard to money was well illustrated during the day by the announcement that a part of the gold which had been engaged in London on Monday had been sold to the Bank of England at a profit, the expediency of its transfer to this side having practically passed. This transaction, together with the course of the foreign exchange market confirms the rather general belief that further imports at this time are highly improbable.

The German Steel Syndicate.

BERLIN, April 3.—The Steel Syndicate, sometimes called the Steel Trust of Germany, will probably hold together, which seemed unlikely a week ago, when the Stahlwerke Company of Westphalia refused again to sign the contract unless its allotment for production was more than doubled. The Executive Committee of the syndicate, at a conference here to-day with representatives of the Stahlwerke Company, reached the basis for an agreement which, if approved by the syndicate, means a continuance of the great combination.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 3.—Influenced to a large extent by the further break of over £3 in the London price of copper metal and by the lower figures in the New York list the local copper shares opened at a decline all around. Trinity was the special feature, opening at a loss of about 7 points and recording a further decline to 19½, but later rallying and closing at 22½. Calumet and Hecla lost 15 points, to 850; Calumet and Arizona 4, to 161; Tamarack 5, to 104. North Butte showed a two-point decline in early dealings, but later recovered the greater part of the loss. The close was quiet and without feature. Complete list of transactions follows:

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

After an unsettled morning, the stock market became firmer yesterday toward the close, with the result that the early losses, extending from 1 to 3 points in the active stocks, were considerably reduced, if not entirely wiped out by the recovery in the last hour. The day's movements, however, showed, at least in some instances, a lack of response on the part of the market to such favorable developments as occurred. The dealings fell below the million-share mark, and outside of eight or ten active issues the trading was on a very small scale. In the bond department, business was moderately active, but price movements were irregular. Further advances were recorded in some of the active issues, but others which had made notable gains on Tuesday sold off yesterday.

On a moderate scale London was a seller of stocks in this market yesterday. Closing prices for American securities in the English market all showed declines, and cable advices reported the market there weak. A small failure was announced in London, and another in Paris, but these were not regarded here as of importance from a market point of view. Mail advices which are now being received by international houses in this city are commenting with some wonderment on the fact that, while there have been several failures in London in the last two or three weeks, none have occurred in New York despite the violence of the decline which has taken place in this market.

One of the curious features of yesterday's trading was the fact that Atchison common, on which the dividend was increased yesterday from 5 to 6 per cent. a year, showed a net loss for the day. Having closed on Tuesday at 95¼, Atchison declined yesterday to 93¾, rallying at the end of the day to 94⅞. The buying of Atchison on Tuesday, part of which was attributed to interests closely identified with the Atchison management, was regarded on that day as foreshadowing an increase in the dividend. This forecast was verified yesterday, but the day's market afforded no opportunity to resell at a profit the stock purchased the previous day.

The usual weekly meeting of the Erie Executive Committee was not held yesterday. It was said that the arrangements for paying off the $3,000,000 of notes which mature next Monday were not in such shape as to require action by the Executive Committee, and, inasmuch as no other matter of importance would have come up before the committee yesterday, the meeting was omitted. It is understood that provision will be made for the maturing Erie notes by the issuance of one-year notes, which are expected to be placed on a favorable investment yield. Negotiations were in progress yesterday looking to the placing of such an issue of notes with bankers in this city. As matters now stand, the Erie bankers, J. P. Morgan & Co., are understood to have undertaken to provide for the notes, so that any further steps which the Erie may have to take in the matter will be purely of a formal character.

A committee was appointed by the Michigan Central Directors yesterday to decide about providing for the $14,000,000 of Canada Southern bonds which mature Jan. 1, 1908. It is expected that the committee will formulate plans within a few days and announce in the near future the terms for the refunding of these bonds. The Canada Southern is leased to the Michigan Central and is part of the main line of that road.

The American Tobacco Company has made further purchases of its 4 per cent. bonds, and has surrendered them to the Morton Trust Company for cancellation. The further amount canceled yesterday makes a total of approximately $6,000,000 of these bonds canceled in the last two months.

The Directors of the United States Rubber Company are expected at their meeting to-day to consider the question of ordering another increase in the prices of the company's products, which has been under consideration for some time. The regular preferred stock dividends are expected to be declared to-day.

Call money dropped yesterday to 1 per cent. The average rate for the day was 2½ per cent. An important factor contributing to the further ease in money was the continued deposit with the National banks of customs moneys, the total deposits of which since Tuesday of last week amount to $17,297,000.

An early indication of the condition of the Winter wheat crop was contained in the Ohio crop report made public yesterday. The figures, as telegraphed to Wall Street, showed the condition of Winter wheat in the State of Ohio to be 87 against 98 last December and against 101 at this time last year.

W. J. Wollman of J. S. Bache & Co. has returned from a vacation trip abroad full of bullish enthusinem over the attitude of the English and Continental public toward our stocks. He says that the interest taken in American securities abroad by all classes is simply astonishing, and in remarkable contrast to the conditions of, say, three years ago. He does not agree with the generally accepted belief that the various Governmental investigations, culminating in the Inter-State Commerce Commission's examination of Mr. Harriman, have had the effect of damaging our market on the other side of the water. The great interest taken in Americans and the surprising knowledge displayed of earnings and dividends even among the tradespeople with whom an American traveler comes casually in contact shows, he thinks, that the disclosures here have at least had the effect of advertising our securities. The heavy declines since the first of the year have made them look like bargains to the large class of small investors abroad, Mr. Wollman says, and the investment buying has been very good, especially in London. In the last two days of the big slump Mr. Wollman was in the city [London] and made a canvass of the leading London houses to get in touch with English feeling. He says that the brokers without exception reported heavy investment buying.

The final stock list compiled for the guidance of traders in the new stock department of the Produce Exchange contains 105 mining stocks, only a few of which are now traded in on the Curb, and 31 industrial stocks and bonds, among which are such old time Curb specialties as Standard Oil, Union Typewriter, Standard Milling, and Havana Tobacco. The industrials, however, are all of the class that is least active in the outside market.

American Tobacco and Guggenheim Exploration Sell Off Heavily In Last Hour.

Curb stocks were firmly held for the most part in yesterday's market, despite the irregular tendency on the Stock Exchange, and the trading, which was practically confined to the mining issues, left quotations, with few exceptions, at least fractionally higher.

Nipissing was one of the most active of the mining issues, selling 10,000 shares in a market that was an approach to some of the active days in this issue during the past Winter. After selling between 13 and 13⅞, the close was at 13½. The Heinze and the Cole-Ryan stocks were weak under light trading and closed fractionally lower.

One of the notable features of the day's trading was the sharp decline during the closing hour in American Tobacco common and Guggenheim Expleration, two of the highest-priced issues on the curb.

American Tobacco sold 350 shares from 325 to 300, a decline of 30 points from Tuesday's close. Guggenheim Exploration sold 400 from 212 to 200.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Closes Firm, After Sharp Advance, at 11 to 15 Points Net Gain.

WEATHER IN COTTON STATES.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The Federal Weather Bureau issues the following forecast for Thursday and Friday for the cotton States:

South Carolina—Fair and warmer Thursday and Friday; fresh southerly winds.

Georgia and Western Florida—Fair Thursday and Friday; warmer Thursday; light southerly winds.

Western Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi—Partly cloudy and warmer Thursday. Friday, showers; fresh southerly winds.

Louisiana—Fair Thursday. Friday, showers; fresh southwest to west winds.

Eastern Texas—Fair in southern, scattered showers and cooler in northern portion Thursday. Friday, fair; fresh to brisk southerly winds.

Western Texas—Scattered showers and cooler Thursday. Friday, fair.

Oklahoma, Indian Territory, and Arkansas—Showers and cooler Thursday. Friday, fair.

Tennessee—Rain Thursday and possibly Friday.

After a quiet and featureless early session the cotton market became much firmer late yesterday end advanced sharply on an increased demand. The close was firm at a net advance of from 11 to 15 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 75,000 bales, the bulk of the business being in the last hour.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 2 points on featureless cables. Reports of frost in the Eastern belt aroused no apprehension, as warmer weather was predicted. Receipts were smaller and started some covering, and reports that Government experiments showed that the seed used for the present crop was less fertile than that of the previous year helped the market. Buying near the close started through a prominent wire house, and was believed to be for a large St. Louis concern.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

The local market for spot cotton was steady, with prices 5 points higher at 10.95 for higher and 11.20 for middling Gulf. Sales nil.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Savannah quiet, ¼c lower at 10¾c; sales, 444 bales. Norfolk dull, unchanged at 11c; sales, 250 bales. St. Louis dull, unchanged at 10¾c; sales, 216 bales. Galveston firm, unchanged at 10 13-16c; sales, 100 bales. New Orleans steady, unchenged at 10¼c; sales, 1,950 bales. Memphis steady, unchanged at 10¼c; sales, 1,500 bales.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Green bugs were reported as far north as Central Kansas, and in some of the largest producing counties in that State were said to be doing much damage. There were complaints of Winter killing from the Ohio Valley. Bulls also asserted that seeding in the Northwest would be from two to three weeks late this Spring. A feature of interest early was the Ohio State report giving April condition as 87, against 98 in December and 101 a year ago. There was not much change in foreign markets outside of an advance of 2¼c per bushel in April wheat at Budapest. After holding fairly steady most of the day, new crop positions in the last hour eased off. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red, 83¾c, elevator, and 83¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89¼c, and No. 2 hard, Winter, 87½c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—May showed relative weakness all day. In the West conditions were much the same, late months getting support from bull interests, who were selling the May. Receipts at Chicago did not meet expectations, but estimates for Thursday were liberal. Liverpool was up ¼d on fears of continued light Danubian shipments. According to the Ohio State report, the condition of corn in cribs is 93, against 95 last year. Exporters took 30 loads. Cash corn in New York closed steady, as follows: No. 2 corn, 56c, elevator, and 51¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 54½c, and No. 2 yellow, 52c, free on board, afloat.

RATES ARE NOT MADE BY ROADS---FINLEY

Southern's Head Declares They Are Fixed by Economic Forces.

NO OVER-CAPITALIZATION

Exaggerated Ideas of the Earnings of Carriers Responsible for Hostile Legislation.

GREENSBOROUGH, N. C., April 3.—At the annual banquet of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Club of Greensborough to-night, W. W. Finley, President of the Southern Railway Company, said that there was serious popular error in supposing that there is any considerable overcapitalization of railroads in the United States.

"When the entire facilities of the carriers are considered," he said, "including rights of way through cities, towns, and elsewhere, terminals, yards, roadbed, tracks, tunnels, structures, and equipment, I think it will be admitted by all persons acquainted with the cost of railroad construction that the property of these carriers could not, generally speaking, be reproduced at a cost equal to their capitalization. But, leaving aside the question as to whether the railroads of this country are overcapitalized, I wish to say to you that the idea that rates are controlled by capitalization is entirely without justification. Capitalization may affect the intrinsic value of a company's securities, and thus affect the investing public. It cannot control a carrier's rate, and hence cannot affect the shipping public.

"No rate can ever, with proper consideration for the business of the country or of the carriers, be made independently of these economic laws; not by legislation arbitrarily fixing the rate, and not by capitalization of the carrier likewise arbitrarily fixing the rate. In a broad sense, therefore, the management of a railway is powerless to fix its rates. It must accept the rates that are the resultant of economic and commercial forces which are absolutely beyond the control of its managers as are the tides of the ocean.

"That this is true is further shown by the fact that many railroads have never been able to pay dividends on all of their capital stock, while others are unable to pay any dividends at all, and still others are not able to pay interest on their bonded indebtedness. If a railway could adjust its rates to its capitalization, there would be no reason why any road should not earn dividends on its capitalization, and thus forever abolish receiverships and bankruptcy.

"In all the discussion about the supposed relation between railroad capitalization and rates, I have been unable to find that any one has attempted to formulate a comprehensive and practicable scheme for basing rates on capitalization. I am convinced that if any one should seriously undertake to work out such a scheme, he would soon find it to be absolutely impracticable."

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

Developments of Yesterday in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, April 3.—Money was in quiet demand in the market to-day and discounts were slightly easier. It was stated that in consequence of the rise in New York exchange a portion of the gold purchased for the United States yesterday was resold to the Bank of England to-day.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet, with a drooping tendency. Public support was needed badly in certain sections. A further small failure was announced to-day, but it did not affect the market. Consols declined on profit-taking.

Foreigns were firmer. Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 closed at 103¾.

Americans were irregular, with occasional advances to above parity. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé was bought on rumors of a dividend increase. On the receipt of the New York opening quotations Americans advanced, but reacted quickly and closed at the worst prices of the day.

Rio Tinto was weak, owing to the fall in the price of copper and rumors of a failure in Paris.

Bullion amounting to £44,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

Bar silver steady, 30d per ounce.

Money 3¼@3¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 4⅛@4¼ per cent.; for three months' bills it is 4⅛@4¼ per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 10.65; Lisbon, 2.75.

Bar gold, 77s. 10d. American eagles, 76s. 5½d.

PARIS, April 3.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was inactive throughout. Russian imperial 4s closed at 74.40 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 408.

Three per cent. rentes, 94f. 70c. for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f. 27c. for checks.

BERLIN, April 3.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were weak upon the unfavorable Bank return and the unsatisfactory foreign market reports.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 52½ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates—Short bills, 5 per cent.; three months' bills, 5⅝ per cent.

ANOTHER SANTA FE DIVIDEND.

Second Increase for the Year Puts Common Stock on a 6 Per Cent. Basis.

At yesterday's monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé a dividend of 3 per cent. on the common stock was declared. This places the stock on a 6 per cent. basis, an increase of 1 per cent. in the annual rate. Six months ago the rate was increased from 4 per cent. to 5 per cent., this being the second increase within the current fiscal year.

The possibility of an increase in the Atchison dividend rate to 6 per cent. has been a topic of discussion in Wall Street for months. The vote at yesterday's meeting in favor of the increase was unanimous. Out of the fifteen Directors of the road, President Ripley and Byron L. Smith were the only absentees.

The decision of the Atchison Directors, it was said unofficially, reflected the confidence of the board in the continuance of favorable earnings and of general business prosperity. The Atchison earned a trifle more than 12 per cent. on its common stock last year, and officials think that the road will earn 15 per cent. this year. At 6 per cent. the road is paying out only 40 per cent. of its surplus income.

The increase in the Atchison dividend rate was not reflected in the price of the stock yesterday, which closed with a fractional net loss.

4 PER CENT. DIVIDEND VOTED.

Kansas City Southern Has Prospered Under the New Management.

The Directors of the Kansas City Southern declared yesterday an initial dividend of 4 per cent. on the company's preferred stock. There is $21,000,000 of this issue outstanding, so the 4 per cent. dividend will call for the disbursement of $840,000. The official statement accompanying the announcement of the dividend shows that the net income for the first eight months of the present fiscal year amounted to $1,316,365, or the equivalent of over 6 per cent. on the entire amount of preferred stock. It is estimated by the management that the net income for the remaining four months of the fiscal year will amount to $648,647, making the total net income for the year $1,965,012. Deducting from this the $840,000 to be paid out in dividends, there will be left a balance of $1,125,012, which will be available for other purposes.

The Kansas City Southern under the new management two years ago took the property over from the former Harriman management. Last year the railroad floated $5,000,000 of securities for improvement and general development of the property. Since the change in management the road has so prospered that the promise made at that time of a dividend this year was easy of fulfillment by the declaration of the dividend yesterday.

CHICAGO TRACTION PROBLEM.

Bankers Here Think Elections Definitely Settled It.

Bankers in this city identified with the Chicago traction companies expressed the opinion yesterday that the result of the municipal elections in Chicago on Tuesday definitely settled the traction problem in that city and opened the way to the financial rebabilitation of the several traction companies.

The Chicago Railways Company, the corporation formed to take over the other companies, one of these bankers said, will now proceed with the formulation of plans for the permanent financing of the improvements, which will have to be undertaken on a large scale. This banker estimated that not less than $40,000,000 would have to be spent within the next few years in rebuilding lines and purchasing additional equipment for the Chicago street railways. Some important details connected with the financing of these improvements are still unsettled, but the opinion was expressed that the main question of the company's right to operate the lines having been definitely settled, no insuperable difficulty would be encountered in adjusting other questions.

The New York interests identified with the Chicago traction companies regard the passage of the ordinances granting a franchise to the Chicago Railways Company as entirely satisfactory to them and as promising stable relations between the traction companies and the City of Chicago.

TO PASS BOND INTEREST.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette Road's Earnings Fall Off.

The semi-annual interest payment on the $1,432,000 land grant bonds of the Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette Railroad due this month will be passed, it was said on good authority yesterday, because the interest has not been earned.

Last October, owing to the falling off in land sales, the interest was cut from a rate of 7 per cent. annually to a semi-annual payment of 1 per cent.

Between 1903 and 1905, $1,339,000 of the bond issue, which had been formerly $2,771,000, was retired out of the proceeds of land sales.

From October, 1892, to April, 1902, 2 per cent. was paid a year, and in April, 1903, to April, 1906, inclusive, 3½ per cent. was distributed. In October last 1 per cent. was paid. On Jan. 1, 1906, the company had unsold lands amounting to 182,351 acres and mineral rights on 94,134 acres.

BOND REFUND PLAN HELPS.

Bankers Think Additional Circulation Will Be Taken Out.

Secretary Cortelyou's plans for the refunding and redemption of the 4 per cent. bonds of 1907, announced in Washington on Tuesday, met with very favorable reception in Wall Street yesterday. It was very generally agreed among bankers that the refunding of $50,000,000 of the bonds into new 2 per cent. bonds and the redemption of the balance in cash at maturity was about the best possible arrangement that could have been made. The new 2s will not only replace the 4s now pledged as collateral for National bank circulation, but will also provide bonds for an increase in circulation.

Practically, there was but one feature of the official circular setting forth the terms of the refunding that called forth any criticism from bankers. This had reference to the clause fixing the order of receipt at Washington of approved applications for refunding of bonds, as the order in which the applications will be granted. It was pointed out that this placed the holders of bonds in the Far West and at other distant places to a distinct disadvantage compared with the holders of bonds located within easy reach of Washington. If the refunding offer were accepted by banks and other holders in the East promptly and in large volume it might be that applications covering the entire $50,000,000, to which the refunding is limited, might be received before the holders residing at a distance had a chance to transmit their applications to Washington.

CHECK TO VENNER'S SUIT.

Lacombe Refuses to Send Case Against Hill's Road to State Courts.

Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, denied yesterday the application of Clarence H. Venner to have his suit against James J. Hill and the Great Northern Railway remanded to the New York State courts, in which the suit was originally entered and later transferred to the Federal courts on the motion of counsel for the defendants. In his suit Venner alleges that Mr. Hill, while acting as President of the Great Northern, made personal profits out of the acquisition of a controlling interest in the stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific jointly.

Venner in his application to have the case remanded urged that for the purposes of the suit the interests of the Great Northern and of Mr. Hill were identical, and that therefore the claim of diversity of citizenship on which the case was transferred from the State to the Federal courts could not properly be maintained in the instance.

Later in the month argument will be heard on a demurrer to the complaint interposed by the defendants, the Great Northern and Mr. Hill. These will be represented by Sherman & Sterling, while Kellogg & Rose will represent the complainant.

OPPOSE NEW CERTIFICATES.

Pere Marquette Minority Protest Against $400,000 Receiver's Obligations.

Chairman Gale of one of the minority committees of the Pere Marquette stockholders, has issued to stockholders the protest which the committee lodged at the recent Pere Marquette stockholders' meeting against the proposal to issue $400,000 of receiver's certificates in connection with the return to the Bradford interests of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad. This road, which was acquired from W. A. Bradford, Jr., and his associates by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton - Pere Marquette Roads, was paid for by an issue of Pere Marquette bonds.

The Gale committee is protesting against the issuance of these certificates on the ground that the Bradford road was originally acquired in the interest of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton rather than of the Pere Marquette, and that it is unfair, in connection with the settlement between the Morgan and the Bradford interests, to increase the debt of the Pere Marquette by the issuance of receiver's certificates.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Commenting on the situation in the iron and steel trade The Iron Age says:

In its ultimate analysis the financial situation dominates the future of the iron trade for the second half. By far the greatest part of the orders now on the books, notably those coming from the railroads, were financed long ago, and will go through; but the troubling question is what requirements will come up when the work in hand is delivered. The trade will welcome some elaborating, but is really nervous over the danger that the demand may sink below the normal. The flat-footed denials that there have been no cancellations and no withholding of specifications should be accepted with reserve.

The pig iron markets have been rather quiet, and there are some indications of easing prices. Buyers are again beginning to be highly critical, which is usually one of the earliest indications of a desire to claim adjustments. Spot iron, while not as scarce as it was, still commands a handsome premium.

The Iron Trade Review says:

The great activity of the finishing mills continues, specifications usually being in excess of production. The pig iron market during the past week has been quiet but firm. Furnaces, as a rule, are sold five or six months in advance, while on the other hand consumers are well supplied, and it is not probable that there will be heavy buying for some weeks.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

There was another break in copper warrants in the speculative market in London yesterday, which put the price of spot down to £91 15s. and of futures to £93 10s., declines, respectively, of £5 5s. and £5 15s. from the last prices of Tuesday.

At the New York Metal Exchange all grades of copper suffered further reductions yesterday in the official price. Lake was down ¼ cent per pound in the bid, electrolytic, ¼ in the bid and asked, and castings, ½.

In London pig iron closed weak at a loss of £3 15s. for spot and £2 15s. for futures, at £183 and £181, respectively. Lead was strong at £10 12s. 6d. Spelter was unchanged at £26. Iron warrants were firmer at 52s. 7d. for standard foundry, and 53s. 7½d. for Middlesborough.

The closing bid and asked prices on copper and other metals for spot delivery on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the previous day:

	Wednesday.		Tuesday.
	Bid.	Asked.	Bid.	Asked.
Lake	24.50	25.00	24.75	25.00
Electrolytic	24.00	24.50	24.25	24.75
Castings	23.00	23.50	23.50	24.00
Lead	0.10	6.20	6.15	6.25
Spelter	6.75	6.85	6.80	6.90
Tin	39.50	40.00	40.40	40.75

together with trackage rights or leasehold of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, from said Whiting to the City of Chicago, also certain other trackage rights from the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, in said South Chicago, and a leasehold interest in the Lyons and Chicago Railroad, so called being a railroad extending easterly from said Chicago and Calumet Terminal Division at a point near McCook to and into the Chicago Crushed Stone Company's property; together with the Mayfair Extension, so called, being a railroad extending from said Franklin Park northerly and easterly to Mayfair, in the City of Chicago, in said Cook County, at a point near the intersection of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway and the Chicago and Northwestern Railway; together with all branches, spurs, industrial tracks, side tracks, turnouts and other appurtenant tracks along and upon each and every of said Chicago Terminal railroads; together with all depot grounds, yards, ways, rights of way, interlocking plants, switches, tracks, bridges, viaducts, culverts, fences and other structures, station houses, engine houses, car houses, freight houses, warehouses, elevators, warehouses, powsr plants, machinery and repair shops and their equipment, tanks, turn tables, superstructures, erections, buildings and fixtures belonging to or connected with said lines of railway or the business thereof; together with all franchisee, ordinances, licenses, permits, easements, leases, contracts and agreements belonging or pertaining to or connected with said lines of railway or the business thereof; together with all locomotives, tenders, cars and other rolling stock, equipment, supplies, machinery, tools and implements owned or acquired by said Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, or by John N. Faithorn, the receiver heretofore appointed herein, or belonging, pertaining to or connected with said lines of railway or the business thereof; together with all properties, real, personal, or mixed, held in leasehold or in freehold, in law or in equity, by said Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, or said receiver, including all choses in action, bills receivable and moneys or notes possessed or held by said Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, or said receiver, and including the following described real estate, to wit:

Lots 1 and 2 in Baer's Subdivision of Lot 10, Block 58, Canal Trustees' New Subdivision of Blocks in the northwest quarter of Section 21, Township 39 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian; also Lot 3 in Gunzenhauser's Subdivision of Lot 9, Block 53, Canal Trustees' New Subdivision of Blocks in the northwest quarter of Section 21, Township 39 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian; also that part of Lot 11, Block 53, Canal Trustees' Subdivision of the northwest quarter of Section 21, Township 39 north, Range 14, east, described as beginning at a point 25 feet east of the northwest corner of said Lot 11, thence south 73 feet, thence east 25 feet, thence north 73 feet, thence west 25 feet to the place of beginning; also Lots 36 and 38 and Lots 40 to 50, both inclusive, Block 15, and Lots 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 22, in Block 16 of Simpson and Green's Addition to Chicago; also Lots 33 and 47, Baldwin's Subdivision of Block 30, in Subdivision of Section 19, Township 39 north, Range 14 east; also Lots 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 15, 16 and 17, in Cook's Subdivision in Block 10, (excepting railroad), in Ogden's Subdivision of the east half of the northeast quarter of Section 24, Township 39 north, Range 13 east; also a strip of land 66 feet wide in the west half of the west half of the northwest quarter of Section 3, Township 36 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian, said strip being partly in the north half and partly in the south half of the west half of the northwest quarter of said Section 3, described as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of the northerly right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company and the south line of the south center line of said Section 3, thence north along said center line of Section 3, 66 feet to a point, thence easterly and parallel with the said right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company 858 feet more or less to a point in the southerly right of way line of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, thence southeasterly along said right of way line a distance of 273 feet more or less to an intersection of said right of way line with the aforesaid right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company, thence westerly along the last-mentioned line 618 feet to the point of beginning.

Also a strip of land 66 feet wide and 660 feet long more or less, running in a nearly east and west direction across the east half of the east half of the northwest quarter of Section 3, Township 36 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian, said strip being partly in the south half and partly in the south half of the said east half of the east half of the northwest quarter of said Section 3, and being north of and adjoining the right of way of the Chicago Junction Railway Company; also a piece of land in the west half of the east half of the northwest quarter of said Section 3, Township 36 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian, said piece of land lying partly in the north half and partly in the south half of the said west half of the east half of the northwest quarter of Section 3, and described as follows:

Beginning at the intersection of the north and south center line of the east half of the west half of Section 3 with the northerly right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company, thence westerly along said right of way line 405 feet more or less to the intersection of the said right of way line with the right of way line of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, thence northeasterly along the last mentioned line a distance of 825 feet more or less to a point 71.8 feet north of the said right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company, thence easterly parallel with the said right of way line of the Chicago Junction Railway Company 86 feet to the said north and south center line of the east half of the west half of Section 3, thence south along said north and south center line 71.8 feet to the point of beginning, in Cook County, Illinois.

Also a strip of land 120 feet wide in the northwest fractional quarter of fractional Section 5, Township 36 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian, described as follows:

Beginning at a point where the south right of way line of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company intersects the west line of the said northwest fractional quartar of fractional Section 5, and extending thence east along said right of way line 1,104.98 feet more or less to a corner of land of the Illinois Brick Company, thence south 120 feet to a point, thence west parallel with the said right of way line 1,104.98 feet more or less to the said west line of the northwest fractional quarter of fractionel Section 5, thence north along said line 120 feet to the place of beginning, in Cook County, Illinois.

Also an irregular piece of land in the northwest fractional quarter of fractional Section 5, Township 36 north, Range 14, east of the Third Principal Meridian, north of the Indian Boundary Line, said strip being described as follows:

Beginning at a point where the south right of way line of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company intersects the division line between the land of Henry Homeier and the land of the grantors, and extending thence east along said right of way line 1,868.81 feet more or less to a point which is 411.19 feet west of the intersection of the said right of way line with the said Indian Boundary Line, thence southwestward 844.3 feet to a point which is 120 feet south of said right of way line of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, thence west, parallel with the said right of way line, 1,033.11 feet more or less to the said division line between the lands of Henry Homeier and the lands of the grantors, thence north 120 feet to the place of beginning, situated in Cook County, Illinois.

Also a strip or tract of land 15 feet in uniform width, being all that part of the south three-fourths of the east half of the northeast quarter and of the north 40 acres of the southeast quarter, Section 12, Township 37 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian, lying east of a line 385 feet east of and parallel with the east line of the present right of way of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, as the same runs through the said south three-fourths of the east half of the northeast quarter and the north 40 acres of the southeast quarter of said Section 12, in Cook County, Illinois.

Also the east 633 feet of the north 20 acres of the west 30 acres of the north 60 acres of the southeast quarter of Section 12, Township 37 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian, (said 20 acres being the north half of the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 12 aforesaid); also that part of the south five-eighths of the west half of the northeast quarter of Section 12, Township 37 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian, lying between the west line of right of way of the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company as the same extends through said south five-eighths of the west half of the northeast quarter of said Section 12, and a line drawn parallel with and 66 feet west of the west line of said right of way, Cook County, Illinois.

Also the property, railroad, and right of way between Fourteenth Street and Thirty-ninth Street in the City of Chicago, County of Cook, and State of Illinois, acquired by the defendant Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company from the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company in exchange for the railroad between the above mentioned points constructed under the charter of the Chicago Central Railway Company, the title to which said last mentioned railroad has been transferred to and vested in the Union Stock Yards and Transit Company or the Chicago Junction Railway Company.

Also the north half of Lot 10 in School Trustees' Subdivision of Section 16, Township 39 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian.

Also 10.41 acres, more or less, described as follows, to wit: The north 20 acres of the west 20 acres of the north 60 acres, excepting the east 633 feet thereof, formerly sold to the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company, and 20 acres being the north half of the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of Section 12, Township 37 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian, Cook County, Illinois.

Also all that part of the northeast quarter of Section 12, Township 37 north, Range 13, east of the Third Principal Meridian, where it is crossed by the second branch diverging as above stated. The second branch will run from the said point of divergence southerly and westerly under Lexington Avenue and 35th Street to Fifth Avenue, where it will rejoin the branch first above described at a point between 34th and 35th Streets. From the last mentioned point, the route of this Section will run southerly under Fifth Avenue along Madison Square and into Broadway; thence southerly under Broadway to a point about half way between 17th and 18th Streets.

Section 5-D-2: Begins at the southerly end of Section 5-D-3 and runs southerly under Broadway (passing under Union Square) to a point about 50 feet north of Reade Street.

Section 5-D-1: Begins at the southerly end of Section 5-D-2, and runs thence southerly under Broadway, Vesey Street, Church Street, Trinity Place and Greenwich Street to a suitable terminus under Battery Park.

The general plan of construction calls for a railroad placed in subways or tunnels. The road is intended to be operated by electricity or some other power not requiring combustion within the tunnels and the motors are intended to be capable of moving trains at a speed of not less than forty miles per hour for long distances, exclusive of stops.

For all of Sections 5-C-1, 5-C-2, 5-C-3 and 5-A there will be four tracks. For Section 5-B there will be two tracks. For Section 5-C-1 and Section 5-C-2, there will be two tracks. In the two tunnels described as Section 5-C-3, there will be one track. For Section 5-D-3 there will be four tracks as far south as the point between 36th and 37th Streets, where the line diverges as above described; there will be two tracks from the point of divergence through 36th Street and Fifth Avenue to the point where the lines reunite and two tracks from the point of divergence through Lexington Avenue and 35th Street to the point in Fifth Avenue where the lines reunite, and for the remainder of the distance southerly under Fifth Avenue and Broadway there will be four tracks. For Section 5-D-2, there will be four tracks. For Section 5-D-1, there will be four tracks to the Chambers Street Station. South of the Chambers Street station southerly under Broadway, Vesey Street, Trinity Place and Greenwich Street there will be two tracks. Additional tracks for terminal purposes are to be constructed under Battery Place and Battery Park. Suitable stations, as shown on the plans, together with crossovers, turnouts, and sidings as may be necessary, are to be provided.

The tracks are to be of standard gauge. The tunnels are to have a height of not less than 18 feet in the clear; and a maximum width of 15 feet for each track, except at stations, curves, &c., where the width may be increased. The roof of the tunnels is generally to be as near the surface of streets as street conditions and grades will permit, but will be depressed whenever necessary to avoid grade crossings as well as where approaching the Harlem River. The roof and sides of the tunnels will be of iron or steel and masonry.

Entrances to stations will in general be placed within private property, rights in which will be required for the purpose.

Construction is to be generally carried on by means of tunnelling or excavation under cover, except as may be otherwise especially provided in the contract, or in places where the Board shall give express permission to construct by open excavation. In the City Hall Park, Battery Park, or other places under the jurisdiction of the Department of Parks, all trees injured or destroyed in the course of construction are to be replaced by the contractor under the direction and to the satisfaction of said Department.

The Board has included in the detailed plans for construction, provisions for pipe galleries through and along the principal longitudinal streets of all portions of the route except Sections 5-A and 5-C-3. Bids for the construction of the Railroad on any one or more of these Sections must be accompanied by bids for the construction of the pipe galleries appurtenant to such section or sections; and if not so accompanied will not be considered by the Board. The Board reserves the right to accept a bid for the construction of any section of the Railroad and at the same time to reject the accompanying bid for pipe galleries.

The Board has also included in its detailed plans for construction, provisions for third tracks in 35th and 36th Streets; and for two additional tracks under Greenwich Street, Battery Place and Battery Park south of Morris Street, and additional station and terminal facilities in Battery Park. Such additional tracks and facilities are intended ultimately to form part of other railways heretofore duly authorized and approved. Bids for the construction of Sections 5-D-3 and 5-D-2 must be accompanied by separate bids for the construction of such additional tracks and station and terminal facilities; and if not so accompanied will not be considered by the Board.

If proposals satisfactory to the Board are received for the construction of one or more of the several parts of the Railroad as above described, the Board may contract (subject to the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment as provided by law) for those parts for which satisfactory proposals are received, reserving the right to make a separate contract or contracts thereafter for the remaining part or parts.

A fuller description of the said routes is set forth, and other requirements, provisions, details and specifications are stated in the printed form of contract now on file in the office of the Board, No. 320 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, and in the detailed drawings therein referred to, at which office copies of the contract and of the form of bond and contractor's proposal may be had on application. The contract drawings may be inspected at the same office. The printed form of contract and the detailed drawings are to be deemed a part of this Invitation.

The words "the Railroad" wherever used in this Invitation are to be construed to mean the part or parts included in any contract entered into in pursuance hereof.

Payments to the contractor for construction will be made monthly as the work proceeds, as provided in the form of contract.

The work of construction (including pipe galleries and the additional tracks and terminal facilities above mentioned) is to be completed as soon as practicable, and within the periods mentioned in the form of contract.

Proposals may be submitted for construction alone; or, at the option of the bidder, for construction, equipment, maintenance, and operation.

In case a satisfactory proposal is received from any person, firm or corporation to construct, equip, maintain and operate the Railroad, the contract will provide for maintenance and operation for a term of twenty years, and for a renewal thereof for a further term of twenty years from the expiration of the original term, all as stated in the form of contract; the contractor to pay an annual rental for the use of the Railroad which shall be ascertained as stated in the form of contract and which shall begin as soon as any portion of the Railroad shall be declared by the Board to be ready for operation.

Sealed bids or proposals will be received at the said office of the Board, at No. 320 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, until the 25th day of April, 1907, at twelve o'clock noon, at which time or at a later date to be fixed by the Board the proposals will be publicly opened.

Proposals shall be in the form prescribed by the Board, copies of which may be obtained at the office of the Board.

Each proposal must be signed and acknowledged and also verified by an affidavit of the bidder (or if it be a corporation then by an officer thereof) to the effect that the several matters therein stated are in all respects true. If the proposal is made by a firm, it will be sufficient if the proposal is signed and acknowledged, and the affidavit sworn to, by one member of the firm.

Each proposal must specify an office within the City of New York at which notices may be delivered; and delivery of a notice at such office shall be deemed a sufficient delivery and notice to the bidder.

Each proposal or bid must contain the name and place of residence of the person or persons making the same, the names of all persons interested with him therein, and if no other person be so interested, it shall distinctly state that fact; and if the bidder shall be a corporation, there shall be submitted a certified copy of its certificate of incorporation, with a certificate of the amount of stock paid in in cash, and the names and business addresses of all officers and directors of the corporation shall also be stated; also, that it is made without any connection with any other person making a proposal or bid for the same purpose, and is in all respects fair and without collusion or fraud, and that no member of the Board of Aldermen, head of department, chief of bureau, deputy thereof or clerk therein, or other officer of the corporation, or any member or employe of the Board, is interested, directly or indirectly, as contracting party, partner, stockholder, or otherwise, in or in the performance of the Contract, or in the supplies, work or business to which it relates, or in any portion of the profits thereof.

Bidders shall specify separately in their proposals the amounts for which they will construct each separate part as described above; the amounts for which they will construct pipe galleries; the amounts for which they will construct the additional tracks and station and terminal facilities above mentioned if they bid on Sections 5-D-1 or 5-D-3. They may, however, make their bid for any one section of this proposed railroad conditional upon either the acceptance or rejection of their bid for any one or more of the other sections which they shall specify, or upon the acceptance or rejection of their bids for any other Rapid Transit Railroad construction submitted by them at the same time.

The price stated for the construction of each separate part shall include the furnishing of all materials and the performance of all labor requisite to the complete construction of such part, including all sewer and street construction and reconstruction and other work caused by or incidental to the construction of the same as set out in the proposed form of contract.

Bidders who submit proposals to construct and also to equip, maintain and operate the Railroad, must specify in their proposals in addition to the matters hereinbefore contained, the following:

(A) An estimate of the cost of equipment of the Railroad upon which the proposal is based. This word "equipment" includes motors, cars, machinery, power houses, all real estate upon which any such power houses shall stand, rails, ties, ballast, telephones and telegraph appliances, and all other real and personal property as specified in the form of contract. Such equipment is to remain the property of the contractor, but will be subject to a lien of the City to secure performance by the contractor of all the obligations of the contract, including the payment of a rental under the contract at the rate during its entire term and during any extension thereof.

(B) The maximum fare (not to exceed five cents) which will be charged a single passenger for a continuous ride over the whole or any part of the Railroad.

(C) What transportation facilities over railways connecting or to connect with the Rapid Transit Railroad the contractor will assure to the City, specifying separately in Schedule A forming part of the proposal the connecting lines over which a continuous trip shall be assured to passengers for a single fare not exceeding five cents, but with or without change of cars at the option of the contractor; and in Schedule C forming part of the proposal the connecting lines over which a continuous trip shall be assured to passengers with or without change of cars at the option of the contractor, for fares exceeding five cents per trip but within limitations to be specified.

No proposal will be allowed to be withdrawn for any reason whatever after it shall have been deposited with the Board.

The Board is not obliged by law to accept any of the proposals received by it but may reject all such proposals and readvertise, or may accept any of such proposals as in the judgment of the Board best promote the public interest and award a contract or contracts accordingly, subject to approval by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment as required by law. If any part or parts of the road are not contracted for the Board reserves the right to make a separate contract or separate contracts thereafter for the remaining part or parts.

The award of the contract or contracts (if awarded) will be made by the Board within fifteen

BUSINESS TROUBLES

JACOB MOSCOWITZ.—Jacob Moscowitz, painter and decorator at 1,100 Park Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,519 and normal assets of $404.

JOSEPHINE JOSLIN.—Josephine Joslin, formerly a florist at 2,093 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,512 and assets $517. From Jan. 26, 1904, to Jan. 2, 1906, she was in partnership with Laura Riddle Green.

DORA LEVIN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Dora Levin, dealer in house furnishing goods and crockery at 1,664 Madison Avenue and 1,353 Fifth Avenue, by six creditors, whose claims aggregate $600. It was alleged that she is insolvent and has removed merchandise. She had been in business five years.

W. J. SCHMIDT & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against W. J. Schmidt & Co., a New York corporation, wholesale dealers in paints at 2,750 Third Avenue, by three creditors: Benjamin Moore & Co., $1,042; National Lead Company, $587, and American Linseed Company, $112. It was alleged that while insolvent the corporation permitted a judgment to be obtained against it on March 11 in favor of the Syracuse Company of New York.

A. C. McCLELLAN & SON.—Judge Hough has confirmed a settlement with the creditors of A. C. McClellan & Son, proprietors of the St. Louis Hotel, at 34 East Thirty-second Street, and Carlsbrooke Inn, at Ventnor City, N. J., at 100 cents on the dollar, payable three years from date by a note of Alfred C. McClellan, which is to bear no interest, dividends to be declared and payments made from time to time out of sales of assets and profits of the two hotels.

J. GERSON & SON.—J. Gerson & Son, who kept a large boarding house, bakery, and meat etors at Glen Wild, Sullivan County, have failed to obtain a discharge from bankruptcy. Judge Hough dismissed the petition because it was alleged that they ecught to put over $10,000 worth of property in the hands of a man as absolute owner whose only real claim was a mortgage of $3,200. A creditors' petition was filed against them on Jan. 18, 1904, and their liabilities were $8,179.

MAX ROUCHWERGER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Max Rouchwerger, a shoe dealer at 1,040 Second Avenue, by these creditors: A. J. Hanus & Co., $215; J. E. Bates & Co., $1,272, and the Standard Shoe Company, $193. It was alleged that at midnight of April 1 all his stock was removed to an auction room on East Houston Street. He received over $1,000 for it, it is alleged, and concealed the money. Judge Holt appointed George B. Leonard receiver. It was stated that he had bought large quantities of shoes lately on statements showing assets of $5,000. There was to have been an auction of the shoes yesterday, but Judge Holt stopped it by an injunction. A custodian was placed in the auction rooms to watch the shoes. There was much excitement when the sale was stopped and the police had to be called to preserve order.

QUEENS—FOR SALE.

Beechhurst on the Sound.

Opposite Fort Schuyler. 11 miles From 34th St.

At Whitestone Landing.

This new residence park surpasses in beauty of location and environments any suburban development in the vicinity of New York.

Not only is every city improvement here, but tangible evidence of a high-class residential colony. A number of artistic houses are now in course of construction—to be finished in May.

Prices of lots are not based on inflated valuations. We have not discounted transportation improvements You can still profit in the benefits which will accrue from the completion of the Belmont Tunnel next summer. By the time the P. R. R. electric rapid transit is in operation—two years hence—values will have trebled.

THE NEW BRONX

ORMONDE PARK

BUILDING LOTS,	$95 TO $400 FULL SIZE	$5 Down, $3 Monthly. 10% Discount for All Cash

(Located at City Line of New York City.) Frontage on the famous Merrick Road. Just escaping heavy taxes, but first to benefit by the enormous expenditures of the Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroad.

Third-rail system in operation—proof-positive there will be enormous demand for home sites at Ormonde Park, THE NEW BRONX, where the history of the Old Bronx will be repeated.

Investors need not go to obscure places, remote from the line of improvements. Here is a golden opportunity to purchase property where values will increase by leaps and bounds when the tunnel is finished.

This Company will build for their lot buyers artistic cottages of seven rooms or more. Concrete foundations, with cellars under all, for $2,000 and upward, and will accept small monthly payments as rentals.

Our cottage buyers will be glad to show their superior homes built by this Company.

Lots that were sold in the Bronx a few years ago for $1,000 now sell for $7,000. There is exactly the same opportunity at Ormonde Park, with this difference:—Increased valuations will come ten times as soon, because ten times the effort and money are being spent for your benefit at Ormonde Park.

CITY IS FACING PERIOD OF ECONOMY

Finances in Such Shape That Some Improvements Must Be Held Up.

DEBT MARGIN NARROWS

City Officials Fear New Court House, New Bridge, and Subway Plans Must Be Postponed.

The city's financial advisers and the Mayor and officials having to do with the management of the city's finances have come to the conclusion that the city is face to face with the necessity for rigid economy in expenditures. They take it for granted that there must be an era of retrenchment all along the line. The new Court House scheme will probably be abandoned temporarily, as will Borough President Ahearn's plan for a new sewer system.

The proposition of Bridge Commisisoner Steveneon for a new East River bridge will also probably go by the board, and should the city find itself compelled to build its own subways, there is likelihood that only the Lexington Avenue line will be built. This and the Seventh and Eighth Avenue lines would cost approximately $40,000,000, a sum which the city cannot afford.

According to a report submitted yesterday to Mayor McClellan by the Advisory Commission on Taxation and Finance, of which Edgar J. Levey is chairman, the city's predicament is due to the debt limit. The commission regards the city finances in such a light that they advise the passage of a constitutional amendment increasing the city's debtmaking power.

The report finds that prior to consolidation the Controller did not have to regard the debt limit, thus intimating that the consolidation of what are now the various boroughs of the city has much to do with the financial embarrassment of the city at present.

Debt Limit Near.

The commission gives a table showing the margin available Jan. 1 last to be $31,143,218.73, which includes the increase due to enhanced real estate values last year. Deducting the difference between revenue bonds issued between 1902 and 1950 and the amount of corporate stock authorized to offset the arrears of uncollectible taxes, brings the margin down to $25,438,218.73.

The following paragraph from the report intimates that the Commissioners believe the bigh water market in real estate figures is near at hand:

It is estimated that the increase in real estate assessments for 1907 will be about $300,000,000, 10 per cent. of which would be $30,000,000. It is to be borne in mind, however, that the real estate assessments in this city have of recent years been constantly approaching more and more nearly the theoretical limit of 100 per cent., or full valuation; also that the past few years have been years of great prosperity and enhancing values of real estate. It does not seem to your commission that in estimating such increases in future years a higher average than $30,000,000 should be assumed for this item.

The commission concludes that the average annual increase in the debt limit will be about $43,100,000, amounting in five years to $215,500,000, which added to the present margin would make the debt incurring capacity during the five years $240,038,218.

The report then sets forth that it is a question whether financial conditions will not force a period of economy. It is recited that the city is committed to certain improvements, such as schoolhouses, the Hudson Memorial Bridge, the subway loop between the bridges, and the enlarged Bellevue Hospital. These and other improvements, including subways, would bring the expenditure about $25,000,000 beyond the estimated debt limit within the next five years. The report continues:

To review the situation, therefore, it would seem that one of three alternatives must be accepted: Either (1) the city must enter into a period of enforced economy in the way of capital expenditure, reaching even so far as the complete abandonment of such public improvements as are not to be regarded as absolutely essential, and a severe retrenchment in regard to even such important needs as schoolhouses and street improvements; or (2) assessed valuations must be forced upward to a degree which your commission can but regard as unnatural and likely to result in hardship and injustice; or (3) provision should be made for an amendment to the Constitution increasing the city's power to incur debt.

Then, after discussing the feasibility of such a course, it makes the suggestion that the Constitution be amended to exempt not only the water bonds, but the bonds for the construction of subways and for dock improvements. The report concludes by calling attention to the fact that such an amendment cannot be put through and become operative before 1910.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 3.—The destruction of the power house of the San Francisco Gas and Electric Light Company at Twenty-second Avenue South and Georgia Street, by fire last night, plunged almost the entire city into darkness, resulted in the injuring of five firemen, one of whom will die, and caused a loss estimated at $2,500,000.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 3.—After a stubborn fight, in which the entire Cambridge Fire Department was assisted by Boston and Somerville apparatus, a threatening blaze in the manufacturing district of the city early to-day was confined to the five-story brick building occupied by the Ira G. Hersey planing mill. The loss is estimated at from $35,000 to $50,000.

CINCINNATI, April 3.—The sawmill of the Maisy, Thompson & Moffett Lumber Company, at Eighth and Evans Streets, burned to-day. The loss was $50,000.

Of Trade School's 224 Graduates, 28 Get Honor Rolls, 3 Gold Medals.

Graduates of the New York Trade School, First Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street, received their diplomas at the twenty-sixth annual commencement exercises of the Institution last night. R. Fulton Cutting, President of the Board of Trustees of the school, presided and gave a parting talk to the 224 newly fledged craftsmen, and Martin W. Littleton, former Borough President of Brooklyn, delivered the graduating address. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., banded to the honor men of the class the certificates of their excellent work.

Of the graduating class of 224 there were 28 that received "honor rolls" for exceptional ability. Of the whole class only 30 were from New York City, of whom 5 were "honor" men.

Gold medals for high standard of work were awarded to Frank Taylor of Waterbury, Conn.; Frederick J. Weider of Rochester, and John Edward Miller of Erie, Penn. Thomas F. Crawford of New York City received a set of technical books for the greatest progress made by any single student.

GOT $1,500 IN PEARLS EASILY.

Swindler Used Firm's Name by Telephone and Then Called for Gems.

Four Oriental pearls, costing $1,500 at wholesale, were intrusted two weeks ago by a member of the firm of Benedict & Warner, importers, at 21 Maiden Lane, to a young man who, it was learned yesterday, was a swindler.

The young man, who gave the name Theodore Phipps, had a confederate who telephoned that C. W. Schumann's Sons of 937 Broadway, desired some pearls and would send a clerk for them. The voice heard at the telephone was deep toned and had a German accent. In about the time that would be required for the trip from the Broadway store to Maiden Lane the young man appeared and asked for the pearls.

Mr. Warner showed a quantity of pearls, and the caller, who had a pair of tweezers and handled the gems like a dealer, selected three that were round and one that was button-shaped, but his eye for color was amateurish, as he took those with a yellow tinge in preference to others of a rich creamy tint. The four pearls were about the same in weight, their total weight being 42¼ grains.

The advance message by telephone and the businesslike air of Mr. Phipps carried through the transaction without any suspicion being aroused. He folded the pearls in a tissue paper package, which he placed in his pocket, and said "good day," not even being asked to sign a receipt.

When Schumann Brothers got the bill the fraud was discovered. The "Mr. Phipps" for whom the detectives are looking was about 20 years of age, dark in complexion, and had a smooth face and manner.

THAW IS SANE SAYS BOARD

Jerome Will Take an Appeal Against Its Pronouncement.

TRIAL MEANWHILE WAITS

District Attorney Contends He Was Wrongfully Barred from Examination.

CAN'T SEE THE RECORDS

Court Refuses to Allow Jerome to Inspect the Proceedings of the Commission.

The Insanity Commission appointed by Justice Fitzgerald to inquire into the present mental condition of Harry K. Thaw, who stands charged with the murder of Stanford White, reported to the court yesterday that Thaw was sane and entirely capable of continuing on trial.

District Attorney Jerome had expected such a report, although he has held stanchly to the belief that Thew wes insane throughout the trial, and ehould not have been put in peril of his life. When he received a copy of the report yesterday afternoon in Justice Fitzgerald's court, the District Attorney did not even open it to learn its nature. Instead he began to address the court, urging that the report be not confirmed until he had had ample opportunity to object to it should it be against his contention that Thaw is insane.

It was learned last night that District Attorney Jerome will appeal from the decision of Justice Fitzgerald refusing to allow Mr. Jerome to inspect the minutes of the commission. The appeal will be in the nature of an action to obtain a review of the Justice's decision and will be taken in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Earlier in the day the District Attorney said he would not seek for a review of the Justice's adjudication on the point until he came to the conclusion, after considering all the facts, that Justice Fitzgerald had erred.

Mr. Jerome announced to the court that he would make an effort to obtain from the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court a writ of prohibition or a writ of mandamus to prevent the confirming of the report of the commission. When asked later to make a further statement on this point, he said:

Jerome May Appeal.

"I do not care to discuss the case, because in my opinion it would be unseemly to do so. I could not tell until I have examined the authorities and the facts whether I ought to take eny further action or not in the way of an application to the Appellate Division. When I have gone over the facts in my possession and examined the law on the subject, should I be of the opinion that the learned presiding Justice has committed legal error. I will seek to review his adjudication if the authorities permit. Should I on the other hand reach the conclusion that he has not committed error, I will, of course, take no further action. The decision of the court is a most important one, not alone in its bearing on the Thaw cese, hut especially as forming a precedent for the conduct of such inquiries, and while I greatly deplore the delay it is of the highest public importance that the procedure in cases of this kind should be clearly settled."

The copy of the report given to the defense was fairly ripped open by Mr. Hartridge. Thaw's attorney of record skimmed through it. He had conducted the case alone in the sitting of the commission, and success or failure in his effort to prove Thaw sane and capsble of conferring with counsel affected his professional reputation. Mr. Delmas had practically retired from all court connection with the case.

A smile overspread Mr. Hartridge's face as he read. He turned and whispered the result to his colleagues and sent his confidential clerk to Thaw's mother, wife, and sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, to tell them the news.

In the corridor leading from the prisoners' pen to the courtroom Thaw sat with A. Russell Peabody, anxiously waiting the word to enter and face the court. He has been calm throughout the sittings of the commission. At the last moment, however, ne becams very nervous, and hie anxiety wae painful, both to himself and Mr. Peabody. When the jury was again ordered before Justice Fitzgerald and Clerk Penny called: "Harry K. Thaw to the har!" Thaw entered the courtroom and glanced swiftly at his lawyers and then to where his wife, mother, and sister sat. He saw the good news in their smiling faces. As he sat down Mr. Hartridge handed him the decision.

Mr. Jerome made it known immediately that if he must lose in his fight to prevent Thaw'e fate being put in the hands of the jury, he intended to lose fighting. He paused in his speech to the court and glanced through the copy of the report of the commission. This is what he read:

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION.

"To the Supreme Court:

"We, the undersigned, appointed hy this court, hy orders dated March 26, 1907, and March 27, 1907, a Commission forthwith to examine into the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw and to report to the court with all convenient speed the facts and their opinion as to whether, at the time of such examination, Harry K. Thaw was in a state of idiocy, imbecility, lunacy or insanity, so as to he incapable of rightly understanding his own condition, the nature of the charges against him, and of conducting hie defense in a rational manner, do respectfully report

"That before commencing our examination we took the oath prescribed hy statute;

"That the Commission was organized by the selection of David McClure as

FEDERAL AID AVERTS STRIKE.

Western Railroads and Employes Brought to End Dispute.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 4.—In the settlement of the railroad strike dispute to-day President Roosevelt's peace envoys achieved a signal victory for the principle of conciliation in labor controversies of that magnitude. All danger of a tie-up of the railroads of the West now is averted through an agreement effected late in the afternoon between the railroad managers and their train service employes.

The settlement was arranged by Chairman Knapp of the Inter-State Commerce Commission and Commissioner Neill of the Government's Department of Labor. It will be formally ratified to-day. By its terms the trainmen will get an advance of wages of about 10 per cent., or 2 per cent. less than was demanded. The employes waived their nine-hour request, which was not seriously considered as a factor in their negotiations hy either side. In round figures, the railroad employes will profit during the coming year to the amount of $5,500,000. The number of men who will gain hy the advanced wage scales is close to 50,000.

Both sides to the controversy expressed themselves to-night as highly pleased over the solution accomplished by the Federal agents. They spoke without restriction in praise of the Federal conciliation idea.

"Undouhtedly this will merk en edvance in the settlement of all labor disputes, so far as the railroads and their employes ere concerned," said Ira G. Rawn, Chairman of the General Managers Committee.

"I feel safe in saying that the railroad unions hereafter will heve regard for the public interests," said Chief Garrettson, "and that they cennot suhmit their case in any controversy with their employers through a hetter channel than that provided hy the Erdmann law."

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The following correspondence regarding the settlement of the strike on the Western railroads entering Chicago was made public to-night:

Chicago, Ill., April 4, 1907.
President Roosevelt, Washington:
Complete settlement effected, result highly satisfactory. A distinct triumph for Government mediation.
MARTIN A. KNAPP,
Chairman Interstate Commerce Commission.
CHARLES P. NEILL,
Commissioner of Labor.

The President's reply:

Washington, D. C., April 4, 1907.
Hon. Martin A. Knapp, Chairman Interstate Commerce Commission; Hon. Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor, Chicago:
Am greatly pleased and heartily congratulate you both.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

ALSO MARRIED SECRETLY.

Bristow Draper's Chum Followe His Example.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 4.—Clarence Howard Lapworth of Hopedale, Mass., son of a webbing manufacturer there and a chum of Bristow Draper, son of Lieut. Gov. Draper of Massachusetts, whose secret wedding to Queenie Sanford stirred society last week, has followed in that young man's footsteps and likewise married in secret and "out of his set."

On Tuesday night Mr. Lapworth came here with Miss Lillian Spicer of Hopedale, obtained a license, and they were married hy the Rev. Father Fiske of St. Stephen's Church. Where the couple are passing their honeymoon is not known here. Mr. Lapworth gave his age as 27 end that of his bride as 22. She is a blond, and is employed in a Boston dressmaking and millinery establishment.

COST OF LIVING LESS.

Commodity Pricee Fall, Partly Because the Hen Is Buey.

A decline of nearly 2 per cent. in commodity prices in March is attributed by Dun's Index Number in large measure to the Spring activities of the American hen and the consequent decline in the price of eggs of 10½ cents a dozen, which resulted in a heavy increase in the per capita consumption.

It is usual at this time of year for the prices of dairy and garden products to recede, but lest month the decline was exceptional. Commenting on the causes of the decline, outside of the influence of the break in eggs, Dun's mentions the relief to railway freight hlockades, that made it possible to move grain and many other products more freely to market, and the feeling of conservatism in some industries, which restricted purchases of raw materials.

"That all these factors did not carry prices quite down to the level of a year ago," says Dun's, "indicates that confidence is still strong and consumption close to, if not quite at, the maximum."

CHAT WITH A SPOOK.

Kettles Float in Air in a Ohio House When Ghoet Visits It.

PIQUA, Ohio, April 4.—Ghostly manifestations in the Heeter home, three miles east of Sonora, in Prehle County, have drawn hundreds of venturesome persons to the scene. Not only by rappings in the house does the spirit give evidence of its presence, but out in the yard the pump handle moves up and down, impelled by some invisihle force, while the water flows freely. A sound of thumping is heard as if on a metal washtub, and kettles rise from the stove, float ahout in the air, and then return to their places. Charles Hiller tells of a conversation he had with the ghost.

"I first asked the invisible visitor how long it had been in the house and to give a rap for each month. It gave eight raps," he said. "'Now,' said I,' I will begin at the top of the alphabet and name the letters as they go down, and when I come to the letters of your name in regular order, rap once.'"

When he came to M it rapped. He then went back to the beginning, and when he spoke A it rapped again, and so it kept it up until it epelled the name Martha Donald."

It then told by rapping of money that had heen hurled, and said that if Mrs. Heeter would go out near the harn when she was near the place it would give three rape in the house. Mrs. Heeter is infirm and cannot walk.

BENJAMIN THAW'S GIFT.

$50,000 to the Western University of Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—Benjamin Thaw, a half hrother of Harry K. Thaw, now on trial for the murder of Stanford White, has donated $50.000 to the fund for the proposed new huilding for the Western University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Thaw tendered the subscription to Chancellor S. B. McCormick some time ago, but the fact was not made public until to-day.

POOLROOM BUSINESS $8,000,000 A YEAR

District Attorney's Office Finds Another Big Batch of Evidence in Raid.

GRADY INDORSES A CHECK

Two Central Telephone Distributing Plants Unearthed in a Day and Two More Arrests Made.

The District Attorney's office made another poolroom raid in the building in Cedar, near West Street, yesterday, this time tackling the fourth floor, and it proved highly fruitful in results. Two other floors, the second and third, had already been raided with succese in obtaining evidence on Tuesday and Wednesday, but the onslaught of yesterday showed even more clearly the tremendous scope of the operations of the downtown racehorse gamesters' syndicate and the great volume of their husiness.

On the fourth floor of the structure Assistant District Attorney Vandiver found evidence that another telephone distrihuting centre hed existed there, sixteen instruments having been in use. On the floor helow fifteen telephones had been operated. To complete his astonishment, Mr. Vandiver found another hatch of check vouchers, valuahle as evidence, account books, and memoranda.

The most important discovery of all was a strip of paper which had meant $2,212.37 to an individual who has been variously referred to as "T. G.," "T. Grady," "Tommy," "Sen. G.," and "Senator Grady." The check was indorsed by the name of the same Thomas F. Gredy, against whom John Doe proceedings have been hegun.

Lawyer Dan O'Reilly says he will produce this man in court when the time comes to prove that he is not his friend, Senator Thomes F. Grady. Although neither District Attorney Jerome nor his assistant, Mr. Vandiver, would talk about the check this is known to the signature on the back of it.

The amount is suspiciously like the "divvies" recorded in the Davis-Reilly syndicate ledgers, made puhlic a few days ago hy Mr. Jerome. The man who drew the check is also a person known in poolroom circles as "R. H. D." It was paid to "Tommy" hy an ohliging friend whom Assistant District Attorney Vandiver thought it wise to call hefore him in the course of the day.

It was possihle, he thought, that the lawyer for the defense might object to mere documentary evidence, so he accepted an affidavit hy the man who had cashed the check for the now well-known "T. G."

After his experiences on three floors of the Cedar Street building, Mr. Vandiver said yesterday:

"We are going to try the roof and climh down the chimneys next."

A feature brought out in the newly acquired evidence is the remarkable development of the poolroom husiness for the Davis-Reilly syndicate in the last few years. When District Attorney Jerome made public the contents of the ledgers a few nights ago he stopped at the year 1901 hecause he did not want to encroach on the period covered by the Statute of Limitations.

Mr. Vandiver would not go into details about the newly-found papers, but it was learned that the hunch of 2,000 or more check vouchers which he found on the third floor of the Cedar Street huilding showed that in a recent year, preceding 1906, the Davis-Reilly syndicate paid out in losses and winnings, through one hank only, $1,752,427.87.

In the course of the present poolroom crusade the truth was revealed in one instance that the syndicate did husiness with no less than six banks. That on this hasis the moneys paid out hy the syndicate in losses and winnings can easily he placed at $8,000,000 or $9,000,000 annually seems apparent.

Mr. Vandiver had a telephone message from the New York Telephone Company yesterday morning that startled him a little. From what he learned over the wire he and Deputy Commissioner Hanson hurried to 835 Broadway. The message had conveyed the information that the main wires leading to a room on the fourth floor of that huilding had been cut in the night.

Investigation proved this to be a fact. The room indicated had undouhtedly been another poolroom telephone exchange. No less than twenty-two wires had run into this room. An electric clock in the place indicated that the connection had been severed at 11:50 o'clock on Wednesday night. The out was made somewhere in the cellar of the huilding.

The connection was evidently with the main distributing etation in Jersey City, where, it is believed, the information was received direct from the race track. The switchboard thus cut off is believed to have been connected with one of the uptown nest of poolroome ahout which the District Attorney is not concerned at present. The leading spirits of this system evidently thought that the raiders were getting too olose to them for safety and decided to make other connections.

In the morning Deputy Police Commissioner Haneon received word that a man who had won $15 in an Ann Street poolroom had "squealed," because he had been unahle to collect his money, and a visit was paid to that place. Two men were arrested.

One of them gave his name as Fred Judson, who said he lived in Brooklyn, the other said that he was John Gregory, and that he lived in Monroe Street, Manhattan. They were hoth taken before Magietrate Wahle, in the Centre Street Court, who held them in $100 hail each for examination to-day.

The John Doe proceedings before Magistrate Barlow in the Criminal Court Building will be resumed to-day. Their purpose is to determine whether the District Attorney hae evidence enough to formally proceed with the prosecution of the six men he has reason to helieve have been reaping the financial benefit of the downtown syndicate for the last decade. The "T. Grady" is among them.

Obtaining precise facts and figures about the business of the gambling bosses has heen a difficult matter hecause of the guarded wey in which entries were made in accounts by hookkeepers of evident skill.

Palpably it had been anticipated that some day the booke and papers of the syndicate would fall into the hands of unsympathetic persons. There were experts employed in the office of W. D. Miller & Co., where the "high-thinking part" was played for the syndicate.

MISS McCLENAHAN ESCAPES.

Gets Away from Her Conservator—Believed to be in New York.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 4.—Assisted by the trained nurse who was engaged to watch her, and by two girl friends, Miss Giles Gamhle McClenahen of New Canaan, Conn, the heirese of the late William McClenahan, who made a fortune in the shoe business in New York, has run away from the McClenehan mansion in New Canaan, where, while nominally free to a certain extent, she had really been under strict restraint since her father died last Spring.

Miss McClenahan is 35 years old, and an only child, and her father left over $500,000 in trust for her. For some time before his death Miss McClenshan's conduct had heen so erratic as to attract puhlic attention to her. Dr. C. H. Scoville, the McClenahan family physician, took charge of her after her father's death, and just as soon as the matter could be arranged the Prohate Court declared her incompetent and appointed Dr. Scoville conservator over her. The testimony showed that she was addicted to the use of stimulants and drugs.

Last week Miss Lillian Richter of 317 East Eighty-sixth Street, New York, a friend of Miss McClenahan, went to New Canaan to visit Miss Dora Seeth of East Avenue. The two young women called several times on Miss McClenahan, and one Tuesday afternoon they and the nurse took Miss McClenahan for a drive. They drove to Bedford, N. Y., whence they took a train to New York. They heve not returned yet, and it is believed they are stopping at the residence of Miss Richter in New York.

H. A. Herold, an attorney of 198 Broadway, New York, has been retained hy Miss McClenahan, and he was in communication to-day with Dr. Scoville, who went to New York in an effort to get Miss McClenahan heck into the jurisdiction of the Connecticut courts. She refused to return, and it is understood that she is about to begin proceedings looking to the removal of the conservator.

SAYS GOVERNOR IS LOBBYING.

Charges Made in the House Stir Connecticut Legislators.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 4.—The House of Representatives was stirred up at today's session by a speech from Representative Higgins (Republican) of Coventry, who indirectly accused the Governor's office of instituting a lobby and working in an underhand manner to obtain passage of a bill to have the Connecticut Agricultural College at Storrs removed to a more central location.

"From a certain office in the Capitol huilding a request, even a demand, has gone out that this bill must be passed," he said. "Let us away with this underhand method of doing husiness. Let us not be accused of selfishness; let us not be overridden by lohhying of this kind. I say to you that it is only a scheme of those who cannot get us in one way to get us in another."

Gov. Woodruff desires power to appoint a commission to inquire into the actual merit of the college as a State institution, and whether or not it would be of greater benefit to the State if it were on the line of a railroad. The Farmers' Association of the General Assembly, which numbers more than a majority of the House, opposes the Governor.

PITTSBURG HONORS THE "28."

Many of the Distinguished Sone at the Chamber's Dinner.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—The Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce gave its banquet to "distinguished sons" to-night. Few of the honored guests were among the speakers, but the names of all are known from one end of the world to the other in the fields of art, industry, science, diplomacy, and statecraft.

The dinner was held at the Hotel Schenley. While all of the twenty-eight honor guests did not attend, all who were able to be present were there. Among those who did not attend were Andrew Carnegie, H. C. Frick, P. C. Knox, and Gen. Young. Three hundred members and guests listened to the speeches, which were devoted to what Pittshurg has contributed to the world in the various fields of effort.

Mayor George W. Guthrie was toastmaster, and the speakers were: D. T. Watson, on "The Nature and Purposes of Municipal Government"; Congressman John Daizell, on "Greater Pittshurg's Contrihution to the Nation"; Col. H. G. Prout, on "Greater Pittshurg's Contrihution to the World in Saving Life and Labor," and Dr. J. A. Brashear, on "Greater Pittshurg's Contrihution to Science."

"The men who have done things," who were named as the guests of honor, were:

John W. Alexander, painter.
John A. Brashear, scientist.
W. J. Holland, scientist.
Andrew Carnegie, capitalist, manufacturer, and philanthropist.
John Daisell, statesman.
Samuel Harden Church, railway official and author.
George Cook Reiter, United States Navy.
The Rev. A. A. Lambing, historian and prelate.
Thomas Wightman, glass manufacturer and writer.
James McCrea, railway official and financier.
D. T. Watson, jurist.
Arthur Nevin, composer.
Philander C. Knox, jurist and statesman.
George Shiras, jurist.
Henry Phipps, manufacturer.
Julian Kennedy, engineer and consulting chemist.
John G. A. Leishman, diplomat.
Henry Kirke Porter, manufacturer.
C. P. Emil Swensson, engineer.
Thomas Ridley, manufacturer.
George W. Guthrie, attorney and Mayor.
Henry Clay Frick, capitalist.
Matthew B. Riddle, minister and author.
George Westinghouse, inventor, manufacturer, and capitalist.
Samuel M. B. Young, U. S. A.
Henry Ossawa Tanner, artist.
James Brown McDowell, physicist.
David D. Wood, musician.

The souvenir book contained brief biographies of the guests of honor.

30 YEARS FOR SCHIFF THIEF.

Ex-Valet Who Struck Employer Gete a Long Term.

Foulke Engel Brandt, the ex-valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, who after being discharged broke into the hanker's house at 932 Fifth Avenue on the night of March 8 and assaulted Mr. Schiff with a tenpin, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions to thirty years' imprisonment for burglary in the first degree. In passing sentence Judge Rosalsky said:

"Men of your etripe must know that to commit euch a crime means to be punished. Any man who enters a house armed with a carving knife and who takes along a tenpin from the bowling alley muet certainly do so with more than a passing interest as to what may happen in an interview with the owner of the house."

Although he might have given him life imprisonment, Judge Rosalsky said that as Brandt was a young man he wished to give him a chance to reform, but he desired to warn others of Brandt's type of the dangers of burglary and dishonesty as much as to punish Brandt.

ARREST FOR SELLING HARRIMAN LETTER

Frank W. Hill, Discharged Clerk, Locked Up to Stop Other Leaks.

WON'T DENY HE SOLD IT

And Admits Having Offered the Document to Others—More Letters for Sale?

Frank W. Hill, the clerk named hy Edward H. Harriman as the former employee whom he suspected of having sold the Webster letter to The World, was arrested late yesterday afternoon, charged with a violation of Section 642 of the Penal Code, which makes it a misdemeanor for any person wilfully and without authority to publish the whole or any part of a letter, telegram or private paper belonging to another person. The complainant was Secretary Alexander Miller of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, who holds the same office in most of the other Harriman railroad systems.

Hill lives at 694 Quincy Street, Brooklyn. A TIMES reporter interviewed him there on Wednesday night, and he said then that he "knew nothing ahout" the letter which The World puhlished. He would not answer directly, however, a question as to whether he had sold it to that newspaper or not. He did say that all his notebooks had heen destroyed when he left the service of the Union Pacific.

Detective Sergeant Flood of Mr. Jerome's staff, with a warrant for Hill's arrest, went down to the hrokerage office of De Goppet & Doremus, at 12 Broadway, ahout 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and asked for Hill, who had recently found employment there. Hill was called out, told that he was under arrest, and directed to get his hat and coat. He was greatly worried over the turn things had taken, and it looked for a time as though he would collapse, but he pulled himself together and went with Flood to the Criminal Court Building.

Assistant District Attorney Paul Krotel was in charge of the case. He read to Hill the section of the Penal Code under which he was arrested. It says:

A person who wilfully and without authority takes a letter, telegram, or private paper belonging to another and publishes the whole or any portion thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Mr. Krotel also showed Hill a copy of the Harriman letter to Sidney Webster, which was in Hill's handwriting, and made from Hill's original stenographic notes. Hill, said Mr. Krotel, afterward admitted that the handwriting was his. The Assistant District Attorney also said that Hill did not deny having offered a copy of the letter to The New York American and having taken it previously to the Brooklyn Eagle, which had declined to consider buying it. Nor did he deny, according to Mr. Krotel, that it was he who sold it to The World.

Hill was taken to the Oak Street Police Station after being questioned hy Mr. Krotel at the Criminal Court Building, and then to Police Headquarters, where he was locked up for the night, as no Magistrate was sitting in the Tomb Court before whom he could be arraigned. He wouldn't tsik about his case, saying that he was too perplexed. He is married and has two children.

Elsewhere it was learned that the purpose of the arrest was to prevent the publication of other letters of a prominent man which have been understood to be for sale under circumstances resembling those of the sale of the Webster letter.

No representatives of the Harriman railroads would discuss the arrest.

SWETTENHAM FORCED OUT.

Was Told to Apologize to Davis—Said He'd Do It and Then Quit.

LONDON, Friday, April 5.—The Standard to-day says it is able to publish for the first time the circumstances leading to the resignation of Sir Alexander Swettenham as Governor of Jamaica.

The paper says that according to Sir Alexsnder's own statement in a letter to an intimate friend he resigned in consequence of a peremptory demand from the Colonial Office that he apologize to Rear Admiral Davis. To this Sir Alexander replied that if such a course were really necessary he would do so with pleasure, but that such a compulsory apology carried with it his resignation. Sir Alexander denies emphatically that there was any dispute between him and the American Admiral at the time of the Kingston earthquake. He says:

"We were the hest of friends the whole time the Admiral was here. He had the use of one of my private carriages and drove around with my private secretary."

The Standard adds that this letter was written privately, as one friend might write to another, but it fell into the hands of a negro newspaper correspondent.

If the documents referring to the resignation of Sir Alexander were published, the paper concludes, it would be found that the statement that he applied to be retired "on the ground of age" was entirely misleading.

OLIVER STILL HOPES.

Confident That His Company Will Dig the Panama Canal.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 4.—W. J. Oliver of Knoxville stated to-day that he still hoped to build the Panama Canal.

"I am confident that the contract plan will prevail," he said, "and that my firm will get the work. Wall Street fought me hard, but it is not the power now that it was then. Secretary Taft knows all the inside workings, and when he returns it will surprise me if he does not make some interesting statements.

"As to the army engineers, they are all right as engineers, but when it gets down to the actuel digging of the ditch, some competent and experienced contractor must take charge, and they cannot then cast aside the company I organized and which made the lowest reeponsible bid on the work."

Record Month at the Culebra Cut.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Isthmian Canal Commission offices received a dispatch to-day from Colon showing that the total number of cubic yards of earth removed from the Culebra Cut in March was 815,270. This exceeds the highest previous record for a month hy 177,000 cubic yards.

HEARST DEAL WITH ODELL.

He Was to Withdraw in 1905 and Help Elect a Republican Mayor.

The linking of the name of William R. Hearst with that of E. H. Harriman in the Washington dispatches yesterday set a good deal of political gossip going. Mr. Hearst was known to have made a deal with Odell last Fall over the Assembly nominations, and a simiier deal the yeer before on the Aldermanic nominations. In the gossip yesterday, Mr. Odell's name was again mentioned as a possible connecting link between Mr. Hearst and Mr. Harriman.

Apropos of this, a man who was close to the inside of things in the 1905 Mayoralty campaign in which Mr. Hearst ran against Mr. McClellan, told an interesting story and said that he knew it was true. He declared that the deal between Hearst and Odell in 1905 was originally that Hearst should have himself nominated for Mayor and then withdraw in favor of some Republican candidate whom Odell would allow him to name, thus combining the Municipal Ownership forces and the Republican faithful for the defeat of Mayor McClellan.

According to this version, however, when Odell named the figure which would be considered a fitting contribution by Mr. Hearst to the success of this project, not a very long time in advance of the Republican City Convention, the size of the contribution was so impressive that Mr. Hearst thought a second time, and the deal was off.

The rest is known. First the nomination went to Mr. Hughes, and then to William M. Ivins, who made his personally conducted campaign in which Odell, Hearst, McClellan, Murphy, and a good many other people came in for some artistic handling on the stump.

NEW CARNEGIE GIFT.

Pittsburg Heare That Institutions Are to Get $15,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 4.—Andrew Carnegie has a big surprise in store for Pittsburg when he makes his speech at the dedication of the Carnegie Institute next Thursday, and to-night it is reported that the surprise will be the formal announcement of a $15,000,000 endowment to the Carnegie institutions here, including the institute and the Carnegie technical schools.

In the last week Col. Samuel Harden Church and W. N. Frew, Mr. Carnegie's chief agents here, were summoned to New York for a conference with the ironmaster, and it is said that the plans for the endowment were decided upon. Mr. Carnegie wants to make the announcement himself in his speech at the dedication.

Friction between the city officials and the Board of Trustees of the Institute is said to be one of the reasons for the endowment. This year Mayor Guthrie objected to giving the institute $250,000, and Controller Larkin declared that the Trustees were extravagant.

With the promised endowment Mr. Carnegie's gifts to Pittsburg will be in the neighborhood of $35,000,000.

AIMS AT SCIENCE HEALERS.

Delaware Law Forbids Them to Take Money for Their Services.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 4.—Gov. Lea signed to-day the hill passed by the recent Legislature which rigidly regulates the practice of medicine and surgery in Delaware. The measure was vigorously opposed by Christian Science leaders from all over the country. The new law prohibits the Scientists "from practicing their treatment in this State for compensation, gift, or reward."

State Senator Thomas C. Moore of Smyrna, one of the most prominent physicians of the State, as well as a political leader, advocated the present hill, and his opposition to the Christian Science claims was responsible largely for the passage of the measure.

HILL-MORGAN INQUIRY DELAY.

Lawyer Lovely, Chosen to Conduct It, Is Seriously Ill.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—It was announced by the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day that there would be an indefinite postponement of the Government's proposed investigation of the Hill-Morgan railroad system on account of the serious illness of Attorney John A. Lovely, who has been chosen to conduct the inquiry.

He had begun the work before he was attacked, and had proceeded so far that it has been found difficult to assign some one else to the work.

INHALED DIPHTHERIA.

Sixth Bellevue Phyeician Comes Down with the Disease.

Diphtheria germs he inhaled while operating on an emergency case a few days ago lodged in the system of Dr. Gordon Lindsay of Bellevue Hospital, and last night the physician was taken to the Minturn Hospital for Contagious Diseases. It was said that he had an excellent chance of recovery. He is the sixth Bellevue physician who has been stricken with diphtheria in the last five weeks.

DETECTIVE SHOOTS STRIKER.

Serious Clash in American Shipbuilding Co.'s Yards.

LORAIN, Ohio, April 4.—The most serious clash that has occurred during the strike at the local yards of the American Shipbuilding Company took place late this afternoon, when a striking riveter was shot by one of the company's detectives. Many shots were fired, and the incident has led to incressed feeling between the strikers and strike breakers in the employ of the company.

The shooting occurred while a party of men in an open boat was crossing the river to deliver groceries to the men inside the ship yards. The boat was assailed hy men and boye, who hurled stones and hricks at those in the boat in an attempt to turn them back.

At this point a fusillade of shots was fired by the detectives, who were inside the company fence.

3D TERM CRY PART OF PLOT

Roosevelt Says Rich Foes Urge His Nomination to Get Control of Delegates.

HE WILL SURELY REFUSE

Will Not Take Another Term, but Proposes to Control the Convention for His Own Choice.

PENROSE LET THE CAT OUT

Talked of Plane at Dinner and It Got to the President—Plan Is to Nominate Knox.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—According to statements made at the White House today, the movement against President Roosevelt and his policies, to which he referred yesterday as a "rich men's conspiracy," is an undertaking in the boldest and most daring manner to fool the followers of the President all over the country, and to defeat their wishes under the guise of an attempt to force his renomination at the Republican National Convention next year.

The President has received information, which he credits, to the effect that it is the purpose of his oponents to hring about the election of delegates to the National Convention who shall he instructed to vote for his nomination. But these delegates are to be carefully selected so that although on the surface in favor of Roosevelt for another term they will really be in favor of the nomination of one of the reactionary candidates. Then when the nomination has been offered to Mr. Roosevelt and hy him refused, the managers of this scheme will he able to swing their delegates as they please, and nominate the candidate on whom they have agreed. In that way they expect to defeat the Roosevelt sentiment that now threatens to make it possible for the President to dictate the name of his successor as Republican standard bearer for the next campaign. In short, the anti-Roosevelt men propose to tog themselves out in the Roosevelt uniforms, to flaunt the Roosevelt banner, and to hear the Roosevelt tom-toms, to steal the Roosevelt army, horse, foot, and dragoons, and with it put their own General in power.

Two Can Play the Game.

A close friend of the President, who has heen intimately associated with him in his campaigns for several years, closed a discussion of the situation this afternoon with this significant remark:

"If the anti-Roosevelt men want to play that game they will find out that we are no novices in politics."

It appears that information of this scheme has been coming to the White House in fragmentary form for some time. The President had not paid much attention to it, however, hecause the nature of the proposition is such as to excite incredulity. It seemed more a joke than a reality.

The first claim to authenticity that was established for it was in the number of the reports of it and the different quarters from which they came. A short time ago, however, there was received confirmation of a character which has led the President to accept the story in full, and there is no doubt that he now gives it entire credence. This confirmation came from a man who is well known to him and who says he was the recipient of direct overtures from one of the men engaged in the "conspiracy."

According to this informant there was a dinner of the "conspirators" recently, had for the purpose of a general discussion of ways and means for carrying on the plot. At this dinner, it was asserted to-night, Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania talked and talked, and could not be silenced. He said right out in meeting what he thought and what the plotters intended to do. He told how they could accomplish their wishes. He announced that they had all the money that could he used. Money was nothing to them. They could spend any sum, even up to $5,000,000. The day after the dinner the talkative Senator sent for a man who had heen there to discuss the events of the dinner.

An Offer of $25,000.

This man was the friend of the President from whom the confirmation was received. He had been asked to the dinner in order that the plotters might find out how he stood and see if they could not induce him to join them.

Penrose referred to the eventh of the night before, and is reported to have said:

"Well, it was all true, every hit of it. What's more, if you are with us and can use it, I will give you a check for $25,000 right now."

The President's friend refused the check, and soon afterward found occasion to visit the White House and report the affair to the President.

This disclosure takes heyond question the character of the break that has taken place between the President and the Pennsylvania Republican organization. During the Gubernatorial fight in Pennsylvania last year Penrose strove earnestly to convey the impression that the President was in full accord with the Stuart candidacy, and that impression was permitted to go uncorrected by the White House. Now the President is openly taking up the cudgels against Penrose. This makes more clear the reference of the President yesterday to the situation in Pennsylvania.

It is understood here that the plan of the "conspirators," as far as it has been developed, is to nominate Knox for the Presidency next year. They are willing to profit by Foraker's fight in Ohio as much as may be, but not to take him as their candidate, and still ostensibly, at least, are on good terms with the President and in sympathy with much, if not all, that he stands for.

Of course the President knew that the scheme outlined was not workable. He knew that it would only need to be made public to be beaten. His friends everywhere would then be so thoroughly on their guard that no such game could deceive them. But he was forced to admit that his opponents were actually undertaking it. There has been evidence from several States all tending to substantiate the report from the dinner. The plotters have been industriously at work in Michigan and in the two Dakotas, all of them rock-ribbed Republican States. This is what the President meant yesterday by his reference to Ohio and Pennsylvania also. In Pennsylvania the plotters have been making use of the favorite son game, and endeavoring to implicate the Knox boomers. There is nothing to show that Senator Knox himself has been in any way informed of what was going on under the surface, and the President does not believe that the plotters could get on at all with Knox in such a scheme.

The efforts that have been put forth by the anti-Roosevelt men in some of the Southern States have also been in behalf of this game. These dispatches told some weeks ago about the work of the antis in Alabama and Mississippi. It develops that they have been working hard in Louisiana and Texas also. The game there has been to work the bolting convention dodge in the hope that the opposition could secure control of the Republican National Committee, and through that the Committee on Credentials, so as to seat the contesting delegations in the convention.

Incredible as such a political plot seems, it is pointed out that it is exactly such a game as the men who are running it have often played on the public in Wall Street. These members of the "rich men's conspiracy" have not heretofore taken a prominent part in the actual management of their political business. They have always had practical politicians to do that work for them, as Odell did for Harriman until the connection between the two became too well known to be longer successful. Having fooled the public time and again with their Wall Street games, it is pointed out that when they assume the actual direction of their political enterprises they would be very likely to adopt just such a trick as had so often proved successful in the Street.

Will Issue Bulletins.

But in doing so, it is pointed out, they fall into the fatal error of assuming that the public is just as ignorant of the mechanics of politics as it is of the mechanics of high finance. Nowhere in the country is the keen, quick political grasp of the average American more thoroughly understood and appreciated than at the White House under the present occupant. And that is the reason why this full information of the trick the plotters are now trying to work is thus made public.

All this means, of course, that President Roosevelt is going into the fight for the control of the Republican National Convention next year with his coat off from now on. It is said at the White House that from time to time, as further information of the doings of the plotters is received, it will be duly made public. It was stated there again to-day and with authority that in case the nomination should be tendered to the President by the next convention he would decline it. There is no hesitation, on his part, it is announced, with regard to that. His determination not to make the campaign next year is as firm to-day as it was on the evening of election day, 1904, when he first announced his intention not to take a third term. But he is also just as firmly determined to go on with the fight for the policies which have been associated with his name. There will be no let-up in the fight, either. He is enlisted for the war. He means to see a man who will continue the struggle he has begun named as the Republican candidate for next year, and if the fight necessitates his coming out squarely for a particular man that will be done. There is not the slightest doubt that Secretary Taft is the man he has in mind, and if things continue as they are now going it would not be surprising to have a flat-footed declaration from the President in favor of Taft's candidacy result.

The whole conspiracy story has excited wondering comment everywhere here. The first impulse is simply to laugh. The Washington dispatches headed its story of the White House talk this evening with "Roosevelt Sees Things." That expresses the feeling of the majority of politicians who heard the story with amazement. Only the well known and often demonstrated ability of the President as a politician serves to lend any credibility to the yarn. It is told at the White House with every evidence of belief. The President was unquestionably much in earnest in his talk yesterday. At the same time, there are a good many men here who do not exactly see how the conspiracy is made out. The movement to secure the nomination of any man for the Presidency usually takes much the form of that to which the President applies this term. If it is a conspiracy to work to nominate a man for President, there have been a good many conspirators in this country, first and last, and some of them have worked heartily in the interests of Mr. Roosevelt. He could be easily convicted of the offense himself, and is engaging right now in a similar movement on behalf of Secretary Taft.

RIDICULOUS, HARRIMAN SAYS.

And That's All He Will Say About the "Plot" to Down Roosevelt.

Edward H. Harriman stood firmly to his guns yesterday in his controversy with President Roosevelt about the 1904 campaign contribution of $200,000, which Mr. Harriman says the President asked him to get together. He characterized as ridiculous the stories from Washington that he, together with William R. Hearst and the Rockefellers had united in a campaign to down Mr. Roosevelt and his policies, and was disposed to view similarly the supplemental dispatches to the effect that a $5,000,000 fund was being raised by financial interests to help the cause along.

"You gentlemen," he said to the reporters who approached him on these subjects, "must not try to ask me questions the answers to which are self-evident. I do not intend to continue this controversy."

Then Mr. Harriman went on to say, touching the political fortunes of Senator Depew in the 1904 campaign:

"Everybody knows that the contest for the Senatorship in 1904 was between Messrs. Black and Depew, and there could not possibly have been any other candidate. There was no bargain whereby money was raised in consideration of having Depew appointed Ambassador to France or made United States Senator. My letter to Mr. Webster does not state that there was any such bargain.

"That part of the agreement was necessary for the purpose of harmonizing Platt and Depew, if it became necessary. I want that to be made clear. There was no barter for the appointment of Depew to the Senate or as Ambassador to France, except so far as it would tend to harmonize the two forces. The up-State Republicans wanted Mr. Black sent to the Senate, while the great mass of Republicans wanted Mr. Depew. We needed a union of those two forces, and it was suggested that Mr. Depew be given the post of Ambassador to France and that Mr. Black be given the Senatorship.

"The money part was suggested by the President, so that the National Committee could discharge its obligation to the State Committee."

Harriman-Rogers Conference.

This was all that Mr. Harriman had to say. He was in conference with H. H. Rogers during a large part of the afternoon, but declared when he left his office at night that this was over regular railroad business.

Mr. Rogers was uncommunicative and William Rockefeller invisible, so that nothing was forthcoming from 26 Broadway yesterday as to the part of the Standard Oil in the alleged conspiracy to thwart the President and his policies. But from an authoritative source information came out which confirmed in detail the account of the doings of the 1904 campaign as printed in THE TIMES on Wednesday. The understanding among the financial interests who put up the extra $200,000, namely H. McKay Twombly, J. Pierpont Morgan, and William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., in addition to Mr. Harriman, was specifically that it was "Depew" money, and that whatever credit there might be for raising it should go into the balance with Mr. Depew as against Mr. Black, if it came to a showdown.

The Ambassadorship proposal was an alternative—a means of "taking care of Depew" if it should prove acceptable to all bands. It was perfectly understood that the Morgan-Vanderbilt interests would not put up the money for the Republican campaign fund if Depew was to be left out in the cold, and a pleasing means to eliminate him from the situation was to send him to France—that is, until James H. Hyde's own Ambassadorial plans got in the way or until it appeared that Mr. Roosevelt would not appoint Mr. Depew to that post.

CRITICISES ROOSEVELT.

Attorney General of New Jersey Says He Puts Pressure on Judiciary.

TRENTON, N. J., April 4.—Attorney General McCarter, in an address before the Taxpayers' Club last night, caused a sensation by his reference to President Roosevelt and the judiciary. Mr. McCarter said:

"The President of the United States summons into his presence prospective appointees of the Federal judiciary, and makes their appointment contingent upon their opinion with regard to certain laws that may come before them for consideration. He influences the courts in their decisions, and went so far as to send the Attorney General of the United States to Chicago to inform the judge trying a certain case that the President wanted the pending case decided thus and so.

"Justices of the Supreme Court in the instances since I have been the Attorney General of this State have come to me and asked me to represent the people in certain criminal cases to be tried, because they could not trust the prosecutors of the pleas in the counties where the cases were to be tried."

TAFT MAY GET OHIO MACHINE

Even Boss Cox, Whom He Demolished in 1905, Is Said to be for Him.

FORAKER IS LOSING GROUND

Cincinnati and Hamilton County Likely to be Swept Away in the Taft Wave.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4.—It is not by any means certain that William H. Taft is not going to have the organization with him. The word "organization" is mighty in New York, and the average New Yorker is likely to invest that word with the same significance it has in his own State. And once upon a time the Hanna organization in Ohio meant just what Tammany does in New York, so far as power and discipline are concerned.

It is still a strong machine, but Dick is not Hanna and Foraker is not even Dick. The people have more to say than they once did. They have vastly more to say than they have in New York, and the people are for Taft. It is necessary to repeat that when Taft's name is used in these dispatches Roosevelt is meant. Roosevelt's declaration that he does not want a third term is accepted in Ohio at its face value and the Roosevelt men are for Taft because they think Taft is Roosevelt's candidate. If Roosevelt could be induced to accept another nomination Ohio would be for him.

It becomes more and more evident, the further one looks into the state of sentiment here, that the utmost strength of the machine will have to be put forward if the Senators are to hold the State in line. The Taft sentiment is not a zephyr, it is a hurricane. Whatever subjects like the Thaw trial and the price of meat may be engrossing the sturdy yeomanry of New York and other States, Ohio is all wrought up about the Presidential campaign, and talking of nothing else. Let two casual and non-political passers by meet at a cigar stand and trouble each other for a light, and as they hand over their cigars, they talk of Taft and Roosevelt and Foraker. In the hotel lobbies, in the corridors of the State House, wherever politicians meet, nothing else is talked of.

Big Cities for Taft.

But more significant than this is the fact that the man in the street is not talking of anything else. This man in the street is for Taft. It may be imagined that in the City of Columbus, which is the State capital, politics will naturally be at whiter heat than elsewhere, but the signs are the same all over the State. The four largest cities in the State—Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dayton, and Columbus—are for Taft. That is a fact significant of much and well worth weighing. Its significance will appear from the fact that the agricultural communities are almost conceded to Taft. It has been understood from the first that Roosevelt's hold on the farmers was something that was no use to try to break. Therefore if the machine is to hold its own it ought to hold it in the big cities. Yet the big cities are for Taft.

There is a fifth big city, Toledo. It is in doubt. The Taft managers, headed by Insurance Commissioner Vorys, have extended their work to Toledo and are as busy there as they can possibly be getting the city into line. Toledo is an independent city, a city where "Golden Rule" Jones broke up party allegiance for all time, a city which does its own thinking, and what is more, does its own voting. It surely is a bad pasture ground for machines.

Here in Columbus they are ready to bet that Toledo will join her four sisters. If she does not, it will not be because of any love for machines. There is another thing. If Foraker is strong anywhere it is in the southern part of the State. Burton holds Cleveland, and in the counties along the north Foraker is not strong, except, possibly, in the northwest, and in the northwest the people are for Roosevelt first and Foraker after.

May Get Foraker's County.

Foraker lives in the southern part of the State. His home is in Cincinnati, in Hamilton County. They are his neighbors along the Kentucky border. Yet Hamilton County is not only claimed by the Taft men, but is almost conceded by the Foraker men. In all the calculations of the political sharps Cincinnati and Hamilton County are lined up in the Taft column. Perhaps the Foraker men will not admit this for publication, but the shrewdest political forecasters in their camp will line Hamilton and Cincinnati up for Taft in their private calculations.

The Morgan County Committee to-day declared for Taft. It is the first County Committee which has taken any action on the question at all. Morgan County is in the southern part of the State, in other words, in Foraker's bailiwick. It is a little county, but very important politically. Its declaration for Taft under ordinary circumstances would not be a great political item. And yet it is of the highest significance, for it is in a section which ought to be for Foraker if any section is. Then, too, politicians are slow in coming out on an undecided question, and this Morgan County Committee is composed of politicians—men who will naturally wait to see how the cat jumps, and who are not given to leading forlorn hopes. And they are the first county committeemen to come out in the open and burn their bridges behind them.

Why Hamilton County and Cincinnati should be for Taft is a curious and interesting question. Cincinnati is famous for having one of the strongest and also one of the worst political machines in the United States. George B. Cox, saloon keeper and slugger, has been at its head for years. In 1905 Secretary Taft went out to Akron to deliver a speech in the interests of Gov. Herrick, then running for re-election, and in this speech he roasted Boss Cox and his machine, and said that while he would vote for Herrick, he would not vote for Cox's county candidates in Cincinnati.

The people followed his tip and snowed Cox's candidates under. Since then it might be assumed that the Cincinnati machine would be hostile to Taft and that he would have no chance of capturing Foraker's home town and county. But "George B.," as they affectionately or opprobriously call him down there, is not a man who cherishes grudges for their own sake. He is the most practical politician that ever lived. He chases no rainbows, and his estimate of the value of revenge is purely commercial. Now, Charles P. Taft, the Secretary's brother, is able to blow the Cox machine sky high if he wants to—at least, he can come pretty close to doing it. Charles P. Taft has always been more or less of a member of the Cox machine. He knows all about it. He refused to follow his brother in that bolt of 1905, and stood by Cox while the Secretary of War was blowing the foundations out from under it. If Charles P. Taft to-day were to decide that he wanted to cut loose and build up a machine of his own in Cincinnati, by to-morrow night he would have a fine rival to Cox's organization in the best possible shape.

Cox a Taft Man.

Cox, theoretically, is out of politics. He retired after William H. Taft blew him and his machine out of the scheme of things in 1905. But his retirement is exactly like that of Frank S. Black in Troy, N. Y. Black is out of politics, and yet no Republican leader thinks of making a move until he has gone to Black and obtained the old boss's consent. The reason is that if Black chose to come back into politics to-morrow he could drive every imitation boss or subordinate politician out of business, and they know it, and do not dare to take the chances of irritating him. Besides, he is the great legendary figure of Troy politics, the political sage of Monticello for Rensselaer County, and so it is for boss or ex-boss in Cincinnati.

If Cox is not for Taft then the calculations of the people here in Columbus are going to be badly shattered. Not that Cox has any liking for the honest man who ran him out of town on a rail in 1905. It is cold business and commercial speculation with Boss or ex-Boss Cox.

Foraker is certainly going to put some blood into the campaign when he gets here next week. He can only stay two weeks, and in Washington they were saying a few days ago that he could not do anything in that time, and would not try, but would leave it until he returns after the ending of the Brownsville inquiry. But it is announced to-day that Foraker will go to Canton on Wednesday and make a speech opening his campaign for the Presidency and Senatorship. The status of the proposition for a fight at the primaries is up in the air. It was Foraker who issued this challenge, and yet the Senators have the appearance of being disconcerted at the readiness with which their challenge was accepted and of desiring to back out of it.

Walter Brown, the State Chairman, a Foraker-Dick man, is out in an interview declaring the scheme impracticable, and John Malloy, the secretary of the State Committee, is taking the same ground. It is a curious fact that every Foraker-Dick man you meet is explaining how difficult it will be to hold such primaries, and every Taft man you meet is proving that it would be the simplest thing in the world, and this despite the fact that the thing was a Foraker proposition and was fired off in the first place as a bombshell which was to put Taft out of business.

It does look impracticable. The Foraker men seem to be right on that. The Taft idea is to have the voters, when they go to the polls next November, register their preferences. Now, there will be a hot municipal campaign on at that time, and it is difficult to see how such a primary at the polls can be conducted without mixing the Presidential fight up with the municipal campaign and resulting in endless trades, deals and dickers.

On the other hand, it is impossible to doubt that the fight will go on at the polls whether there is a primary or not. All over the State the cities are to elect Mayors and boards of public service, and it is a foregone conclusion that the Foraker people will try to nominate Foraker men for these offices and the Taft people will try to nominate men of their color. The Taft organization goes on without regard to this primary talk. Vorys and his men are undisturbed by it, pay no attention to it, and care nothing about it. To them the talk of a fight to a finish at the primaries is uninteresting. They are going coldbloodedly and methodically to work to build up an organization which shall wreck Foraker, and it matters little to them whether there is any primary fight or not.

HARD TO GET A RUEF JURY.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—The trial of Abraham Ruef on charges of extortion proceeded to-day with the continuance of the examination of veniremen. The work of obtaining a jury is proving very difficult.

The casee of A. K. Detwiler, the Toledo capitalist, and Louis Glass, Vice President of the Pacific States Telephone Company, both of whom are indicted on charges of bribery, were to-day continued until next Thursday.

TOLEDO, Ohio, April 4.—A member of the family of A. K. Detwiler said to-day: "When the Grand Jury at San Francisco adjourns and all of its indictments are reported Mr. Detwiler will give himself up. He will wait until he knows absolutely every indictment brought against him. He does not intend to evade arrest and has no fear that bond will not be furnished.

"Mr. Detwiler is at least 1,000 miles away from Toledo. His dealings were entirely with Attorney Ruef. Any money that was paid was paid for attorney's fees. What Ruef did with the money later was no concern of Detwiler."

chairman, William N. Penny as clerk, and Bartholomew Moynahan as stenographer;

"That we were attended by the Hon. William T. Jerome, District Attorney of the County of New York, and counsel for the defendant took part in the proceedings. The defendant attended in person all of the hearings and was orally and physically examined;

"That we examined a large number of witnessee furnished by the District Attorney, the counsel for the defendant, and called by the Commission. Among them were prison physicians, chaplains, keepers, probation officer, Sheriff's guards in charge of the defendant, two of defendant's counsel, and fifteen physicians, twelve of whom were alienists. We have received in evidence many documents and papers, including written communications from the defendant to his counsel.

"After careful examination of the defendant personally and of all the evidence, we find the following facts:

"In the frequent, and in some cases daily, during the several months last past, intercourse had by the defendant with the Tombs physicians, chaplains, keepers, other attendants, and the probation officer, these persons failed to discover anything irrational in his conduct or speech.

"The defendant has taken an active part in the conduct of the trial, has made numerous suggestions orally in court and by letter, as to the selection of jurors and the examination of witnesses.

Suggestions Adopted by Counsel.

"Many of these suggestions were deemed valuable and were adopted by his counsel. An examination of the letters referred to shows that generally the suggestions contained in them were material, sensible, and apparently the product of a sane mind.

"While the testimony of the numerous experts called by the District Attorney and the defendant's counsel is irreconcilable, that given by certain experts who personally examined the defendant during the trial and since the appointment of the commission, and who, of all the alienists examined, had the greatest opportunity of observation, disclosed the fact that no indication of insanity at the present time could be found in the speech, conduct, or physical condition of the defendant.

"The direct oral and physical examination of the defendant by the Commissioners themselves disclosed no insanity in the defendant at the present time.

"Upon all the facts, it is our opinion, at the time of our examination, the said Harry K. Thaw was and is sane, and was not and is not in a state of idiocy, imbecility, lunacy, or insanity so as to be incapable of rightly understanding his own condition, the nature of the charges against him, and of conducting his defense in a rational manner.

"The minutes of the proceedings had before us and the documents received in evidence are herewith submitted.

"Dated at New York, N. Y., this 4th day of April, 1907.

Jerome Fights Confirmation.

Mr. Jerome showed neither surprise nor any other emotion when he read the verdict of the commission. He dropped the report upon his table and took a fresh hold. For a moment he stood, lithe, erect, and with his heavy jaw set firmly. Then he began his fight to stave off the confirmation of the report. He asked for the stenographic report of the examination made by the commission, claiming it as his right as the representative of the People. In the course of the examination of Thaw he was not present, although the statute reads that the District Attorney "must" be present. Only the stenographic report could give him full information of what transpired at this secret session, he declared.

Justice Fitzgerald declined to permit Mr. Jerome to inspect the minutes.

Mr. Jerome then asked for the stenographic report of that part of the commission's investigation which was held in public. This request was also denied.

Mr. Jerome then moved for an opportunity to copy all of the documents and inspect all of the exhibits put in evidence before the commission by the defense. This was denied.

"I then ask the court," said Mr. Jerome, "to allow me a reasonable time in which to prepare to address the court against its confirmation of this report and to investigate whether I will be permitted under the law to apply for a writ of prohibition or a writ of mandamus to the Appellate Division. I desire to compel the revelation by mandamus of the minutes and the exhibits before I make my argument to the court."

Justice Fitzgerald replied that he would consent to an argument from the District Attorney and that he would adjourn court until Monday morning. Mr. Jerome said that it was with all respect that he informed the court of his desire to apply to the higher court and that by Monday he would know the extent of his rights in the present status of the case. He would move swiftly, so as to cause as little delay as possible.

Mr. Hartridge did not seem worried by the declaration of the District Attorney that he would endeavor to find relief in a higher court. He only objected once in the course of the addresses made by the District Attorney, and that was to protest against the opening up of the minutes of the secret session of the commission.

Justice Fitzgerald followed Mr. Jerome closely. He seemed pleased, and turned once or twice to Justice Blanchard, who was sitting beside him and smiled and whispered a word or two. "It is not only a sense of duty," said Justice Fitzgerald to the District Attorney, "but it is also a sense of anxiety that urges me to give you the time you desire in which to oppose the confirmation of the report of the commission."

The strongest contention made by Mr. Jerome in opposing the acceptance of the report of the commission yesterday was that the constitutional rights of a man on trial were not safeguarded when he was examined in secret and all evidence used in that examination kept from the representative of the People. He argued that the decisions in insanity questions were all of ancient date, and that the law providing for commissions and the methods of procedure was drawn at a time when comparatively little was known of the study of mental diseases and the criminally insane. He said that it was of the highest importance that the upper courts should rule in the case, for a precedent would be established and rulings obtained that would bear upon all insanity commissions that followed under the law as it is now written. Long after he and the court had passed away, he told Justice Fitzgerald, the rulings would be in use. Mr. Jerome argued that with the prominence of the Thaw case and the prominence of the lawyers for the defense, the rulings would prove more far-reaching in that they would attract wider attention.

Barred from Secret Hearing.

"If I have conceived the attitude and understood the mind of the court correctly," said Mr. Jerome, "where an express violation of the statute has occurred, I have been practically excluded from the hearing of the commission when the statute says that the District Attorney must be present. And then when that session has been held in secret and counsel for the defense has been called in before it and, judging from the conduct of the examination of the defendant when I was present, he was allowed to confer with the witness when he was on the stand, I am refused as representing the People of New York permission to know what went on. The three commissioners were sitting in a judicial capacity and not as experts in insanity. Neither Mr. McClure nor Mr. Olney would be picked out as experts. Yet I am refused knowledge of what went on there, and a ruling is made directly against my suggestion on the record that I be given this information.

"In a case in which so much time has been spent and so many thousands of dollars of the people's money have been spent, I submit, sir, and with all respect, that I be allowed reasonable time in which to consider whether the legal aspects of this case are such that I will be warranted in applying to the Appellate Division for a writ of prohibition or a mandamus in order to determine whether your honor's interpretation is correct.

"Yes," said Justice Fitzgerald, with abruptness, "what is it that you desire?"

"Your honor then denies my application for a copy of the minutes?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"Yes," replied the court, "that is my conception of my duty."

Then time was given to Mr. Jerome until Monday morning.

When Justice Fitzgerald informed the jury that it was to report again on Monday morning and then admonished it many of the members of the body drew long faces. They have had a long and a hard task, and a number of them have felt it financially as well as physically. On Monday they will be again discharged until such time as may be deemed necessary to grant Mr. Jerome in his protest against the acceptance of the report.

Trial Up in the Air.

The Thaw trial is, in fact, very much up in the air. If Mr. Jerome should decide to make application to the Appellate Division and there fight the report of the Commission, arguments on this application will be made, some lawyers appearing on behalf of Justice Fitzgerald, perhaps. In the event of the higher court declaring Justice Fitzgerald to have been in error a new Commission or a mistrial might follow. But it is not at all certain that Mr. Jerome will make such application. He may content himself with a protest to Justice Fitzgerald and then proceed with the trial.

Mr. Hartridge would not say yesterday afternoon whether the defense would offer other testimony before the jury in the event that the trial proceeds next week. He was of the opinion, however, that Thaw's case was in.

The lawyers for the defense believe that Mr. Jerome stands no chance of interfering with the trial further. Mr. Delmas yesterday congratulated Mrs. William Thaw and the other members of the family, and he is now putting the finishing touches on his address to the jury. He has all of his material well in hand, it is said, and it was reported yesterday that he might ask for more than a single day in which to sum up. He will be the first to sum up, and Mr. Jerome will follow, leaving the case for the jury with the instructions of Justice Fitzgerald.

Mr. Jerome's power in address is well known. He will face a defense that will depend on the surface on the brain storm theory, and below the surface on the tearing to pieces of the reputation of Stanford White. Nearly every form of defense was hinted at in the opening address to the court by Mr. Gleason, but aside from temporary insanity there was offered nothing save the testimony of a stage doorkeeper that White had threatened to kill Thaw before he married Evelyn Nesbit. The story told by Evelyn, when she related the horrors of the night in the Twenty-fourth Street studio, will supply Mr. Delmas with material for his attack on the memory of White. Under all of the work done by the defense there has run the strong suggestion of justification.

Those who have been following the case closely confidently expect a mistrial, the favorite estimate being that ten jurors will vote for conviction and two for acquittal, and that the two will hang on until the jury is discharged. Thaw received a visit in the Tombs from Delmas, McPike, Gleason, and Peabody after court had adjourned for the day. The lawyers found their client much pleased with the results obtained for him. Thaw feels that he has a strong chance of acquittal, as does his wife. Mrs. William Thaw showed considerable weariness when she started for the Hotel Lorraine from the Criminal Court Building. She was accompanied by her sons, Josiah and Edward, and Lady Yarmouth. Her face was flushed. She seemed feeble. Her years and her troubles are beginning to tell on her. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw did not stop to make a visit to the Tombs. She hurried ahead of the other members of the family, going to the hotel alone. She was in good health and spirits, and showed no sign of fatigue.

Atlantic Av. Tracks Stay Awhile.

Supreme Court Justice Crane denied yesterday the application of Francis Gottsberger for a writ of mandamus to compel the Long Island Railroad to remove its tracks from the surface of Atlantic Avenue, between Fifth and Vanderbilt Avenues, in Brooklyn. Counsel for the company said the tracks would eventually be removed from the street, but that if the road did so now it would be unable to handle its passenger traffic.

CLUBWOMEN GO HUNGRY.

Waiters Miss Them Because They Won't Sit Still, Mrs. Brown Says.

Patties are the bane of her life, Mrs. William Grant Brown told the Chatter Club of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs at its meeting in the Hotel Astor yesterday morning. Mrs. Brown is at the head of the Federation Luncheon Committee, and Mrs. John Fowler Trow was asking if at the buffet luncheon to be held at the next Federation meeting the members could not get a full luncheon.

It seems that at these luncheons the waiters do not get around to all the women; one has ice cream only, another tries to satisfy herself on bouillon, and Mrs. Brown says they all want patties, and come in larger numbers than have been announced, the patties give out, and then there are heart burnings.

"It seems to be all right for the people in the front seats, they have enough to eat," said Mrs. William Cummings Story, the Federation President, "but it is pretty hard on the back row."

"Oh, I know that back row," said Mrs. Brown feelingly.

Now that it is proposed for the coming event to make the women sit in one place throughout the luncheon, even if chairs have to be tied in place to prevent friendly visiting, and if the waiters don't do the rest something will happen.

SUIT AGAINST J. C. SMITH.

To Prevent Sale of Children's Estate, of Which He is Executor.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 4.—An action was heard here to-day against James Clinch Smith, Stanford White's brother-in-law, as executor of the will of Mrs. Cornelia Stewart Merrillon, who left an estate valued at over $1,000,000, on behalf of the general guardian of her four children, before Surrogate Jackson of Nassau County. F. R. Coudert, who is attorney for the children as well as for Joseph Merrillon, the husband, all of whom are in Paris, asked through counsel that the court order Smith as executor to turn over the stock in the Garden City Company which belongs to the children, instead of selling it and turning the money to them.

He said it would be to the best interest of the children to hold this stock, which represents three-fourths of the property in Garden City. He said that at present the value of the property cannot be properly estimated, although the stock, none of which has ever been sold, has a par value of $500,000. When the tunnels have been built and other improvements made the property values will be even greater, he claimed.

Counsel for Mr. Smith said that the Garden City Company was nothing but a real estate venture and that as the boom is on now this is the best time to take advantage of it. Briefs are to be submitted.

SICK MAN KILLS HIMSELF.

Salesman Commits Suicide While His Son is Away.

Abraham Kahn, a traveling salesman for a woolen house, who lived at 262 West 121st Street, had been ill for a week at his boarding house. His son, Leicester, left him in bed about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a short time. As he returned to the house he heard two shots from his father's room. With Charles Goss, the son of the landlady, Mrs. Mary Goss, he ran upstairs and found that his father had got out of bed, settled himself in a Morris chair opposite a mirror, and shot himself twice in the right temple.

Dr. J. J. McGowan, who lives next door, also heard the shots. He found Kahn dead. The police were not notified until 8 o'clock, and then all but the most formal information was refused. It was learned, however, that the other boarders believed that Kahn was separated from his wife and was suffering from melancholia. The name of his employers was refused.

ADMITS HE'S CONSTANTINO.

But Suspect Arrested Here Says He Didn't Murder Mrs. Gentry.

The young Italian arrested on Tuesday night as he was about to go aboard the steamship Roma at the foot of Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, confessed yesterday to Acting Captain McCauley of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau that he is Frank Constantino, who is wanted in Chicago for the murder of Mrs. Arthur W. Gentry on Jan. 6, 1906. The prisoner denied, however, that he murdered the woman. He said she committed suicide by slashing her throat with a razor while the two were alone in a room.

Constantino was lined up before the desk in the Brooklyn Detective Bureau with a dozen other Italians yesterday and Jacob Stern, a clerk, of 1,536 Broadway, Manhattan, who knew him several years ago, was asked to identify the alleged murderer. Stern stepped forward and put his hand on Constantino's shoulder, but the prisoner denied that he had ever seen Stern before.

Important Additions to the

WEBER OPERA SALE

PIANOS JUST RECEIVED from the GREAT GERMAN SINGERS

WHILE the main division of the Conried Metropolitan Opera Company concluded its season on March 23, Wagnerian Opera was continued for one week longer. This required the presence in New York up to March 30 of the leading German singers, so that their pianos could not be secured until after the Special Opera Sale had begun.

The pianos used by the German contingent of the Opera Company have now been returned to us, repolished, tuned and placed on sale at the usual liberal scale of reductions. Among these additions are the pianos used during the past season by Burgstaller, Van Rooy, Mme. Fleischer-Edel, Alfred Hertz, etc.

The Annual Opera Sale of Weber Pianos Is the Most Notable Piano Event of the Year

This is the eighth consecutive year that the Weber has been the official piano of the opera, used exclusively at the Metropolitan Opera House and in the New York homes of the various artists who make up this great aggregation of talent. Because of its rich sympathetic singing tone and superior artistic qualities the Weber is given preference over any and all other pianos.

Persons who were unable to attend the opening of this sale on account of being out of town over the Easter holidays, may now avail themselves of the opportunity presented by the addition of the pianos just received from the German artists.

There is an important money saving on each of these "Artist-Used" Pianos. The prices of new Weber Pianos are so rigidly maintained that this chance to secure a fine, modern Weber Upright or Grand, not distinguishable from new, at a reduced price, is most exceptional, and no intending piano purchaser can afford to neglect such an important and unique opportunity.

Each piano is plainly ticketed with the cash selling price, but moderate monthly payments may be arranged for where preferred, simple interest being added.

SPELLING BOARD'S ROW IN OPEN NOW

The First Tilt, Cut Short, May Be Resumed in Secret Session To-day.

THE WEST FEELS SLIGHTED

E. O. Valle, a Chicago Member, Says the Executive Board is Too Narrow and Unprogressive.

It became apparent at the afternoon session of the meeting of the Simplified Spelling Board at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday that some members of the board from the West regard the Executive Committee, which is made up entirely of New York men, as a "local committee," and believe that it does not appreciate the work that has been done for simplified spelling in the West, particularly in the Mississippi Valley. This came out unexpectedly in the course of a tilt between Henry Holt, the publisher, and E. O. Valle of Chicago over the policy of the board.

At the morning session Dr. Isaac K. Funk said, on behalf of the Executive Committee, that it was not true that the election of Prof. Thomas R. Lounsbury of Yale as President of the board was a step toward diminishing the powers of the Executive Committee. His statement practically denied that there was any dissension in the board.

The discussion between Mr. Holt and Mr. Valle followed the reading of Mr. Holt's paper on "A Struggle with Three Thousand Words." The "three thousand words" is a list adopted some time ago by philological societies in America and England. Mr. Holt offered a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of three members to revise this list and submit it to the philological societies with a request that they jointly approve it with such modifications as they might deem necessary. Mr. Holt explained that with President David Starr Jordan he believed that the board could not legislate on matters at the annual meeting with any success, more deliberate consideration being necessary. Therefore, he requested that the board refer the matter to its Executive Committee.

While Mr. Holt was speaking Mr. Valle interrupted once to say that he believed the proposed plan impracticable. Later, while discussing "The Chief and Final Problem," Mr. Valle took Mr. Holt to task for suggesting that the matter be referred to the Executive Committee and also criticised the policy of the Executive Committee. Mr. Valle asked the board to consider the matter of adopting a "key alphabet."

The Chicagoan's Objections.

"I do not wish to be considered as a radical," declared Mr. Valle. "I believe that we ought to do those things which are least likely to be undone. But we have got to adopt a uniform key alphabet before we can have any progress. This board temporises too much. We seem to be willing only to take up the things of the present. We are not looking into the future and making provision for it. We ought to blaze the trail so that all people who want to go ahead can do so. I regret very much that Mr. Holt has brought up the matter of the 3,000 words. I thought we had gone beyond that. I regret, too, that Mr. Holt has adopted the policy of referring everything to the local committee."

Mr. Valle hesitated for a moment, then continnued:

"I have made a statement that I had no intention of making. I have no feeling against the Executive Committee. But I cannot help feeling that this is a large country. It extends out to the Pacific Coast. I will not offer a resolution asking that the matter of the key alphabet be referred to a committee. But I believe that it ought to be referred to a broader committee than the Executive Committee, a committee representing the entire country."

"Mr. Valle seems to think that the policy of referring the matter to the Executive Committee is my scheme," said Mr. Holt. "It is not my scheme. It is the scheme of a representative from the Pacific Coast."

"The Executive Committee is not a local committee," said Prof. Hempl, a Californian. "In training and speech it is National."

To Thresh It Out To-day.

By this time the members were showing a disposition to thresh out the proposition of whether the Executive Committee was National or local. Dr. Funk immediately tried to shut off further discussion.

"This matter is coming up to-morrow at the executive session of this body," Dr. Funk said. "The Executive Committee will then want to learn what the board thinks on the subject. I would suggest that the discussion be stopped at present." President Lounsbury succeeded in carrying this suggestion into effect.

Mr. Valle was requested by THE TIMES reporter to discuss further the attitude of the West toward simplified spelling.

"We feel that the Executive Committee does not appreciate the work that has been done for simplified spelling in the West, particularly in the Mississippy Valley," Mr. Valle said. "Many of the newspapers in that section have adopted the system, and many teachers are teaching it in the schools.

"When Mr. Carnegie announced his intention of giving funds for the organization and the maintenance of the board he expressed the opinion that the funds ought to be put in the care of trustees, who could meet conveniently. The committee was accordingly made up of New Yorkers. At the same time the people of the West thought that a man from Chicago might have been appointed to the committee, it being possible for him to attend the meetings. Objections were made, however. Now we are reconciled to the way the committee is organized."

Mr. Valle said that the men from the West would not think of organizing a subsidiary society, because they had faith in the present board. He also declared that there was plenty of spirit in favor of simplified spelling in the University of Chicago, and that in time it would come out in favor of it.

At the morning session yesterday a committee was appointed to consider the feasibility of appointing some advisory body to be consulted with reference to changes in orthography to be recommended. This committee is composed of President Jordan, Benjamin E. Smith, editor of the Century Dictionary, and Prof. James W. Bright of Johns Hopkins University.

In both sessions yesterday many papers discussing the features of simplified spelling were read.

CARS CRASH AT CROSSING.

Four Persons Hurt at Seventh Avenue and 23d Street.

Two men were injured and two women suffered from shock when a southbound Seventh Avenue car crashed into an eastbound Twenty-third Street car last night. The eastbound car was pushed from the tracks.

There were about a dozen passengers in the cars, and they were badly frightened. William Bishop, 72 years old, of 326 West Fourth Street, who was on the front platform of the Twenty-third Street car, was thrown into the street and received contusions of the body and legs. He was taken to the New York Hospital. Edward Ross, conductor of the Seventh Avenue car, received contusions of the head. He was taken to the same hospital.

Mrs. Catharine Kane, 35, of 145 East Forty-eighth Street, and Miss Margaret Ryo, 23, of 114 Pearsall Street, Bilssville, L. I., suffered from shock.

Joy Line to Stop Boston Trips.

The Joy Steamship Company has sold its steamers Santiago and Old Dominion, which have operated between New York and Boston, and it is understood that the Outside Line of that company will be discontinued after Saturday. The company will continue to operate its lines to Fall River, Mass.; Privodence, R. I., and Bridgeport, Conn.

SATOLLI PRAISES PRESIDENT.

Speaks at a Dinner to Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson.

ROME, April 4.—A dinner was given here to-night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robineon by Marquis Martin Maloney and Mrs. Maloney of Philadelphia, Mr. Maloney acting in his capacity as a Private Chamberlain of the Pope. The dinner was intended as a courtesy from the Vatican. There were forty guests, including noted Cardinals.

There was a display of American flags in the dining room eurrounding a picture a President Roosevelt. There were many toasts, including one by Cardinal Satolli, who spoke with much enthusiasm of the "glory, strength, and progress of America." The Cardinal recalled his visit to the United States in 1904, and said that the true liberty and toleration he had then witnessed had made a profound impression upon him. He concluded his address with these words:

"From Rome, the symbol of universal truth and spiritual liberty, we send greetings to President Roosevelt, the personification of the greatnees of his country."

Mrs. Robineon, who is a sister of President Roosevelt, thanked Cardinal Satolli, and said she did not take the compliment to herself, but considered it a message of good will to her brother.

TELEGRAPHED "I'M MARRIED."

It's Hardly an Elopement, Says Mayor Clarke of His Daughter's Wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 4.—News was received in New Rochelle today of the marriage of Miss Marietta Clarke, youngest daughter of Mayor Henry S. Clarke, and Gaillard Boag, a young man of White Plains. The couple were married on Easter Sunday in the Protestant Episcopal Church at Rome, N. Y., and are now enjoying thtir honeymoon at Atlantic City. A telegram received by Mayor Clarke from the bride was the first intimation her family had of the wedding.

"I'd hardly consider it an elopement," said Mayor Clarke, "as my daughter and Mr. Bosg have been engaged nearly a year. They had their minds eet on an Easter wedding, but Mrs. Clarke and I advised against it, as my daughter had been ill all Winter, and we thought it would be better to wait until Fall. She went to Rome telling us she wished to spend her Easter vacation with her graad parents who live there, but it turne out now that they had the wedding all planned, and this was only a good excuee to get away from New Rochelle.

"We had no objections whatever to the match, and I have telegraphed the couple my forgiveness and congratulations."

Mr. Boag is a son of Secretary Boag of Columbia University. He met the bride at the wedding of her sister, Miss Mabel Clarke, to Dr. Charlee H. Sniffen of White Plains, where he was best man.

TRIED FOR WHITMAN RAIDS.

Capt. Daly and Five Men Up on Charges—Decision Reserved.

Capt. Daly of the West Forty-seventh Street Station and five patrolmen under him were tried by Deputy Commissioner Hanson at Headquarters yesterday for their connection with the raids in their precinct made by Magistrate Whitman on March 23. The Magistrate appeared against them. Capt. Daly declared that there were more excise arrests in his precinct than in any other in the city. He said he never gave men under him instructions to give immunity to saloons. Deputy Hanson reserved decision in this and the other cases.

Throngs at Farrely Funeral.

The Fourteenth Assembly District turned out as a man yesterday to do honor to "Big Hearted Pat" Farrely, who for over forty years ran the Delacacian Café at Thirty-fourth Street and Fourth Avenue, and who died on last Monday from a stroke of paralysis which had confined him to his bed for some time. Every one of the hundreds of persons that in his lifetime Farrely had befriended wanted to attend his funeral at Calvary Cemetery, and four ferryboats were needed to carry the 75 carriages and over 500 mourners who attended the funeral over the East River, from the Thirty-fourth Street ferryhouse.

Separation for Wife of Dr. T. J. Hillis.

Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman signed a judgment yesterday, separating Mrs. Bertha K. Hillis from Dr. Thomas J. Hillis of 51 Charlton Street. They were married in 1887, and have no children. Mrs. Hillis declared that her husband had treated her cruelly. While the suit was pending Dr. Hillis was compelled to pay his wife $17.50 a week alimony. Justice O'Gorman continued this alimony, pending his decision on the amount of alimony to be awarded permanently.

CITY BREVITIES.

Because they had neglected to send their sons to the public schools, Charles Rosconi and Edward Young were fined $2 each by Magistrate Sweetser in Yorkville Court yesterday.

Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn of the Department of Zoology in Columbia University, will give an illustrated account of an expedition into the Fayum Desert of Northern Egypt on Tuesday afternoon in Sichermerhorn Hall. He has just returned from Egypt, where he headed an expedition to study the beds of vertebrate fossils recently brought to light there.

The second of three dinners incidental to the sixty-sixth annual convention of the Chi Psi Fraternity was held at the Hotel Astor last night. One hundred and fifty members attended. President Elbridge T. Gerry spoke on "Fraternity Life," and William J. Youngs of Brooklyn, Supreme Court Justice Scott, and Admiral Edwin M. Stewart, U. S. N., retired, also made addresses.

Charged with complicity in the theft and disposal of goods from the United States Express Company, Milton J. Carman of 25 Herkimer Street, and Charles W. Webb of 5,502 Sixth Avenue, both of Brooklyn, were held in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday in $5,000 bail each for further examination. Israel Arobow of 111 Hester Street and Charles Cook of 264 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, were held on the charge of receiving the stolen goods.

Why Not Two Suits Rather Than One?

If ONE suit will answer, we promise to please you. If TWO be required, then we shall see to it that you are TWICE as pleased.

These Prices Point the Way—
Distinctive Spring Suits for Men
$15, $18, $20, $22

And why not? Everyone is not willing to spend $30 to $40 for a single suit. We bind ourselves to give you two good suits for that price—if you desire. They will not fall below your standard nor OURS. The same general high qualities which we build into all Saks Clothing identify these modestly priced garments.

We do not stoop to a lower level merely because the price is low. Rather do we add more care and attention to escape the imputation.

Every new model of this season is included at these prices, and many different fabrics from which to choose. Doesn't this tempt you?

"Saks-Banister" Shoes for Men
At $6.00 and $7.00

In the Saks-Banister Shoes designed for Spring service, particularly in the Oxfords, there is much to appeal to the man who is exacting in his shoe requirements.

The three prime essentials that go to make a really good shoe are leather, style and construction. Each of these is perfected in "Saks-Banisters" to a greater degree than any other shoe of which we know.

Should you choose to accept this as an expert opinion, you will find it fully sustained by actual wear and service.

WIDESPREAD PLOT TO END THE DUMA

Reactionary Organizations Supported by Powerful Influences at Court.

CABINET SEEMS WILLING

Its Organ Says That More Debates Like That of March 1 May Result in Dissolution of Parliament.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 4.—Documentary evidence of a plot on the part of the reactionary organizations, supported by powerful influences at Court, to cause the dissolution of the lower house of Parliament was printed in the Rech, the organ of the Constitutional Democrats, to-day in a circular signed by M. Purishkevich, a Monarchist member of the House from Bessarabia and Vice President of the League of the Russian People, which was sent to all the branches of the league. The circular shows that the very many telegrams to the Emperor now appearing in the reactionary organ, the Russian Banner, demanding the dissolution of the House, were sent by direct orders from the league's headquarters here.

The date of the circular shows that the plot was conceived on March 18, a week after the convocation of Parliament, and was set in motion on March 27 by a prearranged signal, a mysterious black cross in the Russian Banner, the appearance of which coincided with the murder of Dr. Jollos, editor of the Russki Viedomosti of Moscow. The circular directed that, should the plot succeed, loyalist demonstrations were to be organized on the day of the dissolution of Parliament.

The movement for a dissolution of the House has the full sympathy of the reactionary members of the Cabinet, and, though no steps have yet been taken in that direction, the possibility of Parliament being dissolved is plainly foreseen.

In consequence of a speech made by M. Alexinsky, Social Democrat, containing a quotation from an article in The London Economist attributing to the Russian Government bad faith in dissolving the first Parliament and concluding loans without its consent, a score of Conservative members of the lower house demonstratively withdrew from the hall of Parliament this afternoon.

The bolt was organized by Count Bobrinsky, President of the Constitutional Conservative Party and Monarchist Member of Parliament from Tula, who, when M. Alexinsky read the offending article, sprang from his seat, shouting that M. Alexinsky's action was treason, and that, as the dissolution of Parliament was an act of the monarch, he called on all loyal Russians to follow him from the hall.

The incident caused the greatest excitement and fears were expressed that it might be a prelude to the dissolution of Parliament.

After a caucus the bolters decided to return to the hall of Parliament and present a formal protest against the speech of M. Alexinsky and the failure of President Golovin to interrupt him.

The budget debate was then continued and lasted during the rest of the day without a vote being taken.

There has been issued an imperial order divesting Baron Serge Alexander Kerff, and Nicholas N. Tuchkoff of the rank of gentlemen-in-waiting to the Emperor.

Baron Kerff is a professor of international law in the University of Helsingfors and was formerly an attaché of the Russian Legation at Peking. He recently contributed a series of articles to the Rech defending the rights of the Finnish people.

M. Tuchkoff is a prominent Constitutional Democratic Deputy from Yaroslaff and one of the few members of this party holding a position at Court. It is believed these men were divested of their rank in punishment for having failed to stand up in Parliament at the mention of the Emperor's name on March 5. Vladimir D. Nabukoff and Prince Paul Dolgorukoff, both prominent Constitutional Democrats, have been similarly deprived of rank.

POBIEDONOSTZEFF'S MEMOIRS.

To be Published in Ten Years—Said to be of Extraordinary Interest.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 4.—The correspondence and memoirs of the late M. Pobiedonstzeff, ex-Procurator General of the Holy Synod, have been deposited under seal in the Rumaintseff Historical Museum of Moscow. According to M. Pobiedonostzeff's testamentary directions, they will be published at the end of ten years.

The papers, which are said to rank in importance with the Bismarck and Hohenlohe memoirs, include extensive correspondence with the last three Emperors, with whom M. Pobiedonostzeff was on most intimate terms; letters from many prominent statesmen of the old régime, and a series of letters from the daughter of the poet Tutcheff, one of the Court ladies, which, it is reported, will throw intimate light on hitherto obscure Court intrigues.

There is also another series of letters from Prof. Rachinsky, a former colleague of M. Pobiedonostzeff at the Moscow University, furnishing a running commentary on the events of the day.

CUBAN LIBERALS QUARREL.

Peace Committee So Disorderly That Police Have to Interfere.

HAVANA, April 4.—The committee of Liberal Generals which recently started from Havana for a tour of the island to sound the sentiment of the people regarding the rival candidates for the Presidency, Alfredo Zayas and José Miguel Gomez, and to try to establish peace in the Liberal Party before the arrival here of Secretary Taft, has broken up in discord at Santiago.

At a meeting held there recriminations were freely exchanged among the members of the committee, the ire was passed, and the proceedings became so disorderly that the police were obliged to intervene.

The indications are to-day that the Liberal Party is hopelessly divided.

The Government announces the existence of a band of four bandits in Matanzas Province. The Rural Guards are pursuing the outlaws.

NEW CREW FOR PEARY.

To Consist of Members of the Newfoundland Naval Reserve.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 4.—Capt. Robert Bartlett of this city, who was master of Commander Peary's arctic steamer Roosevelt in the furthest north expedition, sailed to-day for New York, where he will refit the vessel for the explorer's arctic cruise next Summer.

Capt. Bartlett will again be in command of the Roosevelt, and his crew will consist entirely of young Newfoundland fishermen, who are members of the Colonial Naval Reserve. These men have been trained on board British warships during the past three years, and Capt. Bartlett thinks that they will be a great aid to Peary in the attempt to reach the north pole.

The men are of perfect physique and are accustomed to the hardships of a cold climate.

BUCHAREST, April 4.—With the exception of some insignificant disturbances the whole country is now quiet.

The troops distributed throughout the country, who number about 140,000, will be kept under arms for a considerable period as a measure of precaution.

Wallachia is occupied by Moldavian regiments and Moldavia by Wallachians.

FEW KILLED IN BITLIS.

But Telegram from Missionary Says There Is Extreme Suffering.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 4.—The following dispatch, dated Bitlis, April 3, was received here to-day from the Rev. Royal M. Cole, head of the American mission at Bitlis:

"At 10 o'clock in the forenoon of March 29 there burst upon us unannounced the worst earthquake witnessed in forty years in these or the Erzerum volcanic regions. Such was its force that our city seemed to be in the jaws of some monster who would shake us into shreds, as a mastiff does his game. Down came the plastering, the furniture was overturned, cracks were opened in strong walls, roofs were shattered, and rain poured in. During the first day there were fourteen shocks, and they still continue. There have been, altogether, twenty-eight shocks.

"Of the 4,000 houses here, over 300 have fallen and half the remainder have been seriously damaged, about $50 to $500 being needed to repair each house. The officials report that eight persons were killed by falling walls, but they are all unknown in Bitlis. Many persons were wounded and many churches, mosques, and Government buildings were damaged. The surrounding villages sustained heavy shocks, but it was in the daytime, and so there was no great loss of life.

"The foreigners at Bitlis are the Russian Consul, Charlotte E. Ely, Mary A. C. Ely, Royal M. Cole, Mrs. Lizzie Cole, and Miss Nellie A. Cole.

"Famine prices prevail and there are great poverty and extreme suffering."

SALVADOR'S PEACE EFFORT.

Minister Mejia in Washington—Says His Country Is Not at War.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Federico Mejia, the Salvadorsn Minister of Finance and special envoy from Salvador to Mexico and the United States for the purpose of bringing about peace in Central America, called at the State Department today and had a long conference with Assistant Secretary Bacon. He was accompanied to the department by Señor Calvo, the Costa Rican Minister, who has been active in peace negotiations.

Señor Mejia stated that he had been appointed by the Government of Salvador as its regularly accredited Minister to the United States, and he will accordingly be allowed to present his credentials at the White House on Saturday or Monday as the successor of Señor Pacas, who retired some time ago.

Some days ago Salvador appealed to both Mexico and the United States in the hope of obtaining an armistice in Central America through the influence of these two republics. This plan failed, and Salvador is now trying to end the struggle by other means.

It is the contention of Salvador that she is not at war with Nicaragua, never having formally declared war against that republic. Salvador maintains that she has in a way been drawn into the struggle through Nicaraguan revolutionists, who were in Salvador when war began between Honduras and Nicaragua. These revolutionists, so Salvador says, left Salvador and joined Bonilla's army in Honduras.

It has been generally understood that Salvador was at war with Nicaragua, and furnished many troops to the Hondurans. It is denied, however, by Señor Mejia that war actually exists between his country and Nicaragua.

Colombian-Venezuelan Row Denied.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Colombian Minister has received a telegram from his Government denying the report that relations between Colombia and Venezuela have been interrupted because of the course of Colombia in regard to Venezuelan refugees. Señor Granados, said to be a Colombian envoy, who suddenly left Caracas, has no official position.

It was attended by Government officials, diplomats, and members of the American colony. Mr. Lee has received a warm welcome from all classes here.

OTTAWA, April 4.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Frederick Borden, and L. P. Brodeus left here this afternoon on a special train for St. John, N. B., where they will embark for England. The Premier and Ministers are to take part in the Colonial Conference in London.

FOOD.

COLLEGE BOY

Fond of Doughnuts and Pie, but could not "Keep in the Game" on Such Food.

One good thing about modern college athletics is that the young fellows learn some sense about food and what it is really for.

A thing may taste good, but may not be the thing to make clear brains, elastic muscles, and "good wind."

A Mich. boy went in for sport, but soon found that there was something wrong with his food. He writes:

"During my school days I was fond of outdoor sport and excelled in nearly every game that I entered. It was just at my greatest growing period, and I was springing up like a vine.

"The food I ate then soon proved to be unfit to sustain my growth and hard mental and physical work. I relished and ate pastry and used to eat hot doughnuts by the half dozen. I had starchy and greasy food pretty much all the time.

"Soon I became so weak I would have to eat during the middle of the night before I could go to sleep, (half starved because the undigested food eaten never became absorbed for strength.)

"My body was calling for nourishment that it could not get from the kind of food I ate. My stomach pained me, and specialists pronounced my case severe intestinal indigestion.

"I tried everything imaginable in the way of different foods, but without avail. Finally I hit on Grape-Nuts, which I began to eat and relish, three times a day. Soon my stomach and bowels got all right and my natural sleep returned. Now I am hard at work every day and sound in health, which I owe largely to the advice in, 'The Road to Wellville,' the little book in the pkgs." Name given by Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a Reason."

POWERS MAY CHANGE HAGUE PROGRAMME

Governments Reserve the Right to Bring Up Subjects Not on the List.

RUSSIA'S CIRCULAR NOTE

Italy May Suggesct a New Plan for Armament Limitation Discussion.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, to-day delivered to Secretary Root the Russian circular note relative to the approaching Hague Conference, received by him yesterday from St. Petersburg. The note is as follows:

The undersigned Ambassador of Russia, by order of his Government, has the honor to make the following communication to his Excellency the Secretary of State of the United States:

Before the second Peace Conference is called, the Imperial Government deems it an obligation to submit to the powers which have accepted its invitation a statement of the present situation.

All the powers to which the Imperial Government communicated in April, 1906, its tentative programme of the labors of the new conference have declared their adherence thereto.

However, the following remarks have been made with respect to that programme:

The Government of the United States has reserved to itself the liberty of submitting to the second conference two additional questions, viz.: That of the reduction or limitation of armaments and that of bringing about an agreement to observe certain limitations in the use of force in collecting ordinary public debts accruing from contracts.

The Spanish Government has expressed a desire to discuss the limitation of armaments, reserving to itself the right to deal with this question at the next meeting at The Hague.

The British Government has given notice that it attaches great importance to having the question of expenditures for armament discussed at the conference and has reserved to itself the right of raising it; it has also reserved to itself the right of taking no part in the discussion of any question mentioned in the Russian programme which would be unlikely to produce any useful result to it.

Japan is of the opinion that certain questions that are not especially enumerated in the programme might be conveniently included among the subjects for consideration and reserves to itself the right to take no part in or withdraw from any discussion taking or tending to take a trend which, in its judgment, would not be conducive to any useful result.

The Governments of Bolivia, Denmark, Greece, and the Netherlands have also reserved to themselves, in a general way, the right to submit to the consideration of the conference other subjects similar to those that are explicitly mentioned in the Russian programme.

The Imperial Government deems it its duty to declare, for its part, that it maintains its programme of the month of April, 1906, as the basis for the deliberations of the conference, and that if the conference should broach a question that would appear to it unlikely to end in any practical issue it reserves to itself, in its turn, the right to take no part in such a discussion.

Remarks similar to this last have been made by the German and Austro-Hungarian Governments, which have likewise reserved to themselves the right to take no part in the discussion by the conference of any question which would appear unlikely to end in any practical issue.

In bringing these reservations to the knowledge of the powers and with the hope that the labors of the second Peace Conference will create new guarantees for the good understanding of the nations of the civilized world, the Imperial Government has addressed to the Government of the Netherlands a request that it may be pleased to call the conference for the first days of June.

The original programme for the conference was presented to the powers on April 12, 1906. The matters proposed for discussion were:

1. Improvements to be made in the provisions of the convention relative to the peaceful settlement of international disputes as regards the Court of Arbitration and the International Commission of Inquiry.

2. Additions to be made to the provisions of the convention of 1899 relative to the laws and customs of war on land, among others those concerning the opening of hostilities, the rights of neutrals on land, &c. Declarations of 1899. One of these having expired, question of its being revived.

3. Framing of a convention relative to the laws and customs of maritime warfare, concerning:

The special operations of maritime warfare, such as the bombardment of ports, cities, and villages by a naval force, the laying of torpedoes, &c.

The transformation of merchant vessels into warships.

The private property of belligerents at sea.

The length of time to be granted to merchant ships for their departure from ports of neutrals or of the enemy after the opening of hostilities.

The rights and duties of neutrals at sea, among others the questions of contraband, the rules applicable to belligerent vessels in neutral ports; destruction, in cases of vis major, of neutral merchant vessels captured as prizes.

In the said convention to be drafted there would be introduced the provisions relative to war on land that would be also applicable to maritime warfare.

4. Additions to be made to the convention of 1899 for the adaptation to maritime warfare of the principles of the Geneva Convention of 1864.

It is expected that June 15 will be selected as the date for the opening of the conference.

ROME, April 4.—The Foreign Office has under consideration a proposal concerning the discussion of the question of the limitation of armaments at The Hague Peace Conference, which may be brought forward distinct from the British proposal.

It is proposed to couch this proposal in terms that will not hurt the susceptibilities of the powers not in favor of the original proposition.

SANTOS-DUMONT FALLS AGAIN

Is Not Injured, but His Aeroplane Is Seriously Damaged.

PARIS, April 4.—M. Santos-Dumont was not willing to risk his new aeroplane in the heavy wind blowing to-day, so he made his experiment with his old machine. He flew a distance of thirty yards, when the machine was upset by a strong gust of wind and came violently to the ground.

M. Santos-Dumont was not injured, but the machine was seriously damaged. The trial was made at St. Cyr.

TO STOP STRAP-HANGING.

British Government Means to Prevent Overcrowding of Trains.

LONDON, April 4.—The Government has started a campaign against the overcrowding of railroad cars. The subject was forcefully brought to the Government's notice in the course of the recent session of the House of Commons by complaints of its democratic followers who utilize the underground and suburban railroads to reach their residences in distant suburbs.

A bill will be introduced at the reassembling of Parliament giving the Board of Trade and the Railway Commissioners power to order the companies to run more frequent or longer trains and to impose penalties in order to prevent overcrowding.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Lloyd-George, declares that the strap-hinging nuisance and danger must go.

IVINS OPPOSES CHOATE'S DEMANDS

Wants Provisions the ex-Ambassador Objected to Retained in Utilities Bill.

CONCURS IN ONE POINT

Power of Removal, He Agrees, Should Rest with the Senate as Well as the Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—William M. Ivins, who bors a prominent part in drafting ths Page-Merritt Public Utilities bill, appeared as chief spokesman for the advocates of that measure at the joint hearing to-day before the Senate Judiciary and Assembly Railroads Committees. This was the last in the series of public hearings on the bill. It was announced just before adjournment that both sides would have until next Wednesday to submit briefs or suggest amendments. Consideration of the bill will then be taken up by the two committees in joint session.

Mr. Ivins criticised Mr. Choate, who spoke yesterday in behalf of the steam railroads, and some of the other representatives of the public service corporations. He urged that all the provisions to which Mr. Choate had objected so strenuously be retained in the bill, with one exception. He concurred in the representation made by the opponents of the bill, that the power of removal should rest not with the Governor alone, but with the Governor and the Senate.

"Mr. Choate," he continued, "said that he wanted an appeal from every order of the commission. As their proposed bill now stands they might appeal to the Appellate Division from an order directing the form in which the reports of the corporations should be made to them, and they have been so careful and they have been so elaborately crafty in the preparation of their work here that at every possible point they have introduced the word 'reasonable,' so that every possible proposition could be taken up on that score of 'reasonableness' to the Appellate Division.

"As to the matters of financial control, I am satisfied that every provision in this bill in respect to those matters makes for the public good, and I am satisfied with the provisions in this bill with regard to public accounting, for the regulation of accounting certainly makes for

"Suppose laws like this had existed in all the States of the Union prior to the Presidential election of 1904, where there was perfect publicity of accounts, do you think we would now be witnessing the remarkable and deplorable spectacle of the controversy between the President of the United States and the President of a railroad company as to a contribution of $200,000 to the Presidential campaign fund? It could not have occurred because of the necessity for publication and because of that necessity the Commissioners would have access to the accounts, and under those conditions it could not have occurred, and under those conditions it cannot occur in the future if your bill be passed, and becomes a law."

Discussing the prohibition of one railroad company investing to the extent of obtaining a controlling interest in the securities of another, and the objections raised by the representative of the railroad companies, Mr. Ivins said the law had originally prohibited such investments altogether. Then he made the following statement:

"We had our law changed, and in 1892 the law took the shape whereby a railroad company could take these steps; it was not so before that. Nevertheless the Dean of our bar stood here yesterday and told you that you proposed to change a system of fifty years ago, which is not a just or a logical statement.

"As I said, in 1892 the law was changed. Did public opinion change in 1892? Did the Legislature knowingly change the law? No, not a bit of it. The Legislature changed the law because it was the interest and policy of Chauncey M. Depew that the law should be changed. The Legislature was so constituted that it gave him a law.

"In other words, laws were not only made, but given to your railroad companies, and it was given to the New York Central Railroad Company, and I hope you will adhere to the older practice. The Legislature having made the law as it is let a reform Legislature, a better informed, more intelligent Legislature unmake the law, and go back to where it was. Having committed the evil, do awny with the evil."

The other speakers were Edward B. Whitney, Julius Henry Cohen of the Citizens' Union, Prof. Charles Sprague Smith of the People's Institute, and James S. Lehmaier.

FAVORS UTILITIES BILL.

Chamber of Commerce, However, Advocates Court Review.

The New York Chamber of Commerce put itself on record in favor of Gov. Hughes's Public Service Commissions bill, with the qualification of a court review, at the monthly meeting yesterday. A resolution expressing high praise of the general features of the measure was introduced by A. Barton Hepburn and adopted. Mr. Heuburn's resolution, however, voiced the necessity for some amendments.

It objected, in the first place, to what it called the "extensive provisions for interference with the executive and internal administration of companies," which, the report said, seem to be unnecessary in order to carry out the general provisions of the bill and inconsistent with the efficiency, and even safety, of administration. It continues:

"Section 52, for instance, providing that the commission make rules concerning the number and efficiency of employes, is not in the public interest. The provision that the commission may issue orders to employes is clearly wrong. That, of course, ought to be impossible. In the case of a railroad company, public safety requires that orders shall be issued only by officers of the company, according to the rules governing it, and any direct issue of orders or other interference with discipline by an outside authority ought not to bt permitted.

"We trust that in all these matters of administration and with those which deal with the methods of creating stock, borrowing money, and organizing and consolidating companies, the bill will be amended so as not unnecessarily to restrict enterprise or prohibit legitimate invitations to new capital. In our opinion, rigorous publicity is the true and, in the long run, the most effective cure for evils in these respects, rather than the establishment of minute requirements as to the detail of administration."

On the subject of a court review the report says:

"In our opinion the act ought, subject to proper restrictions, to provide n judicial review as to the justice and reasonableness of orders which tend seriously to impair the income or available capital of corporations. As we understand the bill, the commission will have the power to make orders which may involve capital expenditures by a corporation of many millions of dollars. So the commission will have the power to order the reduction of rates, which may mean the diminution of income by millions of dollars annually.

"If such orders or decrees shall not be subject to review as to their reasonableness, as well as to the jurisdiction of the commissions making the orders, it follows that this class of property will be subject to risks to which other property is not subject. The investments in public utilities should not be disparaged, lest the public itself in the long run be made to suffer."

The only opposition to Mr. Hepburn's resolution came from G. Waldo Smith, who took the ground that it would muzzle new enterprises all over the State and give too much power into the hands of the commission.

Among other new members elected was ex-Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw.

It was decided to send a committee of five members of the Chamber to the coming Peace Conference.

DELAYS SUBWAY CONTRACTS.

Bill Designed to Give Public Service Commission Control of Them.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—Senator Saxe today after a conference with several legislators interested in the Page-Merritt Public Utilities bill introduced a bill which amends the Rapid Transit act to the extent of making it necessary to advertise for new subway contracts for three months instead of three weeks in advance, as at present. Senator Saxe in explaining his bill said:

"The friends of the Public Utilities bill are of the opinion that if the recent contracts for subways in the Borough of Manhattan are permitted to be consummated before the enactment of the proposed Public Service Commissions law the Commission for the City of New York to be appointed by the Governor will be seriously hampered in planning a comprehensive rapid transit system for the city.

"The frank object of the proposed bill introduced to-day is to extend the time for the advertising of the contracts now offered by the present Rapid Transit Commission so that the new commission will have a chance to consider such proposals in connection with their general plan of improvement of the service. Much is naturally expected of the new commission, and it seems unfair that it should be limited in its possibilities by the last actions of its predecessor in authority."

NATIONAL GUARD BILL OUT.

Raines Changes Front and Senate Committee Reports the Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—The Senate Finance Committee to-day reported out the Wainwright bill providing for a commission to investigate the National Guard, and revise the military code. The bill has already passed the Assembly and the Governor has set his heart on having it become law.

A week ago Senator Raines joined hands with Senator Grady in opposing the Governor's friends on the committee, with the result that the committee decided not to report the bill, and the measure was considered as good as dead.

The action to-day was due to an entire change of front on the part of Senator Raines, who has been in conference with Gov. Hughes recently. The majority leader pulled the rest of the committee with him, and the bill was reported by a vote of 11 to 1—Dominick Mullaney being the only member to vote in the negative.

The bill was amended so as to reduce the appropriation from $15,000 to $10,000. An amendment was also inserted giving three places on the commission to the Senate, three to the Assembly, and three to the Governor. In the original bill the Governor had the appointment of four members and the Senate of only two.

DEFEAT FOR LOCAL OPTION.

Bill Remains with Committee—Anti-Saloon League Denounced.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—For nearly three hours to-day the hotel men of New York City through their representatives and the Anti-Saloon League through its agents, fought their annual fight in the Assembly over the Local Option bill. The hotel men won by a vote of 69 to 61, the majority being against Assemblyman Winter's motion to discharge the Excise Committee from further consideration of the bill.

The result was something of a surprise, as last year the victory rested with the Anti-Saloon League, but what members of the Assembly called "scurrilous communications" reflecting on the honor of the Excise Committee which had been circulated by the league lost it many votes. The usual motion whereby the vote can be taken again was made. It is the general impression, however, that local option is dead for this session.

Mr. Cuvillier made a bitter attack on the League agents stationed at Albany.

CANAL BOARD PROTESTS.

Objects to Bills Depriving It of Its Powers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—The State Canal Board at its meeting to-day, at which were present Lieut. Gov. Chanler, Treasurer Hinuser, Controller Glynn, Attorney General Jackson, and Engineer Skene, adopted a resolution formally protesting against certain bills now pending, and which have for their object the taking away from the board of any powers it has relative to the canal work.

The legislation proposes to create a new force of engineers and have the Governor appoint a new advisory board, with absolute veto power on canal plans vested in the board.

In the opinion of the Canal Board, the legislation infringes on its powers and those of the State Engineer.

POLICE BILL TO THE MAYOR.

The Assembly Concurs in Slight Senate Amendments.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—The Bingham police bill appeared in the Assembly to-day for concurrence in slight amendments in the phraseology made by the Senate. A couple of votes were cast against it, and it was then sent on its way to Mayor McClellan for approval.

It is expected that it will be in the hands of Gov. Hughes within a week.

Sailed—Abarenda, from Guantanamo for Hampton Roads; Scorpion, from San Pedro de Macoris for Sanchez; Saturn, from Magdalena Bay for San Diego; Boston, from Magdalena Bay for Acapulco and Acajutla; Mayflower, from Colon for Havana.

KELSEY DEFENDERS BITTER IN SENATE

Armstrong Is Made to Bear the Brunt of a Severe Attack.

MORE COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Authorization Is Granted for the Summoning and Swearing of Witnesses.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—For the first time since Gov. Hughes sent in his recommendation for the removal of Supt. Kelsey of the Insurance Department, the case came up before the full Senate to-day. It provoked a protracted debate, in which Senators Raines, McCarren, and Grady joined in bitter attack on Senator Armstrong, who has been acting as the Governor's champion in the Kelsey matter.

Over the vigorous protest of Armstrong, the Senate adopted a report submitted on behalf of the Judiciary Committee, by which that body received full power to subpoenae witnesses, administer oaths, and carry out its programme with regard to the Kelsey hearings as determined upon at the meeting of the committee yesterday.

There was no line-up to-day. While Kelsey's friends came strongly to the front for him, and even the Governor himself came in for some indirect criticism, there was nothing in the action taken by the Senate to-day that might serve as an indication of what may happen when the Kelsey case comes before the Senate for final judgment.

Senator Davis, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, offered the resolution. Senator Armstrong opposed its passage. Then Raines made his attack, basing his remarks on a newspaper interview attributed to Senator Armstrong, in which he was quoted as saying that he considered the time limit set on the Kelsey hearings at the committee meeting yesterday as a victory for "us," meaning the Governor's side. The majority leader worked himself into a towering passion as he spoke, and punctuated his remarks with wild and sweeping gestures.

"I hope the Senator will deny this statement," he almost roared. "I had not supposed there were any sides in this case, save the side occupied by all Senators who are seeking to do justice. On which side is the Senator when he says that the result of yesterday's meeting was a victory for 'us?' He says this before the investigation has been closed. I had supposed he was acting as a juryman. I want to say that if the Senator said this, then he has placed himself in a position where he has no business to sit in this body as a juryman in the case."

Senator Armstrong replied by saying that he had given an interview in which he had characterized the result as a victory for those who had been fighting against delay, but that he had been a friend of Senator Raines too long for Raines to believe that he [Armstrong] had intentionally said anything for publication to injure or offend him. Senator Raines accepted this as an apology.

McCarren then launched out in a bitter attack in which he included the Governor.

"I have tried to be free from prejudice in this matter from the very first," said he. "But I contend that charges have been preferred against the Insurance Superintendent. Are we wolves, that we should follow as though it were a scent of blood, to tear and rend, or are we men imbued with human justice and eager to see that a fair opportunity is given to the accused? Now, Senator Armstrong himself, had he been in a different position, might have been charged with inefficiency because of his insurance legislation. He may think that the insurance report holds the same relation to the insurance world as does the Bible to the Christian world, but I want to tell him that there is considerable difference of opinion on that subject.

"I know many people, and I am somewhat of their opinion, who consider the new insurance law a stupid, blundering sort of work, crude in conception and unworkable in its reforms—the crudest piece of legislation ever enacted. The present election has cost the policy holders $250,000, and all has not been paid yet. We might say from that that Senator Armstrong is an incompetent Senator."

A WEAPON FOR HUGHES.

Reversal of Apportionment Makes Talk at the Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—The reversal by the Court of Appeals of the legislative reapportionment law of last year, continues to be the foremost topic of discussion at the Capitol to-night.

One feature that is crowding to the foreground, however, is the strong political weapon it has put into the hands of Gov. Hughes. Through his veto power he necessarily would become a factor in any new reapportionment that would be undertaken by this or the next Legislature.

Senator Raines expressed as his opinion to-day that nothing would be done for the present, that the subject was too large a one and its political consequences too far reaching to be acted upon hastily. His remarks left the inference that the leaders in different parts of the State, after giving the matter the necessary thought, in all probability, would take the initiative to be followed.

That the upset of the old division has rendered an extra session of the Legislature more of a likelihood than it was before, is admitted by everybody. It was reported by some of the Governor's friends the other day that in case some of the legislation included in his programme of reform should fail at the regular session, it might find itself summoned for an extra session.

BLOW TO OSTEOPATHS.

Assembly Votes to Compel Them to Undergo Examinations.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—An amendment was adopted by the Assembly to-day which would compel osteopaths who were planning to get in under the Whitney Composite bill, to pass a surgical examination if they wish to practice any form of surgery. O'Brian of Erie offered the amendment, and it was adopted, 69 to 36.

For four months the osteopaths have been trying to get recognition, and finally, after the various schools of medicine as represented in Albany and the osteopaths had met with the public health committees, a bill was drawn. By it the 200 osteopaths now practising would be recognized by the State, though all of that school who became such after the enactment of the bill would lack that recognition until certain examinations as prescribed in the bill had been passed.

Dr. Draper, Assemblyman from Niagara, led the fight against the bill as it stood. By the adoption of the O'Brian amendment the bill will have to be reprinted, and will be some days before it again comes up.

These shirts excel in fit, quality of fabric and excellent making. Not only do they fit arouud the neck, but also all over. The materials are extremely high grade, not usually found in shirts as low as $1. The colorings are guaranteed fast and fadeless. These shirts have the appearance of much higher-priced merchandise and will give longest service.

E. & W. shirts for Spring—new "Calais," "Aberdeen" and "Glasgow" designs—$2.50 and $3.50.

French Balbriggan Underwear, $1 Value, 50c

Shirts and Drawers at 50c. a garment of fine gauge French balbriggan. They have finished cuffs and ankles, that fit smooth, but do not bind.

Shirts have short or long sleeves. Fronts finely finished, pearl buttons, &c. French style necks.

Drawers have double reinforced diamond-shaped gusset, extra large, separately woven and set in to stand hardest strain. They have French back straps, buttoning on pearl buttons. Sizes are regular, and short and stout. Garments of this grade are $1 everywhere except in Brill stores.

Lisle Gauze Half Hose, 25c.

Last season Brill stores sold a thousand dozen pairs of black lisle gauze hose. The general satisfaction they gave their wearers and the repeated demands for more from men who knew them have led Brill stores to show for this season not only the black, but the same grade in gray, blue and tan. All have double toes, heels and soles. They're smartly thin and serviceably strong—two ideal qualities often sought, but seldom found together in hosiery for men.

NOTABLE MEN HERE, GUESTS OF CARNEGIE

Europe's Men of Affairs Assembling at the Hotel Belmont.

FOR INSTITUTE DEDICATION

Group of Prominent Britons to Arrive on the Baltic To-day, Other Visitors on La Touraine To-morrow

Andrew Carnegie's guests at the Hotel Belmont now number sixteen, but within the next few days the number will be more than double. They have been invited to come from their homes in the various countries of Europe to attend the dedication of the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburg on April 11. From the moment they left their homes until they return to them again, Mr. Carnegie has asked them to accept his hospitality and to let him foot the bill.

William T. Stead, who arrived on Wednesday on the Cunarder Caronia, said last night at the Hotel Belmont:

"It rarely falls to the lot of a man to receive such a free-handed invitation as Mr. Carnegie extended to me, and I suppose to my fellow-guests also.

"The last time he was on the other side of the Atlantic he said to me:

"'Mr. Stead, I want you to come over to America and take part in the dedication of the Carnegie Institute, at Pittsburg. I've asked about forty or fifty other people, all of them well known in the various activities of life, to come also.

"'This Carnegie Institute is the biggest thing I've done yet; I've spent over £2,000,000 on it. When you come, bring your wife or your daughter or both of them with you. I want you to go where you please, to see what you please, and from the time you cross your doorstep until you recross it again it won't cost you a cent.'

"I accepted the invitation for myself and wife. A short time ago I received a communication from one of the officials of the Carnegie Institute. It inclosed an order for such passage tickets as I needed to America, good on any of the eight best lines. The order also called for return tickets on any of the same eight lines.

Baggage Inspection Waived.

"It informed me that during my stay we would be Mr. Carnegie's guests at the Hotel Belmont, and that our host had made arrangements with the Treasury Department to have all the baggage of his guests on this occasion passed through the New York Customs without inspection.

"On next Wednesday a special train on the Pennsylvania Line will take all the guests then in New York through the Allegbany Mountains to Pittsburg. Hotel accommodations have already been provided for us there. We will then come back to New York to attend the Peace Conference. It's a long trip and a long stay, but every detail has been arranged for us by Mr. Carnegie."

The guests at the Hotel Belmont already number among them Lieut. Gen. von Loewenfeld, Adjutant in the Kaiser's military household and personal friend of the German Emperor; Lieut. Col. Gustav Dickhuth of the German General Staff and Miss Dickmuth, Prof. Friedrich Schafer of Berlin, a member of the Royal Academy of Art, one of the foremost sculptors in Germany, and Miss Schafer; William T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews of England and international advocater of peace and Mrs. Stead; Sir William H. Preece, formre Engineer in Chief of the British Post Office; J. M. W. Van der Poorten-Schwartz, the author who writes under the pen name of "Maarten Maartens," and Miss Poorten-Schwartz; Dr. P. Chalmers Mitchell, Secretary of the Zoological Society of London, and Mrs. Mitchell; Theodore von Moeller, Dr. R. Koser, Leonce Benedite, and Miss Benedite.

Those expected to arrive on the steamship Baltic this morning are William Robertson, his wife and daughter, Sir John Ross, Sir John Hall, Dr. John Rhys and daughter, Provost Macbeth and wife, Sir R. S. Ball, and C. F. Moberly Bell.

Expect d'Estournelles To-morrow.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant and his secretary, Jules Rais, and Camille Eulary and wife were all expected on La Savoie, but as that steamship was forced to lay up for repairs they are now expected on La Touraine to-morrow.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant is one of the leading authorities on arbitration. He was a member of the first Hague Conference, and is now one of the French members of the Hague Court. He is organizing the representative men of every nation into an International Federation, whose motto is: "My country's good through the peace of the world."

The liberality with which Mr. Carnegie has extended his invitations is reflected in the uncertainty at the Hotel Belmont as to how many more of his guests are expected to arrive. Mr. Carnegie's representative communicates to the hotel manager that a certain person is to arrive on such a day on such a steamship as the Laird of Skibo's guest.

The Hotel Belmont then sends conveyances to the dock to bring both passenger and luggage to the hotel. There the manager assigns him to whatever quarters he may desire.

The host's orders are that each guest shall receive whatever he desires. He is not even allowed to pay for any cab or automobile ordered through the hotel. A list of the guests and their room numbers has been prepared, so that cards and visits may be exchanged. But as yet there has been little commingling of Mr. Carnegie's visitors. They all have friends and interests here that will keep them busy while in New York. They have postponed making each other's acquaintance until they reach Pittsburg.

Dr. Mitchell has been busy inspecting the Bronx Zoological Garden. William T. Stead has already been the guest of a number of clubs at informal dinners, and spent last night at Hastings, at the home of Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of The American Review of Reviews.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant will go to Washington to take dinner with the President on Monday night, with the Brazilian Minister on Tuesday night, and with the French Ambassador on Wednesday. The following day he will go to Pittsburg to take part in the Carnegie Institute ceremonies.

CRANSTON CARNEGIE'S GUEST.

To Deliver Congratulatory Address to University of Pennsylvania.

Sir Robert Cranston, who is here for the opening of the Technical Institute in Pittsburg, has been the guest of Andrew Carnegie at 2 East Ninety-first Street for several days.

Sir Robert Cranston is lecture in Philadelphia, and Boston. He has been entrusted by the Senate of Edinburg University to deliver the congratulatory address to be presented to the University of Pennsylvania. Sir Robert left Edinburgh on March 23. He is ex-Lord Provost of Edinburgh.

BELMONT NOT BLACKBALLED.

But There Is Opposition to Admitting Him to the Chevy Chase Club.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The name of Perry Belmont was put up for membership in the Chevy Chase Club some time ago, but opposition developed in the Board of Governors. It is understood that the opposition came from men who were influenced by the attitude of the White House, where Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont have not the entrée.

At any rate, as the time approached for a vote on the application of Mr. Belmont for membership it became apparent that there would be at least two, and possibly three, black balls. It is reported that A. S. Worthington, one of the fourteen Governors of the club, openly announced that he would oppose the election of Mr. Belmont, and that Gen. Wallace Randolph, another Governor, took the same attitude. For that reason action on the application was postponed.

It was reported to-day that the application had been withdrawn, but Col. Denny, the President of the club, announced this afternoon that it had been held over for possible subsequent action.

It has been reported also that Mrs. Belmont made application for membership and that her application met with similar opposition. This, too, was denied to-day.

Mr. Belmont is a member of the Metropolitan Club, and it is reported that after the development of opposition to him in the Chevy Chase Club he met Gen. Randolph at the Metropolitan Club and refused to take a drink with him. The story goes that hot words ensued and that Gen. Randolph has not been at the Metropolitan Club since.

MORGAN BUYS ERIE NOTES.

The Road, Apparently, Is Paying More Than 7 Per Cent. on $5,500,000.

The Erie Railroad sold to J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday $5,500,000 of one-year notes, to provide funds for the payment of $3,000,000 6 per cent. notes which mature next Monday, and of $2,000,000 additional which mature at subsequent dates up to July 1, 1907.

An unusual feature of the latest Erie financing is the fact that the new notes bear no fixed rate of interest, but were discounted by the bankers in precisely the same way in which commercial paper is discounted. It was learned that the transaction was arranged in this way at the suggestion of bankers who have been interested in the flotation of Erie notes, it being thought that this was the most desirable form in which to put out these short-time obligations.

The terms on which the notes were offered yesterday indicate that the Erie Railroad is paying more than 7 per cent. for the money which it is borrowing to meet its maturing obligations. The notes were offered on a 7 per cent. basis, and it is assumed that the cost to the railroad itself was larger than this, inasmuch as this figure did not, of course, include the bankers' commission.

The notes which are about to be paid off out of the proceeds of this new issue were placed last Fall, for the purpose of providing funds with which to carry on improvement work on the Erie lines, a large part of which has since been discontinued, owing to the difficulty of raising additional funds with which to carry on the work. The high rate of interest at which the road is borrowing funds was widely commented on yesterday, in view of the fact that within the last few days both call and time loans have eased off considerably. Yesterday ordinary six-month loans were quoted at 5½ per cent.

BOSTON & ALBANY LEASE.

Arguments Against Cancellation—Improvements on the Road.

BOSTON, April 4.—Attorney Ralph A. Stewart, representing the New York Central Railroad, continued his argument today before the Legislative Committee on Railroads against the cancellation of the lease of the Boston & Albany Railroad. Mr. Stewart conceded the right of the Commonwealth to purchase the road at any time it saw fit, but said the question at issue was the wisdom of that course. The Commonwealth could purchase only that portion of the road in Massachusetts, he said, and would have to relinquish nearly $1,000,000 per year in taxes.

Vice President Edgar Van Etten of the New York Central said that when he took charge of the Boston Division he found many changes necessary. He had purchased a considerable number of engines and had contracted for many more. He had built 42 miles of side track, purchased 18 acres at Springfield for additional facilities, and 4 acres at Chelsea. There has been an increase of more than 50 per cent. in freight cars handled at the Boston end during the present year.

The hearing will be continued to-morrow.

TO USE ELECTRICITY.

Great Northern to Substitute It for Steam on One Division.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, April 4.—Electricity will be utilized by the Great Northern Railway Company instead of steam as motive power on at least one division of its transcontinental line in North Dakota, as well as in hauling its trains through the famous Cascade tunnel, in the Rocky Mountains. The stretch of road where it has been decided to use electricity is between Minot and Williston, where the road's supply of water is so full of mineral salts that an engine must be taken into the round house after every run to have its boiler cleaned.

The road between Minot and Williston has been giving the company a great deal of trouble, and at times the difficulties experienced have been sufficient to interfere materially with the operation of trains.

STANDARD OIL'S DEFENSE.

Indiana Company Expects to Establish the Legality of Its Rates.

CHICAGO, April 4.—The opening statements of the attorneys for the defense were made to-day in the trial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. It was charged by Lawyer Rosenthal, who made the first address to the jury, that the defense will be able to show not only that the witnessee for the Government misinterpreted the rate sheets of the Chicago & Alton Road, but that they did so willfully. He declared that the defense will show that the rate between Whiting, Ind., and Chappell, Ill., used by the Standard Oil Company, was a lawful rate, and was known to every shipper in the district.

"It sounds very much to me," said Judge Landis, "like the final argument in the case."

Rebate Demurrers Overruled.

BUFFALO, April 4.—Demurrers filed by the New York Central and Pennsylvania Railroads against the indictments charging them with granting concessions to the Standard Oil Company by an arrangement in violation of the Elkins Act, are overruled in a decision handed down by Judge Hazel to-day.

GOULDS MUST PAY ARCHITECT $30,000

Court of Appeals Will Not Permit Reopening of Haydel's Suit.

HE PLANNED CASTLE GOULD

But It Never Was Built—Mrs. Gould Insists to the End That She Didn't Say "Damn."

Tho dream of Mrs. Howard Gould to have on Sands Point, Long Island, a Castle Gould, which should resemble, in general, Kilkenny Castle, Ireland, the only material result, of which was a lawsuit begun in 1903 by the architect for drawing certain plans, finally has reached a stage where the Goulds must pay something like $30,000 for the architect's dream. In a decision just made known the Court of Appeals in Albany has refused to allow the case to be reopened, thus sustaining in effect the verdict of the two lower courts. While the original sum awarded to Abner J. Haydel, the architect, was $24,183.75, the lapse of time has added more than $6,000 to the cost.

In the course of legal proceedings it was asserted by the architect that at a final conference over the plans with the Goulds at the Waldorf-Astoria he was ordered from the room. When he failed to go promptly Mrs. Gould rang for a servant and, he testified, said:

"The door is open; throw the damn architect out."

This incident and the use of the "damn" were denied in their testimony by both of the Goulds, Mrs. Gould exclaiming in court:

"On my oath I never used such language on that night or on any other night."

It was back in 1900 that Gould Castle began to be considered. Architect Haydel was ordered to go to Kilkenny Castle, hampered by no other instructions than to study the Irish building and reproduce in his plans as far as possible the architecture of the seat of the Marquis of Ormonde. The Gould dream castle was to stand on a plateau, sixty feet above Long Island Sound, at Sands Point. The roadways leading up to the castle were to wind through 400 acres of natural forest. The castle itself was to stand on high ground surrounded by a ravine, which was to be converted into a water-filled moat, necessitating the use of bridges. In size there was to be considerable difference, Kilkenny Castle having sixty rooms, while its imitation was to be larger by 140.

Throughout the litigation the Goulds have maintained that Castle Gould never was begun because Architect Haydel did not finish his plans. He asserted that his contract called for him to supervise work that would cost $957,000, on which he was to receive 5 per cent. He placed his damages at $60,000.

THE MORRO CASTLE DAMAGED.

Storm Kept Her Passengers Below Decks for Sixty Hours.

For sixty hours on the trip from Havana which ended yesterday, Capt. Cleveland Downs of the steamship Morro Castle remained on the bridge while his vessel plowed her way through one of the worst storms she ever encountered. The Morro Castle sailed from Havana on March 30, and should have been in on Tuesday.

At the height of the storm Mr. and Mrs. F. Eastman of Portland, Me., and Mrs. Leonie Bergener of this city were playing at cards in the social hall when a huge comber struck the Morro Castle and hurled them across the room. Others in the social hall met the same fate, and soon there was a confused mass of passengers sprawling in a heap in the centre of the room. No one was hurt.

The great work of this organization is the showing of sack suits at $18, $20 and $25. The power and talent of our designers and tailormen are expressed in every line and curve, by the graceful fit and the interpretation of later day style innovations. There are browns and blues and blacks and grays in various models—conservative and radical—to choose from.

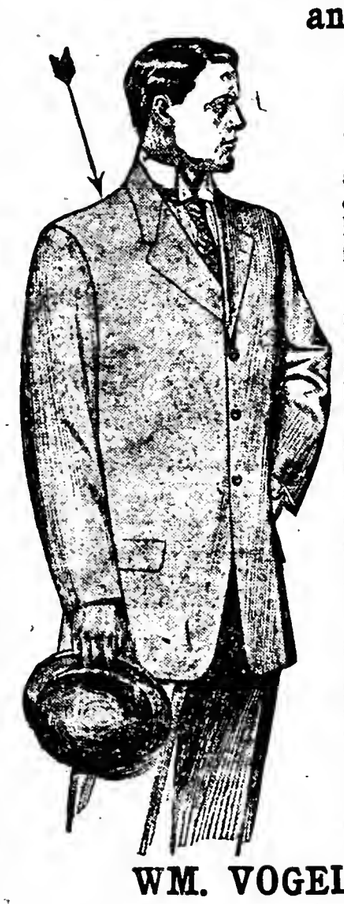
Spring Overcoats and Suits for Men at $20



IT is within the power of a great number of us to create a standard for a given product. The difficulty is in maintaining it, to keep the product ever from falling short of its demands.

Once established it may move in but one direction, and that is towards betterment. We have established a certain standard for our Suits and Overcoats at Twenty Dollars, not in any sense arbitrary, but one arrived at through a concentration of effort, energy and power, and a constant ambition to improve it and better it at every point.

The suits at $20 take form in a series of single-breasted models, fashioned of plain and fancy worsteds and cheviots, cassimeres and flannels in exclusive designs, and blue and black thibets.

The overcoats at $20 involve a series of models in all the new tans, grays and blacks, in a diversity of weaves.

THE CAVE-MAN

BY

John Corbin

A romance of fashionable New York life. The hero is nicknamed "The Cave-Man" because he is vigorously opposed to the modern development of trusts. The heroine is a daughter of the promoter of an automobile trust, and engaged to a young Wall Street man who is financing it. The Cave-Man eventually wrecks the trust, though this involves the financial ruin of the heroine and her father. It is a love story of unusual originality and power.

M'CLELLAN FACES HOT DISTRICT FIGHT

Ex-Alderman Baldwin a Candidate for Leadership in the Sixteenth.

ROW STARTED BY MURPHY

Mohican Club, Fire Commissioner Lantry's Organization, Split Wide Open—Lie Passed at Stormy Meeting.

There is a wide-open split in the Democratic ranks in the Sixteenth Assembly District, of which Mayor McClellan's Fire Commissioner Francis J. Lantry is the leader. From all indications, Mr. Lantry has a hot fight on his hands, instigated by Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall, and the Fire Commissioner and Mayor McClellan will both be lucky if, after the next primaries, the district is not found in the Murphy column again.

Although there have been indications of a split for some weeks, it was not until last night that affairs reached a culmination. Ex-Alderman Thomas F. Baldwin, formerly Chairman of Lantry's General Committee, walked out of a meeting of the Mohican Club, the district organization, after the lie had been passed and Mr. Baldwin had declared himself a candidate for leader. Then he went down to Forty-second Street and addressed the Tammany Hall Association of the Sixteenth Assembly District, a new organization. There was just about an equal number of people present at each meeting, presaging a hot, close fight at the primaries.

The real trouble in the Mohican Club started last week when resolutions objecting to the interference of the County Committee, and intended solely to make Mr. Baldwin come out in the open, were put through unanimously in the ex-Alderman's absence. It was said then that he had "sneaked out" to avoid the issue.

Last night after the routine business had been disposed of Mr. Baldwin got up and said he understood the resolutions had been passed for the purpose of finding out where he stood.

"That's right," said Henry Unger, who was in the chair. "They were put through to smoke you out."

"Well, I'd like to know what right you or anybody else has to ask me where I stand. It's none of your business. What right have you got here any way? You don't even belong in the district."

Mr. Unger pleaded the decision of the Appellate Division, declaring the new apportionment unconstitutional.

"Now, look here," went on Baldwin. "I've always been faithful to this organization and to Commissioner Langtry, but I'm perfectly free to do as I please, and from to-night out I'm a candidate for leader of this district."

This was followed by long and loud applause from the Baldwin supporters, who numbered about a third of the audience.

Assemblyman "Marty" McCue, ex-prize fighter, jumped on a chair and shouted: "When you say you've been faithful, you lie! If you say you supported the candidates of the organization, you're a liar! You didn't even support me."

"Oh, go get a record yourself," said Baldwin.

There was a lot of confusion and shouting, every one talking at once. Then Baldwin left, and the crowd quieted down.

Over at the other meeting, Baldwin was hailed as "the best Democrat the district ever produced," and Charlie Murphy was referred to as "the greatest political general the country ever saw." There were cheers for Murphy, for Baldwin, and for the organization, and every indication that the new association meant business. The Independence League representation in the district has joined forces with the Murphy people.

Mayor McClellan was called some hard names at the meeting. The complaint in the district seems to be that Lantry has not been favoring his supporters with sufficient patronage, and it is said that his hands have been tied by the Mayor's preference for out-of-town men, especially Princeton graduates. The cutting of the Democratic ticket in the district last election, it is said, resulted in Baldwin being defeated for Alderman.

HERMANN TELLS HIS STORY.

Letter Books Destroyed In the Open and by His Direction.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Binger Hermann occupied the witness stand in his own behalf at the afternoon session of his trial to-day. He detailed the circumstances of the destruction of his letter books, for which he is being tried. The destruction, he said, took place a few days before he retired as Commissioner of the General Land Office, and was conducted during office hours, publicly, in his office in the General Land Office.

"I think I indicated how to destroy them," continued Mr. Hermann, "by simply tearing the leaves in half, after which they were taken down to the waste paper bin. When I gave the order I turned either to Mr. Hough, my stenographer, or Mr. Daly, my financial clerk, who were standing by my side, and said: 'I have no earthly use for these old books and it is only an unnecessary expense to send them across the continent. They simply contain my personal correspondence.'

"This was done in the best of faith and not in the world to destroy anything I regarded as official. My motive was simply that I had no further use for them. I had had no occasion to refer to them during the six years they had been accumulating. They had no other purpose and I considered them as belonging to me, as much my property as the coat on my back. I did it in the open—with the clerks about me."

A RIVAL FOR CONEY.

Golden City, a New Amusement Park, Building at Canarsie.

Coney Island will have a rival this Summer in Golden City, Canarsie. A pleasure park of eight acres is being constructed by a company, of which H. G. Traver of the Traver Cycle Swing Company is President. It will be open to the public on May 18, and as the fare from Brooklyn is only 5 cents, the promoters hope to divert many people who object to paying 10 cents to reach Coney.

Canarsie is on the borders of Jamaica Bay, and visitors will have excellent opportunities for fishing. Golden City itself will be provided with all the regular attractions of such resorts, such as scenic railways, roller coasters, water rides, and aerial motion devices. Special features will be housed in large buildings erected for the purpose.

The City can be reached free either Brooklyn Bridge or Williamsburg Bridge by express trains of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit in forty minutes. It will be particularly handy for those who live in East New York and places on the Long Island Railroad. If the project is a success this year its owners promise to enlarge the City next year to twenty-five acres.

New Officers of American Life.

At a meeting of the Directors of the North American Life Insurance Company, held in Newark yesterday, the resignation of John T. Boone as President of the company was tendered and accepted. Mr. Boone always intended to retire when the company became firmly established. Lee B. Duratine, former Vice President, was elected President, and J. H. McNamara, former Second Vice President, was elected Vice President.

QUIZ SLUMMING CURATE.

A Commission Will Decide If He Should Be Tried.

The story of how the Rev. William Howard Mears got arrested in company with a colored woman while pursuing sociological studies at short range in the Tenderloin was told in detail yesterday before a special commission appointed by Bishop Coadjutor Greer to investigate the conduct of the young curate of St. Matthew's Church. Mr. Mears and his sad-faced wife meantime waited in a room near by. They were called, one at a time, before the commission. There the curate was ordered to tell of his arrest in the Seventh Avenue dive to which he had accompanied the woman in order, as he protested, to carry out a line of sociological research which he considered necessary in his profession.

The same plea that was made by the curate when he was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court the morning after his arrest was made by him yesterday to the commission. Its report will decide whether he will or will not be tried on the charge of conduct unbecoming a clergyman. Whether the commission will be inclined to take the same view as did the Magistrate who dismissed the charge against the curate is not yet known.

The commission is composed of ex-Mayor Seth Low, Francis Lynde Stetson the lawyer, the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Church; the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning of St. Agnes's Chapel, and the Venerable Dr. George F. Nelson, Archdeacon of New York. Yesterday's hearing was held in the Ses House at 416 Lafayette Street, and will continue there on Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock, when all the evidence will be turned over to Bishop Greer, and the Bishop will announce whether or not a trial by an ecclesiastical court is justified. The commission is virtually an ecclesiastical Grand Jury. The members have been requested not to disclose what is brought out in the investigation.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Judge, rector of St. Matthew's, was one of the witnesses who testified yesterday. He said he had been unaware that his curate was pursuing sociological studies in the Tenderloin until the news of Mr. Mears's arrest in the Seventh Avenue house came out. Prior to that time, said Dr. Judge, the conduct of his curate had been above reproach.

Mrs. Mears, who was also called as a witness, told the Commissioners that her husband's studies of sociological conditions in the slums had been known to her for some time and had met with her approval. She had often cautioned him, though, to be more careful and "not to be so venturesome." Mrs. Mears said that her husband began his studies in the slums several years ago when in Cincinnati. He used data collected in that way in lectures given before Masonic and other gatherings, and had intended publishing the result of his researches later.

It is unlikely that the two women arrested with Mr. Mears will appear before the Commissioners. The two detectives, John Schmacke and Joseph Herzing, who followed Mr. Mears to the Seventh Avenue house and afterward made the arrests, testified yesterday. In the morning Archdeacon Nelson called at the Jefferson Market Court and asked for a transcript of the testimony taken when Mr. Mears was arraigned there. He was told that no minutes had been made.

Mr. Stetson, the legal member of the commission, had charge of yesterday's investigation. When Mr. and Mrs. Mears were seen afterward at their home, 69 West Seventy-first Street, Mrs. Mears said she would like to tell what had come out in the investigation, but could not. Her husband remarked that there was nothing to be said.

MILK ORDINANCE AMENDMENT.

Proposed to Increase Bacterial Standard for Pasteurization.

The Aldermen's Committee on Public Health held an executive session yesterday to discuss the proposed ordinance affecting the sale of raw milk in New York City. Alderman Grifenhagen submitted to Chairman Jacobson of the committee several amendments to the ordinance, the most important of which changed the proposed bacterial standard from 50,000 to 200,000 bacteria to the cubic centimetre. The measure would then provide for the pasteurization of all milk that does not come within that standard, and which is not from herds certified as free from tuberculosis.

Another proposed amendment gives the Health Department complete power of supervision over pasteurization, and requires that milk so purified shall be labeled to show pasteurization.

"The purpose of the amendment to the proposed standard," said Alderman Grifenhagen, "is to allow as much raw milk to be sold in the city as is consistent with public safety. The ideal standard would be that set in the original ordinance, but a standard of 200,000 bacteria to the cubic centimetre would assure practical safety to the consumer.

"This standard with provision preventing the mixing of milk from various dairies would result, practical dairymen assure me, in fully one-half of the dairies producing milk that could be certified by the Department of Health under the ordinance. The rest would have to be pasteurized. What we want to do is to save the children by pasteurizing the milk, thus making it fit for them to drink."

Modern Methods of Improving the Milk Supply of Cities" was the subject of an address delivered yesterday before the New York School of Philanthropy in the United Charities Building by the Hon. Clarence B. Lane, Assistant Chief of the Dairy Division of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. The lecture was illustrated by ninety slides, showing concretely the work of inspection now being carried on under the direction of the Department of Agriculture, and by State and local authorities.

TEACHERS SCORNED IDEA OF A UNION

Equality League of Self-Supporting Women Hear of Their Hauteur.

CHEERS FOR SUFFRAGETTES

Speakers at Cooper Union Mass Meeting Demand Woman's Right to Her Say About War, Too.

The speakers and the audience facing them beneath an undulating mass of feminine headgear at the Cooper Union mass meeting last night of the Equality League of Self-Supporting Women, demanded first of all that women be permitted to vote, then that they be permitted "as a political factor to have something to say about the momentous questions of peace and war"—which meant the same thing—and further that women teachers in New York receive the same salary as men.

Joseph Barondess, who also demanded that women be permitted to vote, advised the teachers to form a union or organization just as the girls who worked in factories did. He added that whenever the teachers had been approached on this subject they had been too proud to unite "with the common mechanics." Rose Schneiderman, a capmaker, who spoke a pathetic little appeal in odd English for the workers, agreed with him. Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, the head of the organization, presided.

"The one great product," said Anna Garlin Spencer, "that women have to nourish and protect is the human being. It costs something to produce human life, and all over the land at all times women are at the same old job at the same old stand. But the time has come when women are tired of producing cheap cannon food. No man has a right to speak for himself and a woman on a question of peace. He can speak for himself, but he must let the woman speak for herself."

After Rabbi Stephen S. Wise had said that he was probably the only man present who had voted for woman suffrage—he did it in Oregon—and had added other nice things to the effect that we would never have an American democracy until women voted, the resolution presenting the league's respects to the approaching Peace Congress and expressing a hope that women might have a voice in the questions of peace and war, was read and speedily adopted.

Message to the Suffragettes.

"I had hoped," said Mrs. Blatch after this event, "to introduce to you at this point the leading English woman suffragist, Mrs. Cobden Sanderson, but she is not here to-night. She is in jail."

Then the meeting approved a cable message to the jailed English suffragettes which assured them that they had shown acumen and that their campaign had the world's attention.

Next the meeting considered the case of the women teachers. Resolutions were read and adopted demanding that they no longer be paid the 30 or 40 per cent. lower wage that they now receive. Lina Gano of the Wadleigh High School said of the cause of the teachers:

"I do not feel disposed to hold the man entirely responsible for this condition. There is opposition among some of the women teachers. Let the women stand on their feet—and they are larger feet than they used to be, and it is fashionable that they should be so—and demand their rights. If they are going to give us less pay let them also give us cheaper theatre tickets and three-cent fares."

Then the House voted on the teacher resolutions.

"No," yelled one voice on the negative vote.

"It's a man," said Mrs. Blatch.

Then Joseph Barondese spoke to a resolution calling for the extension of the franchise to women. Incidentally he referred to the teachers.

"It is not fair," said he, "to expect women teachers to live on $22.50 per week, but at the same time we should not forget that there are 25,000 girls in the city who are ready to work long hours at anything that will pay them $5 a week. Women have the habit of asking too little. An employer said to me once that they were satisfied to take home a couple of dollars to buy a feather for their hats.

"The women teachers here should do as they have done in Chicago, form an organization and get a charter from the Central Federated Union, yet each time that we have tried to organize the teachers they were too proud to go in with the common men. The men said they were gentlemen. The women said nothing, and did nothing. Organized labor would, I believe, rise to demand equal pay for women teachers."

The Young Capmaker's Plea.

Mrs. Blatch then brought forward Rose Schneiderman, the young capmaker, who recently went to Albany in behalf of women workers. Miss Schneiderman spoke with intense earnestness, and though at times her satire made her listeners laugh heartily, there was no smile upon her own features.

"We went up to Albany," said she, "with our poor little hushed voices. We did as we always do. We did not think it necessary to use fine sentiments to influence people. We thought that the truth would do. But we found that the rich had up there orators, very fine gentlemen. The matter was a factory bill that enabled women to work twelve hours a day and then have Saturday and Sunday off, as though they would be fit for anything but bed then.

"There were rich men up there who said that God gives us fruit in time of plenty and we must prepare it in season. I wondered if that was the God of the working people. Other men said that women liked to work overtime to get a little extra money. Do the women in the workshops ever get 'extra money'? Is there any such thing to the working-women as 'extra money'?

"I found out while I was in Albany something that I had not known before, that you have such things as anti-suffragists. These fine ladies stand up there and say: 'Gentlemen, save us from ourselves. We don't want to vote. We have more womanly work to do. We have charity.'

"Charity! I hate that word! They are the ones who live on charity—they never work. We who provide everything that they have are too nice about it. We never let them know it. These women live a trifle life. We want to be human. To be human is to think of the world as your country, not your little home alone."

TICKET SPECULATOR DEFIANT.

Theatres to Sell Shoestrings and Give Throw-in Tickets.

A hearing was held yesterday by the Committee on Laws and Legislation of the Board of Aldermen on the proposed ordinance abolishing sidewalk ticket speculators and prohibiting the sale of theatre tickets anywhere at prices above those printed on the face. The committee was addressed by all degrees of speculators from those who have come to be known as the "bank-roll brigade" to the "piker" just in from Chicago. At one stage one speculator declared that some of the men addressing the meeting were "grafters and fakers."

David Marks, President of the "New York Ticket Speculators' Association, Incorporated," told the committee it was wrong to wipe out the speculator.

"Why, you can't wipe me out," he said defiantly. "If you take away my speculator's license I'll get a peddler's license and sell a man a pair of shoe strings for $5 and throw in the theatre tickets. You can't stop me selling shoe laces or giving away tickets. It's the managers who are to blame for all the trouble. They are not honest with the people. Most of the speculators are men who are married and have children. They have families to support. I say make the license fee $500 and then you'll be all right."

George J. Duncan, who declared that he had the rooms of his home papered with unsold tickets and that he engaged in the papering business almost every night, when he got home from work, said most of the speculators were too old to do any other kind of work. He is forty-six.

Mr. Duncan didn't belong to the association. Neither did Louis Levy, who declared that there were not fifteen men in the room who could afford to pay $500 license. Levy and William J. Slater gave it as their view that the "bank-roll crowd" were trying to drive the small fry out of business. Also the "bank-roll crowd" stood in with the managers and "got all the A's and the B's, while we are lucky if we get the X's," he said. The alphabetical allusion was to the rows of seats.

The Board of Aldermen will discuss the matter at length on Tuesday.

FOR ANTI-SPECULATOR BILL.

Association for Public Duty to Urge Its Passage.

A dinner and meeting of the Association for Public Duty was held in the Hotel Regent, Seventieth Street and Broadway, last night, and the matter of the proposed laws affecting theatre ticket speculators was discussed. Theodore Sutro presided, and speeches were made by Willis B. Dowd, Tax Commissioner Lawson N. Purdy, and others. It was decided to send a committee to Albany to urge the passage of the bill making it unlawful for sidewalk speculators to do business.

A letter which Oscar Hammerstein wrote to Vice President Dowd was read. In it Mr. Hammerstein said that because of the sidewalk speculator the managers were compelled to place tickets on sale in the hotels. He said that if the sidewalk speculator was abolished, the "equally obnoxious hotel ticket office" would also be abolished.

Not to Be an Actor's Bride.

Milwaukee heard last night and rushed the news to New York that Miss Frances Starr, appearing in "The Rose of the Rancho," at the Belasco Theatre, was soon to become the bridge of James Durkin, who recently almost started a stock company at the Lincoln Square Theatre, and that she had jilted "a copper millionaire who offered her half of his fortune" to take him. Miss Starr said it wasn't true.

Lawrence Enjoins Henry E. Dixey.

Walter N. Lawrence, manager of the Madison Square Theatre, obtained yesterday an order from Supreme Court Justice MacLean an order restraining Henry E. Dixey from appearing under any other management than his own. Mr. Dixey has been announced to appear on Monday at the Orpheum Theatre in vaudeville under the direction of Percy Williams.

Hackett May Buy New French Play.

James K. Hackett has obtained an option on the American rights to another French play, "Le Ruisseau," by Pierre Wolff, author of "The Secret of Polichinelle," which Mr. Hackett produced here three years ago. The play was first preaented on March 21 at the Vaudeville Theatre, Paris.

Fritzi Scheff Getting Better.

Contrary to reports circulated for the last few days Mme. Fritzi Scheff, who has been seriously ill at the Hotel St. Regis, is making favorable progress. Dr. Fritz Schwyzer of 54 East Fifty-eighth Street, one of the physicians attending Mme. Scheff, said last night that she is well on the road to recovery. Yesterday she got up for the first time.

PHYSICIANS URGE CLEANER STREETS

Academy of Medicine Wants Mayor to Name Commission to Study Problem.

WHY THERE IS MUCH DUST

Divided Responsibility and Lenience of Magistrates with Offenders Blamed by Speakers.

New York's street cleaning problem was discussed last night by the Public Health Section of the New York Academy of Medicine, and after many improvements had been suggested, a resolution was adopted asking the academy to request Mayor McClellan to appoint a commission to study the subject and report upon it. The suggestion for the commission was made by Prof. W. Gilman Thompson of Cornell University in an address on "Street Dirt and Disease," in which he called attention to the many diseases which result from unclean streets, especially in the congested districts.

Capt. F. M. Gibson, ex-Deputy Commissioner of the New York Street Cleaning Department, said that many cases relating to street cleaning which are now taken before the Board of City Magistrates should be taken before the Police Captains instead.

"A change in municipal government would help matters a lot," he said. "The Borough Presidents have not proved a success. They have been an expensive experiment. A move for the abolition of the Presidents would probably be defeated in the Legislature, but just the same such a change in the municipal government would be for the good of the city."

In speaking of the presence of disease germs in the streets, Prof. Thompson said that nine-tenths of the throat diseases in this city were caused by the dust that is allowed to remain in the streets.

"Dirt begets dirt," he said. "Articles of food, such as fruit, which are exposed to the air, soon become coated with bacteria through the disease-laden dust which is constantly blowing off the streets. The good effect of outdoor life for convalescents is prevented by the same cause. After a few days of wind in New York there is an epidemic of coughs and colds.

"The difficulty in maintaining cleanness of the streets is in the multiplicity of officials. One who makes a protest is referred from one to another. It leaves a loophole of escape, this shifting the responsibility from one department to another."

The subject which Capt. Gibson discussed was "Practical Difficulties in Cleaning the Streets of New York City." He prefaced his argument by saying that he would have to enter a defense of the Street Cleaning Department, because it was dependent upon a number of prerequisites, one of which was that the city must be properly paved before its streets can be properly cleaned.

"The people themselves are violators of the law in many instances," he said. "They do not attempt to co-operate with the department. Then, too, the department is restricted in the use of water. If the academy is going to take action in the matter, I think it is important for it to advocate the necessity of an unrestricted water supply for the department.

"Another necessity is the co-operation of other city departments, which, for some peculiar reason, is lacking. This applies with especial force to the Board of City Magistrates, which is entirely too lenient with offenders. When offenders come out of court they laugh supercilliously at the department which caused their arrest and the policeman who arrested them.

"The push-cart traffic costs the City Street Cleaning Department $70,000 a year, due entirely to violations of the law by peddlers. As they are foreigners, I do not see why the city should continue to encourage the traffic. It could be dispensed with in a year if the Mayor would refuse to issue licenses. I have heard the suggestion that politics should be eliminated from the Street Cleaning Department. This is impossible. It cannot be entirely eliminated.

"I think the Street Cleaning Department should have the power to issue permits to builders instead of the present method. The work of cleaning the streets should be conducted on broad, bold principles. The law should allow more latitude in the choosing of men for the uniformed force. There is not sufficient intelligence among the sweepers and drivers to fill the offices of the uniformed men."

"Practical Ideals of Street Cleaning" was the subject of an address by Rudolph Hering, a sanitary engineer. Mr. Hering said to insure high efficiency of officials upon whom the duty of street cleaning devolves, proper training and long practice were requisite. He advocated a single directing head, and suggested that a practical means of reaching a better condition would be for the city to collect street cleaning data from the departments of other cities where the conditions are better than in New York.

In the course of a discussion of the three addresses Dr. S. A. Knopf said that a co-operation of corporations was necessary to attain the desired improvement. He said that a school for training street cleaners was as necessary as a school for training policemen.

Spring notes!

Spring overcoats range from conservative blacks, with plain collars, all the way to fancy light gray herringbones with contrasting velvet collars.

$15 to $38.

Spring suits include touches of brown, olive and rather fancy serges—every Spring mixture shown is new this Spring.

$18 to $40.

One beauty of "Star" negligé shirts is that their good looks last.

Their colors are guaranteed, though the tens of thousands we sell every year have proved that the guarantee is needless.

Little Progress in Rebate Inquiry.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 4.—Frederick C. Gifford, Commercial Freight Agent for the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad in 1904 and 1905, who is indicted with the road in the case involving rebates alleged to have been given to the Spencer Grain Company, was on the stand in the Federal court before Judge Page Norris to-day. His testimony was constantly interrupted by arguments and progress was slow.

Respite for Dr. Haugh.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4.—Gov. Harris to-day granted a respite to Dr. Haugh of Dayton, who was to have been put to death next Saturday for the murder of his father, mother, and brother. The respite is given to April 19 to allow his lawyers time to present his case to the Pardon Board, on the ground that he is insane. The Supreme Court has declared that Haugh is sane.

LEGISLATION AND CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

It is well that the National Publicity Bill Organization should seize on the Roosevelt-Harriman disclosures to renew agitation for their measure. Adequate publicity would go far to check such mad excesses in the use of money as these disclosures show. The publicity already attained, with the anxiety and distress betrayed by at least one of the parties to the transactions now exposed to public discussion, proves that. Obviously, if it had been known beforehand that all the correspondence, or even the general facts to which the correspondence relates, would be laid open to the scornful scrutiny of the public, we may be sure that the game would have been pursued with greater caution if the pursuit had not been wholly abandoned. But publicity of this sort is not adequate. It is misleading. It leaves the subject matter quite obscured and confused and sophisticated. No one knows whether the case is as bad as it seems or worse. And the process of probing for the truth is very unsatisfactory. Most men will not, unfortunately, be specially urgent to get at the truth; they will be more eager to ascribe mendacity to one or the other of the parties to the quarrel, as their sympathies or antipathies incline them.

In such a situation it is clear that the office of Chief Magistrate is exposed to inevitable and deeply regrettable discredit. The charges and counter-charges with which such a dispute is carried on may conceivably be of no great importance to a man of Mr. HARRIMAN'S experience and associations; in any event their effect on his reputation is a matter of concern to him alone and to his friends. Their effect on the incumbent of the President's office is of very great importance not only to him but to the American people, and no matter on which side the balance of credibility inclines, it is humiliating that there should be any balance to watch. And the worst of it all is that the feeling of humiliation or resentment which is aroused by this exposure will tend only indirectly to the correction of the palpable and disgraceful evils that have been brought to light. The publicity which will be really preventive or punitive must be prescribed, ordered, and enforced by law. It must be a substantive part of the organized system for the protection of the purity of elections, for the preservation of the dignity of our high offices, for the defense of the integrity of that bulwark of liberty, the free expression of the people's will.

Now there is no reasonable doubt whatever that a statute could be drawn, and if enacted, could be enforced, which would make such negotiations for large sums of money as are described in the correspondence of Mr. ROOSEVELT and Mr. HARRIMAN practically futile. For obviously Mr. ROOSEVELT would not have considered the obtaining of such a contribution, nor would it willingly have been made, had it been certain that the names of all subscribers, with the amount of their subscriptions, would be made public and that vouchers would have to be submitted for every expenditure from these funds. It may be contended that Mr. ROOSEVELT was ignorant of any intention to use Mr. HARRIMAN'S money and that of his friends in any improper manner, and it may be that the persons in as high authority as Mr. CORTELYOU or Mr. BLISS were equally ignorant of such intention; but it remains a perfectly safe assertion that none of them would have tried to get money in such quantities from such sources had they been sure that the white light of publicity was to be poured on the transaction from its inception to the details of its final execution. That is the secret of all legislation on this subject. Every step that will lead the public mind in that direction is a good one.

CANADA'S NEW COUNSEL.

Americans generally will echo Canadians' applause of Mr. BRYCE'S declaration that he will do his very best with Canada's case against the United States, and they will await with much curiosity the disclosure of how he can win Canadian approval any more successfully than Secretary ROOT or Secretary HAY. It will be remembered that in the last case which went to issue the final decision was left, upon the United States' proposal, to the casting vote of the Chief Justice of England, and his award is the greatest grievance Canadians now have. They want nothing more like that. The alternative seems to be that Mr. BRYCE should arrange that the casting vote should be given to an American, in the hope that Canada may get from American generosity what it cannot hope for from British justice.

But would Canada accept such a test of its case as the United States accepted? It has seemed to us that the award favored the United States because of the correctness of the position taken by our representatives, and that Canada lost because it took up a position without judicious consideration. A better case is Canada's need, rather than better spokesmen, or a more neighborly attitude on our part. We are confident that our temper is serene, and our attitude as practical as the exigencies of domestic policy allow. The chief obstacle upon each side is the extreme view of the promoters of the policy of protection. On that point there is little to choose between the positions of Canada and the United States, and on both sides the border there is an important body of dissenters from the position of the administrations respectively. In each case the interests of the most lie in defeat of the official policy. We should appreciate Canadian help in this matter, and we should like to give Canadians similar help, but nothing can be done with a spoiled-child attitude by the party of the other part.

AN INVALID APPORTIONMENT.

The danger of enacting private schemes into public law and of making Legislatures instruments for party gain received a striking illustration in the decision of the Court of Appeals declaring the Higgins-Aldridge-Wadsworth apportionment of Senate and Assembly districts to be unconstitutional. Judge CHASE, in writing the opinion, declares that "the disregard of Constitutional provisions in forming the Second and Thirteenth Senatorial Districts is clear, and they so affect the entire apportionment as to make it necessary to declare the act wholly unconstitutional and void." Judge CULLEN, in pointing out the effect of the decision, says that "the violation of the Constitution is too plain to be disregarded."

The Constitution requires that the Senate districts shall contain "as nearly as may be an equal number of inhabitants," and they shall be "in as compact form as practicable." Equality of numbers was flagrantly disregarded, and in such a way as to diminish the voice of New York City in the Legislature while giving undue representation to up-the-State counties. The Second District, joining Richmond to Queens, was, of course, in violation of the provision, which declares that a Senate district shall "consist of contiguous territory." All this was as plain when the reapportionment was planned and passed as it is now. But the authors of the bill wanted to get rid of Senator STEVENS and Senator BRACKETT. So a highly important measure was made to accomplish an act of personal and political revenge.

In a matter of this gravity the court would have been reluctant to interfere with an act of the Legislature save for compelling reasons. But the unconstitutionality of the reapportionment was "too plain to be disregarded." The court indicates the course to be pursued, a course by which the frightful confusion that would arise from casting a doubt upon the validity of an entire session's acts will be avoided. The Legislature may adopt a new apportionment, which would then control the Assembly elections next Fall; the Senators elected under the present unconstitutional apportionment will finish their terms by serving during another session. If no new apportionment is enacted, the election of Assemblymen next Fall must be held in the districts as constituted in 1905.

NEW TRANSIT FACILITIES.

Mr. THEODORE P. SHONTS, President of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company, writing in Harper's Weekly on "The Problem of a Million Fares," sympathizes frankly with the public. He has been in the crowds at the rush hours, he has seen everything that is to be seen at its best and at its worst, and is "compelled to admit that there is reason for the dissatisfaction of the people with the present transit system." On one line alone, the Third Avenue elevated, one million more passengers every month are carried than the preceding one; the Subway is daily hauling twice as many as it was built to accommodate, and running at its full capacity. The crowded conditions of traffic have no parallel on the globe. To relieve them Mr. SHONTS makes seven suggestions:

A seat for every passenger.
An effort to enforce a car-full-no-more-passengers rule.
A trial of the pay-as-you-get-on plan.
Two more tracks on the Second Avenue elevated road.
The addition of side entrances to the Subway care.
Wider car platforms, with doors for the exclusive use of boarding passengers, and others for those alighting.
Such restrictions of street traffic where congestion is greatest as will allow the surface lines a reasonable, although not exclusive, use of the tracks.

Restrictions of street traffic for surface lines during the rush hours should be had. The surface cars will inevitably be used increasingly by short-haul passengers. With wider platforms and entrance and exit doors, the cars could be moved along faster, although, as Mr. SHONTS intimates, the company may find it impracticable to enforce the car-full-no-more-passengers rule. The pay-as-you-get-on plan, too, requires elucidation. Perhaps Mr. SHONTS thinks of establishing a surface-car ticket system, with ticket booths at frequent intervals along the line. Side entrances to the Subway cars would conduce greatly to speed in filling and emptying trains at congested points, and would save time with the greatest margin of safety, that is, while the train is at a standstill.

The project of four-tracking the Second Avenue elevated road is open to objection. "At present," Mr. SHONTS says, "the Second Avenue elevated road is the only one that is not being worked to its fullest capacity, because the people, for some reason or other—possibly to save a walk of a couple of blocks—do not use this line as they might and ought to do." He believes more tracks for an express service, which could be built in half the time needed to construct an additional subway, would cure the evil. It would, but the cure would be effected by the old method of adding permanently to the deformity of the patient. The city is content with nothing less than subways. The unsightly elevated structures are obsolescent, and they should become obsolete. While the new east and west side subways are building some plan should be devised to divert the overflow from the Third Avenue line to the two comparatively unused tracks on Second Avenue.

RUSSIA AND THE DUMA.

We were remarking yesterday that the straightforward submission of the budget of the Imperial Finance Minister to the Russian Duma, and the hospitality with which the submission seemed to be received, were of the happiest augury for the peace and progress of Russia. But a curious incident dampens the hopes of the optimist. A Social Democrat yesterday had incorporated "as part of his remarks," as they say in Washington, an article from The London Economist, charging bad faith upon the Russian Government in the dissolution of the first Duma. Thereupon a Monarchist declared that the reading was "treason," and called upon all true loyalists to follow him from the hall. And about twenty true loyalists did follow him.

It is quite true that the blame of this incident belongs exclusively to the Reactionaries. It may be, as the dispatches intimate, that the incident was the result of a Reactionary "plot." But it is also true that in any parliamentary body, properly so-called, the incident could not have occurred. The announcement of a Member of Parliament, of a Member of Congress, of a Member of the Chamber of Deputies, of a Member of the Reichstag, that he was about to read an article from The London Economist might scatter the members to flight and crowd the cloakrooms. At the worst it would give the members an opportunity for repose. The notion of making the reading the occasion for a solemn departure from the scene in which such an outrage had been perpetrated would never occur to the member of any real representative assembly. Considering the unfailingly parliamentary character of its language, it may safely be said that The London Economist never had such a triumph before.

But, quite seriously, what a comment it is upon the lack of political education and political experience in Russia that such an incident should have been made the ground of an organized secession from the National Legislature, with the plain view of bringing about its dissolution. Speaker CANNON, Sir HENRY CAMPBELL BANNERMAN, M. CLEMENCEAU, even Prince VON BUELOW, would each of them have received such a quotation, if not jocosely, at all events as being perfectly within the rights of a representative of the people in the freedom of debate.

The moral of this amazing incident is that the necessary privileges and usages of parliamentary procedure are still unfamiliar in Russia. How, indeed, could it be otherwise? But it appears that if the autocracy is on its trial, the Duma is on its trial also. There are even worse conditions than those under which Russia has lived hitherto, and conditions which sane and sober Russians may well view with even more apprehension. It is the business of the Duma, and the hope of Russia, that the Duma shall develop a leadership which shall make it unmistakable that the choice for Russia is not between the traditional "absolutism tempered by assassination" on the one hand, and lawless and mannerless Anarchism on the other.

THE CITY'S FINANCES.

The report of the Mayor's commission regarding the growth of the city's debt only partially states the case. The debt is growing too fast, but the budgets are growing faster than the debt. There is a hope that some distant day the debt may be reduced, but it takes a very far-sighted man to discern when the city's expenses will be smaller. Between 1902 and 1906 the commission figures a debt increase of over $266,000,000. For the same years the city's expense budget increased from $98,000,000 to $117,000,000, and for 1907 it is $130,000,000. Since 1900 the share of each of us in the city's expenses has risen $5, to $31.41, or 19 per cent. There is probably nothing to compare with this in the world, but it only begins the burden which we have to bear because of our magnificent mortgage. High taxes make dear rents, dear rents make dear food and clothing, and so the endless chain piles up the burden until many find New York too dear to live in, and others deny themselves in one direction to spend in another, and wonder what the trouble is.

If we got the worth of our money it would be a little easier to endure. But are we getting the worth of our money when we fund $30,000,000 of uncollectible taxes, or make good a deficit of $600,000 in the police pension fund, or pave streets which the street railways ought to pave to a total of $13,000,000, or raise salaries in hundreds of cases simultaneously while the Board of Education alone is asking millions for adjusting the salaries of the women teachers? Is it a fair contest between such demands and those on such accounts as bridges, schoolhouses, tunnels, rapid transit, and so on? Is it not apparent that it is plain extravagance to add luxuries which straitens us in our capacity to supply ourselves with necessaries?

We are simply living beyond our means, and the question is what we are going to do about it. The commission makes three recommendations, to which we shall take the liberty of adding two: 1. Economy, which we will not disparage, but which we doubt that the citizens can be brought to insist upon. 2. An increase of assessed valuations, which makes a larger burden of each of us in proportion to the increased capacity of enlarging our splendid and vigorous mortgage, the source of all our woes. 3. Amendment of the Constitutional limit of indebtedness allowing the borrowing of more than 10 per cent. of our assets. This is license to imprudence—although the commission makes recommendation regarding the terms of the license, into which debatable topic we do not now venture. It is obvious that the half billion debt which has been incurred in reliance upon the constitutional limitation would be prejudiced by widening the limit, and it might be that this resource would have a boomerang effect, costing the city something in depreciation of credit which it could ill afford.

The fourth suggestion, which we hazard, is that those who are escaping their fair share of the city's burdens should have their burdens enlarged up to the average. Controller METZ is quoted as saying what everybody knows, that hardly any assessments are up to legal requirements, while many are below them, some by a third, some by a half, some even by two-thirds. There can be no possible objection to raising all assessments which are below average. Every man who is paying more than his share because of the escape of others from their just burdens has a grievance irrespective of the city's need for this money. After the assessments which are unfairly low are marked up, a fifth suggestion may be made—that private capital be encouraged to do what the city does so badly for itself. Nobody knows what burden anything begun under public auspices may not run into. Profit and loss bears no part in operations defrayed by tax money, and there is hardly any extravagance comparable with grudging profits to private contractors because of a hoped or apparent profit in municipal trading.

THE SPRING BOOK NUMBER.

The Special Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS issued to-morrow will contain many features of unique interest. Among the most valuable of these will be a classified and annotated list of the Spring books. The list will include publications in every branch of literature, and with its brief but illuminating note opposite each volume will constitute an invaluable catalogue for book lovers.

The array of special articles by well-known writers will be unusually attractive. Mr. MADISON CAWEIN will express and justify an opinion of LUCAS MALET'S "The Far Horizon" which places this book at the summit of recent achievement in fiction. Mr. H. W. BOYNTON, taking his suggestion from the newly published bibliography of OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, will write entertainingly on that New England author, while Miss ELISABETH LUTHER CARY, Miss HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE, Miss JESSIE B. RITTENHOUSE, and Mr. WILLIAM ASPENWALL BRADLEY will contribute articles of interest.

In Chicago yesterday the Federal Judge struck out 350 counts of the case against Standard Oil because of lack of proof, or mistakes in the indictment. And yet some persons wonder why the trusts do not at once plead guilty upon whatever is alleged, instead of having the case against them examined in court.

Mr. ROOSEVELT is very frank about the contributions which were returned to the corporations that made them. It would be appreciated even more if he would be equally frank about the contributions which were not returned, and for which some well-informed people believe an equivalent was rendered. There are cases later than those of the Sugar Trust's influence in shaping the tariff of "perfidy and dishonor," and favors of omission are as useful as favors of commission. The entire stand-pat policy is contrary to the country's interests, as we believe, and is indubitably in the interests of the trusts. There is no single vote in Congress regarding the tariff, nor any failure to bring tariff matters to a vote, which is not brought into suspicion by the revelations of what habitually goes on behind the scenes at the auction where our laws are purveyed to those who can bring more influence than the people.

Typhoid in the city districts affected by the outbreak that polluted the Croton water supply, and by its continued pollution from the drainage of Mount Kisco, is increasing at a rate that alarms the Health Department. Manhattan reports of cases for March are triple the normal number, and for February and March, as compared with the three previous years, read as follows:

	February.	March.
1904	64	52
1905	64	71
1906	74	62
1907	125	200

The increase for March is not the full tally, as the returns are incomplete. But there were 106 new cases last week, and 85 for the week ended March 23. The cause of the increase is criminal negligence—by whom, must yet be determined.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Rejection of Advertising.

We confess to some—no, to much—irritation, due to the receipt of a letter bearing no signature except that of "An Old Reader," in which we are fiercely scolded and solemnly lectured because of certain advertisements relating to mines that have appeared in THE TIMES.

This would-be reformer of mining and journalism, whose courage is shown by his anonymity, coolly exhorts us to denounce as thieves and swindlers men whom neither he nor we could prove to be such. He isn't himself taking even the minute chances incidental to letting us know who he is, but he expects us to run the risk of libel suits innumerable—suits that would involve, even if won, an immense amount of trouble and no little expense. Naturally enough, such advice, from such an adviser, fatigues us greatly.

Of course, a newspaper is held, and properly held, to a certain responsibility for the advertisements it prints. It has no slightest right to sell publicity to men who, it knows, will use that publicity for nefarious ends and to the injury of its readers in morals, health, or purse. Some advertisements it must reject on sight, no matter what price is offered for their insertion. If "An Old Reader" will look over our columns, and has sense enough to understand what he sees—or, rather, what he doesn't see—he will not need to be told that our columns are closed to many a would-be advertiser.

Other advertisements, of dubious propriety at first sight, can be taken on proof of their honesty, and yet others fall within the category of the permissible simply because there is no necessary and self-evident objection to them. Readers of the newspapers are supposed to exercise a reasonable amount of caution in the protection of their own interests, and it would be absurd for us to exclude, say, a mining prospectus, simply because the investment it offers would, or should, not appeal as a safe one to the trustee of a widow's estate. What is for one man the taking of legitimate chances of large profits would be wild or criminal speculation for another. This is particularly true of mining ventures. That they are risky is, or should be, known to all, but they are not for that reason to be barred from all consideration.

It should be remembered, too, that refusal of advertisements is apt to excite questions which, if not easy to answer, are apt to be unpleasant. We do it at the clear dictates of duty, but we do not do it just for the fun of the thing—or to avoid the criticisms of anonymous correspondents.

Cleanliness Called Unendurable.

Those citizens of Colon who have appealed to Secretary TAFT for protection from the canat sanitarians will have hard work, we imagine, in convincing him that the new conditions really are, as they claim, "unendurable." No doubt they are sufficiently inconvenient for people who have just heard that there is such a thing as preventing disease—for people who for years and years, running into the centuries, have so conducted their houses and their cities as to make them both ever-fermenting centres of disease and infection.

The result was an enormous death rate—and a constant supply of fever germs for exportation to all parts of the world. Curiously enough, however, there was profit in this, as well as loss, for it enabled the "immunes" to monopolize trade and quickly ridded them of intruders who ventured to set up competitive shops. It may be that Secretary TAFT, if he looks deeply enough into those "unendurable conditions" of which complaint has been made, will find that the howl against GORGAS and his cruel minions comes from old inhabitants who do not like an Isthmian city made safe for every Northern Tom, Dick, and Harry with a little capital and dangerously modern ideas as to business methods.

The Municipal Court—and Politics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Nobody has come forward to deny that the bill now before the State Legislature to enlarge and improve our Municipal Court should be passed.

The record for and against to date is as follows:

For: The Governor.
The Justices of the court.
The suitors in the court, now 8,000, delayed.
The public.

Against: A few politicians.

Who are these politicians? Republicans, I am sorry to say. Why do they oppose the bill? Because they fear any enlargement of the court will give Tammany more power. Hence it is a pure case of dog in the manger.

It is a sad thing to realize, as we do from time to time, that, in default of an impartial organization of the lawyers of this city, whose voice would be respected, our courts are twisted and turned for political purposes, men are put upon the bench whose very presence is a reproach to our civilization, and the interests of the people are treated as though they were next to nothing.

The Times's Financial Pages.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want you to know that I am reading the financial pages of THE NEW YORK TIMES with unusual interest. I consider them among the best of the kind, and I think the management deserves a great deal of credit for conducting the department in such an admirable manner.

A BANKER.

AFTER THE DELUGE.

Who comes here? With satisfied
Air of conscious scorn and pride,
Trying hardest not to grin,
Lest he seem to "rub it in,"
Wishing to know anxiously
All about my health and me,
Puffing out his chest, as though
He would say: "I told you so!"

He's the man who "never bought
On a margin." Awful thought!
Now that I have gone to smash,
Lost my credit and my cash,
Comes he to commiserate
On my most unlucky fate,
And he doesn't say, (oh, no!)
In mere words, "I told you so!"

But to me it's very plain
That he means it just the same,
And I know he's dying to!
Oh, I hate such men, don't you?

MAZIE V. CARUTHERS.

AS TO CAMPAIGN PAYMENTS.

Father Prout Thinks Them Justified, and Defends Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Seeing the Chief Executive of our country brought in so questionable a light by the reckless garrulity of irresponsible newspapers, I think it is about time that we clergymen should come forward and define definitely the propriety and morality of campaign contributions.

Those who try to belittle our President, in their short-sightedness, fail to see what incalculable harm it does among that class of our people who have already but little regard for any lawfully constituted authority. Besides, many a noble man like the late Mr. McCall had to suffer ignominiously on account of the wrong ideas about campaign contributions.

As a theologian and as a priest, I openly make the statement that campaign contributions in the present state of our politics are neither unfair nor sinful. If I believe that the Republican Party will do the greater good for the country, I have a perfect right before God and man to work for that party, to give money that others may work for it, and ask others to contribute money for the accomplishment of what I consider the good of my country. This I could do most conscientiously, whether the good that would come to me from the election personally would be that of the most obscure citizen or that of the President himself. A drone, a dead branch, and a numbskull would be he who, having any definite set political or religious convictions, would not bestir himself in the least to have these convictions disseminated, propagated, and made known.

The Salvation Army has its campaign fund, the Catholic Church has hers, the Baptists and Episcopalians have theirs. These all collect money for the propagation and maintenance of their respective beliefs, and no matter whether it is the Pope or the humblest Catholic, Gen. Booth or the most insignificant tambourine manipulator, no one would ever so much as think of questioning their perfect right in this matter.

It is not sufficient for any cause, doctrine, or party to be good in itself. The good qualities of that cause or party must be shown, explained, and brought before the people, and all this costs money. When one opposing party explains its good points and advantages to the people the other side must do likewise, and for this the campaign contribution is needed, and as such it is lawful, fair, and proper.

Even the insurance companies cannot be taken too severely to task for their contributions. If they deemed it expedient for the well-being of their respective companies to have this or the other party in power, they were acting perfectly consistently in giving some of their own profits toward the party most beneficial to themselves. Every one that votes or causes another to vote in a certain way does so with the idea of good that will thereby accrue, whether directly or indirectly, to himself. The executives of the different companies had a perfect right with the money of the company to safeguard and propagate the political tenets most favorable to their existence, and this they could do, even though some of the stockholders in their own personal opinion and for their own personal reasons entertained different views in politics.

On account of the great injustice that has been done in this matter, I am ready to maintain the propriety of this in public discussion with any one, and I am sure that every theologian and clergyman, after a deep analysis of this matter, will take the same stand.

CHURCHMEN GIVE THOUSANDS

Protestant Episcopal Offerings at Easter May Reach $300,000.

Some Protestant Episcopal churches were still receiving checks as late as yesterday to apply to Easter offerings. These offerings this year were, in some cases, for the Men's Missionary Thank Offering. It is said that the entire amount thus far contributed by men of New York, exclusive of Brooklyn, is about $150,000, and that it is likely the sum will reach $250,000 to $300,000.

The Easter offering at St. Bartholomew's was $20,500, of which $18,000 was given by men as their thank offering. Holy Trinity, Harlem, raised $13,250, of which $10,000 is to apply on the mortgage debt, which is now only $50,000. The Easter offering at St. Andrew's, Harlem, was $6,000. Christ Church, Broadway and Seventy-first Street, has had a debt of $35,000, which it has carried for nearly fifty years. Its Easter offering of about $15,000 will make a start on paying it off. St. Michael's, Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street, had an Easter offering of $14,000. Grace Parish had an Easter offering of $16,000; the Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, $2,400; the Church of the Heavenly Rest, $4,400; the Holy Apostles, $1,600; Holyrood, $800, and St. James's, Brooklyn, $4,300.

Volunteers Appeal to the Mayor.

Ballington Booth, commander of the Volunteers of America, called on Mayor McClellan yesterday and asked him to assign to St. Gregory's Hospital, at 93 Gold Street, which the Volunteers have acquired, the southern part of the city for an ambulance district. The commander wants the district included in the Oak Street Police Station precinct. The Mayor promised to confer with Gen. Bingham about it.

CHANDELIERS WELL HUNG.

No Danger of Light Fixtures Falling in Pennsylvania's Capitol.

HARRISBURG, Penn., April 4.—Fears that the chandeliers in the House of Representatives might be insecurely fastened and in danger of falling were allayed to-day when an official report was made to the House that the fastenings are sufficient to sustain at least five times the weight now suspended from them. It was testified before the investigating commission that the chandeliers were paid for by weight and that they were made as heavy as possible.

When the members of the Legislature learned that some of the chandeliers weighed three and a half tons each they became uneasy, and the official inquiry followed.

COMMISSION AT NIAGARA.

Taft's Board Will Plan to Restore Falls' Primeval Beauty.

NIAGARA FALLS, April 4.—The Scenic Commission appointed by Secretary Taft to make an inspection of the American bank of Niagara Gorge, with a view of restoring it to a state of primeval beauty, arrived here to-day. In the party are Capt. Charles W. Kutz of West Point, John Stephen Sewell of Washington, F. D. Millett and C. F. McKim of New York, and F. L. Olmsted, Jr., of Boston. They covered the State reservation in the forenoon, and at noon crossed the upper steel arch bridge to the Canadian side, from which they had a splendid view of the American bank. They traveled down the Canadian side of the river for several miles.

Those who wished to get their views before the commission had an opportunity at a hearing this afternoon.

Deadlock Holds In Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—The vote for United States Senator on the forty-seventh ballot to-day showed no change, and resulted as follows: Goddard, 41; Colt, 36; Wetmore, 28; Utter, 1.

SOCIETY FLOCKS TO WHITE AUCTION

Small Decorative Articles Brought $20,525.50 at First Day of the Sale.

PRICES REMARKABLY HIGH

Many Prominent Persons Among the Bidders—Larger and More Costly Art Objects to Go To-day.

A large attendance of fashionable people and high prices were the principal features of the first afternoon of the sale under the direction of the American Art Galleries of the household furnishings and interior decorations belonging to the estate of the late Stanford White at his former home, 121 East Twenty-first Street, yesterday afternoon. The smaller decorative articles of the house were sold, and the returns for the day were $20,525.50.

Only persons properly identified were admitted. These held tickets made out in their own names, which were punched by a man at the entrance of the house, and were surrendered at the entrance to the rooms where the sale was held. The sale proper took place in the music room, which occupies an extension at the rear of the house beneath the art gallery. Many of those attending the sale, occupied seats in the dining room adjoining.

Crowd Came Early.

Contrary to the usual custom at sales of art objects the purchasers arrived early, and at the opening of the sale three-quarters of the seats were filled with bidders who stayed, with few exceptions, throughout the afternoon.

Here are a few of those who were admitted: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. George T. Bliss, Miss Hewitt, Mrs. Algernon S. Sullivan, the Edson Bradleys, Mrs. George P. Bliss, Mrs. H. H. Benkard, Miss Elsie De Wolfe, I. N. Phelps Stokes, George T. Crocker, Everts Tracy, Donn Barber, Grant La Farge, Cass Gilbert, Wilson Eyre, Worthington Whitridge, and Thomas Clarke. David Belasco made many purchases, and Francis Wilson was also one of the buyers.

The conditions for the sale were naturally, in a private house, not the most satisfactory. It was difficult to hear in the second room, and the beautiful ornamental columns in the Italian Renaissance doorway between the dining and music rooms were not agreeable when they obstructed the view. But the people remained and exchanged their seats for better ones when the exceptional few took their departure. It was impossible to seat all the people.

Theatre rules did not obtain in regard to hats, and the most pronounced styles in Spring millinery were out in full force. Ornamental pillars were nothing compared to hats three-quarters of a yard in diameter. Big plumes were added to these and when they were not branching out to the right, left, or standing high on top of a hat, there was a bird whose long wings and tail extending out at the back tickled the noses and threatened the eyes of the unfortunates in seats behind.

A few people were out with their auction manners. One woman had taken possession of two seats just vacated and tried to save one for a woman friend who was making her way down the aisle. This she told, without effect, to a woman rearer at hand, who plumped down into the seat remarking coolly:

"Your friend will find a seat in the back of the room."

High Prices the Rule.

High prices were the rule, higher probably in proportion than will be obtained in the sales of to-day and to-morrow, when the articles of greater value will be put up. A number of persons who came to the sale yesterday expecting to bid and pay good prices found things went quite beyond them and did not make an effort. Many articles of carved wood were sold, one large carved and gilded wood panel, sixteenth century Spanish, bringing, perhaps, the highest individual price of the afternoon, $500. A small antique mirror with carved and gilded wood frame brought $250; a pair of elaborate antique silver lamps, $420 each; a pair of English Girondoles, with mirrors, sold for $210 each, and Mrs. Payne Whitney bought an antique Chinese vase for $55 and an old Chinese oviform jar for $100. The last things sold were two newel posts in position on the stairs. These were antique Italian, a lion rampant, clutching a cornucopia, supported by elaborately carved cherubim at the base. They went to C. A. Platt for $230 each.

The beautiful skin rugs were the best bargains of the sale. There were interesting leopard skin rugs, one made of 12 entire skins joined with two mounted heads which sold for $250. Two of five skins each, with two unmounted heads, sold respectively for $350 and $320. Two large Mongolian tiger skins with mounted heads sold for $450 and $430, going to Parker D. Handy, who made other purchases. A representative of Princeton College Club, which is to make over the house and occupy it, was present to bid on anything in the way of decorations the club might wish to retain.

Francis Wilson bought an antique Japanese pottery jar for $45 and David Belasco two elaborate antique powder horns for $100 and $170, an antique carving for $115, two carved heraldic plaques for $100 each; an antique Genoese red velvet royal dispatch bag for $105, and other things. There was some amusement among the bidders when a number of sofa cushions with heraldic devices sold for $60 and $70 each. Others of tapestry sold for $170 and $175.

CITY NOT NEAR BANKRUPTCY.

But Controller Says There Must Be "No Fancy Expenditures" for a Time.

Mayor McClellan declared yesterday that there is no danger of bankruptcy for the city, and that the administration would go right ahead with the improvements to which it is committed.

"We had $31,000,000 on Jan. 1," said the Mayor, "and by July, with the increase in assessments there will be $50,000,000 more. With the interest on real estate values and the redemption of bonds I figure that in my term of office we shall have something more than $200,000,000. Of course, there will have to be economy, with avoidance of all extravagant expenditures."

Controller Metz is not so optimistic as the Mayor, but he said that raising valuations would be the means of obtaining more money by borrowing. It would be poor policy to cut off improvements that will increase values and enable us to borrow more. The policy must be to improve our credit by whatever means we can. We cannot afford to abandon plans for subway extension or for schools or for income-producing dock improvements. What we must cut down on is these fancy improvements.

City's Coal Bill $1,894,565 Last Year.

Controller Metz has figured out that the city departments used in 1906 396,950 tons of anthracite coal at a cost of $1,753,565, and 47,000 tons of bituminous coal at a cost of $141,000. Much more will probably be burned this year as the demand increases yearly. The Board of Education advertised yesterday for 110,000 tons of anthracite for the year.

RIDDER TWINS OF AGE.

Staats Zeitung Staff Celebratee It—Victor to be Treasurer.

Victor and Joseph E. Ridder, the twin sons of Herman Ridder, publisher of the Staats-Zeitung, came of age yesterday. To celebrate the event they took the office staff of the Staats-Zeitung to a dinner at the German Press Club, where they were entertained with vaudeville and music.

As a birthday present Herman Ridder offered his son Victor the post of Treasurer in the Staats-Zeitung Company. The present was accepted, and at the next meeting of the company Victor Ridder will be formally elected to the office.

MISS KOUNTZE WEDS J. GORDON DOUGLAS

St. Thomas's Church Crowded with Men and Women Well Known in Society.

MISS CARLISLE ENGAGED

Granddaughter of the Former Secretary of the Treasury to Wed Mr. Allen—Other Weddings.

St. Thomas's Church, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, was crowded yesterday with guests for the wedding of J. Gordon Douglas, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Douglas, and Miss Annie Ward Kountze of New York and Morristown. The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock, and Bishop Henry C. Potter, assisted by the Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington of Grace Church, officiated. The chancel was banked with pink azaleas and Easter lilies, and pink rambler roses were put at each side of the chancel, while on the pews opening into the nave clusters of white flowers were fastened. There was an elaborate musical programme, with violin solos, under the direction of Nahan Franko.

The bridal party was led by the ushers, Cyril Hatch, Henry B. Hollins, Jr., Arthur R. Randolph, Kenneth B. Schley, Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and De Lancey Kountze, a brother of the bride. Effingham Townsend Irvin, a cousin of the bridegroom, was his best man. Next came the bride's only attendant, Miss Sybil Douglas, the maid of honor and sister of the bridegroom. She wore a gown of pale blue chiffon over white, the bodice largely of delicate gold lace and satin, and a large round white hat trimmed with sweeping blue ostrich plumes. She carried a sheaf of gardenies.

The bride, escorted by her father, Luther Kountze, followed. She wore a trained tight fitting Empire princess gown of heavy white satin, the front covered with beautiful point lace, and the top of the bodice of embroidered satin with long lace sleeves. Her voluminous tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Kountze, the mother of the bride, was in lavender chiffon and satin, and wore a large lavender hat, and Mrs. Douglas, the mother of the bridegroom, was in pale gray satin and gray lace, topped by a gray-plumed hat.

The church ceremony was followed by a small reception at the Kountze home, 5 East Fifty-seventh Street, which was decorated with vases of cut flowers, and also with a bower of green and white, where the bride and bridegroom stood to receive congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas will sail next week for Europe to spend several months in travel, and on their return they will go to Dumbarton, the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Kountze, for the Summer. One of the wedding presents of Mr. and Mrs. Kountze to their daughter is a house near their own at Morristown. This is being built, and will not be ready for occupancy before next Fall.

Among the guests asked to the wedding were

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., Miss Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Miss Dorothy Whitney, Mrs. H. Danforth Knowlton and the Misses Knowlton, Mrs. Charles Oelrichs, Miss Oelrichs, Mrs. J. Muhleberg Bailey, Miss Natalie Lorillard Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, the Misses and Mr. Messrs. Osgood Field, Mrs. George Kingsland, Miss Ethel Kingsland, Miss Sallie Dixon, Dr. George Dixon and Mrs. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Glen Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. W. Watts Sherman and the Misses Sherman.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Starr Miller and Miss Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Warren and Miss Warren, Lloyd Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Levi P. Morton and Miss Morton, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Barney, Mr. and Mrs. Bradish Johnson, the Misses Grace Ruggles, and Louise and Therese Iselin, Mrs. Frederick Pierson and Miss Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Field Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. William Street and the Misses Street, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. William Earle Dodge, Col. Franklin Bartlett and Mrs. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benkard, Mrs. C. L. Best, and Miss Annie Best.

MISS BRUSH MARRIED.

Weds Ellsworth Everitt Dwight in Morristown.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 4.—The South Street Presbyterian Church was filled this afternoon with relatives and friends for the marriage of Miss Margaret Dunbar Brush, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Alfred H. Brush of Brooklyn, to Ellsworth Everitt Dwight of New York. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, the Rev. Dr. Brush, and he was assisted by the Rev. Albert Erdman, pastor of the South Street Presbyterian Church of this place, and the Rev. M. E. Dwight of New York.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dunbar C. Brush. She was attended by Miss Dorothea Young as maid of honor, and Miss Katherine Dwight of New York City, Miss Lucy Chaplin of Ridgewood, Miss Lucy Marsh of Morristown, and Miss Genevieve Ketcham of Westfield, as bridesmaids. The best man was Kirby Dwight of New York, and the ushers were Thomas Keck, John E. Dwight, and Dr. Bleecker Leggitt of New York and W. G. Vantassel Suthphin of this town.

After the wedding ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Morris Suthphin, 20 Franklin Place.

MAIN—WILLIAMS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Miss Frances Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Williams of California and South Africa, and William Wallace Main, also of California and South Africa, were married here at noon to-day. The service was performed in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church by the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, the rector, and was followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents.

The bridal party included the sister of the bride, Miss Gertrude Williams, maid of honor; Miss Ruth Perkins, Miss Feroline Perkins, Miss Katharine Jennings, Miss Virginia Field of Stockbridge, Mass., and Miss Dorothy Williams, another sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. Albert Carroll of Baltimore was best man. The following were ushers: Representative Sutler Ames of Massachusetts, Frederick Faust, Thomas Riggs, Jr., and Clarence Follis of California.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, trimmed with point applique lace, and her veil of tulle was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a superb pendant of diamonds, pearls and sapphires, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. Main and his bride left this afternoon for Johannesburg, South Africa, which will be their home for a few years.

The bridesmaids were all daughters of the South African friends and associates of the bride's father.

METCALF—BELL.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 4.—Miss Catherine Bell, dsughter of Mrs. Joseph McClellan Bell, and George Frederic Metcalf of New York were married in St. Paul's Church this afternoon by Bishop William Walter Webb. Miss Helen McIntosh and Miss Anne Hamilton, Miss Anne Moore of Hartford, Conn., and Miss Gertrude Mann were the bridesmaids, and the matron of honor was Mrs. Thomas F. Carter. Prescott Metcalf of New York was best man. The ushers were Alexander McClure Bell, Rufus Gardner Kellogg, Arthur Inbusch, Enos Wilder, Jr., and Lawrence L. Brown of New York.

ACKLEY—WOOD.

WISTAR—HEBERTON.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—The marriage of Miss Harriet Heberton, daughter of Craig Heberton, and J. Morris Wistar took place to-day in the Second Presbyterian Church. Mrs. J. Hamilton Harris was her sister's matron of honor, and Miss Florence Smith of New York and Miss Emily Power Beale were the bridesmaids.

Miss Ware Weds George Sykes.

Among the Easter week weddings celebrated yesterday was that of Miss Anna Goodwin Ware, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E Ware, to George Sykes, grandson of Gen. George Sykes, at the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin officiated. The bride was attended by Miss Mabel Stuart Nelson as maid of honor, and the Misses Gladys Ware, Lucy Williams, and Edith Hurd were bridesmaids. Arthur Ware, brother of the bride, was the best man. Clinton Cruikshank, Edward Ralderis, Arthur Graham, and John Lowry, Jr., were the ushers. The ceromony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 1,285 Madison Avenue.

Wilson—Schutt Wedding.

Miss Lillian Madeline Schutt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. Henry W. Schutt of Hoboken, N. J., was married on Wednesday evening to William Browne Wilson of New York by Mgr. J. Kelly at the church rectory of Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken, N. J. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by Miss Mabel Ladds of Brooklyn and Miss Frances Schutt, her sister. Robert Wilson, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man. Only the immediate members of both families witnessed the marriage ceremony.

WADSWORTH RITCHIE TO WED.

His Second Wife Will Be Miss Daisy House of England.

Wadsworth Ritchie, son of Mrs. Adair, now of London, by her first husband, and whose first wife, Miss Tooker, died two or three years ago, will on April 10 marry Miss Daisy Hoare in England. Miss Hoare is a member of a wealthy English family. The first Mrs. Ritchie was a sister of Mrs. Whitney Warren of this city and of John Tooker, who married the first Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell after her divorce from Mr. Hunnewell, who later married Mrs. Belle Mellon Kemp.

Arthur Kemp, whose marriage to Miss Sybil Kaye in England was announced over the cable yesterday, had known Miss Kaye for some time. The present Mrs. Kemp came here from New Orleans, and later went abroad. She is well known in New York, but was never prominent socially. Both Mr. Kemp and his bride have spent most of their time recently in England and on the continent.

MISS CARLISLE ENGAGED.

To Wed F. L. Allen of Counsel to the Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Formal announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Jane Goodson Carlisle, daughter of Mrs. William K. Carlisle of Gramercy Park, and granddaughter of ex-Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle of New York and Washington, to Frederick L. Allen of this city, one of the attorneys for the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Mr. Allen is a member of the University, Knollwood, and other clubs, and is a graduate of Hamilton College, class of '88. This will be Mr. Allen's second marriage. He is considerably older than his fiancée, who made her debut in this city about three years ago at a reception given for her and her sister, Miss Laura Carlisle, by her grandmother, the late Mrs. John G. Carlisle, at the Carlisle home, 2 Gramercy Park. No date has been set for the wedding, which will probably not take place before the Fall.

Miss Carlisle is now visiting in this city. Mrs. Thomas F. Shaw will give an informal tea for Miss Carlisle on Saturday afternoon at her home, 31 West Fifty-first Street.

It will be remembered that the engagement of John G. Carlisle was recently announced in Washington, but no date has been set for that wedding.

Miss Sedley to Marry on April 20.

The wedding of Miss Eleanor Sedley, eldest daughter of Mrs. Henry W. Sedley, and Theodore Greppo of this city will take place on Saturday, April 20, in the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The Rev. D. Parker Morgan will officiate. Miss Sedley has for the last five years spent most of her time abroad. She has been the guest of the Countess Torbay in England and at Cannes and of Mrs. Thomas Huger Pratt at Dinard. Mr. Greppo is connected with Seligman & Co., the bankers.

The Draper-Robinson Engagement.

ROME, April 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, who are now in Italy, confirm the announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Corinne, to George H. Draper of Paris. They had not intended to announce Miss Robinson's engagement until they returned home in June. Miss Robinson is a niece of President Roosevelt.

COMEDY CLUB'S PERFORMANCE.

"The Arabian Nights" Produced in Carnegie Lyceum.

The Amateur Comedy Club, composed largely of society men and women, gave last night at the Carnegie Lyceum the first of the three private presentations of Sydney Grundy's three-act farce, "The Arabian Nights." These entertainments are strictly private, no tickets are sold, but each member is entitled to so many tickets, and the audiences are composed of friends and acquaintances of the actors. The Comedy Club has been in existence for a number of years, and many of its members have attained efficiency in the dramatic art. Last night's performance was the one hundred and seventy-eighth.

The programme was as follows: Arthur Hummingtop was acted by Jacob W. Wendell, Jr.; Ralph Omerod, his friend, was impersonated by Theodore E. Steinway; Joshua Gillibrand was played by Philip F. Kobbé, and Harold W. Gould took the part of Dobson, his man servant. Mrs. Burton Hart played Mrs. Gillibrand, the mother-in-law; Miss Eva McAdoo was Mrs. Hummington, and Miss Katharine Waring wns Daisy Maitland. Miss Elizabeth M. Hurry was Barbara, the maid servant, and the part of Rosa Colombier, the gutta percha girl from the aquarium, was played by Miss Mildred Eytinge. The play was rehearsed and produced under the direction of Harrison B. Hodges, President of the club; Morris Underhill was the stage manager, William R. Steinway was the property man, and Duff Green Maynard the prompter.

The officers of the Amateur Comedy Club are these: Harrison B. Hodges, President; George K. Denny, Vice President; F. Reymond Lefferts, Jr., Secretary, and James Laidlaw, Treasurer.

Among the active members are: Kenneth M. Murchison, Jr., Evert J. Wendell, James Barnes, F. Raymond Lefferts, Jr., Henry Brevoort Eddy, Gilman Collamore, Felix L. Tuckerman, William C. Camman, James Duane Livingston, Booth Tarkington, and Rutgers B. Jewet. The list of associate members include the names of Mrs. Lewis B. Atterbury, Mrs. Clermont L. Best, Mrs. F. Tilden Brown, Mrs. Lindley Hoffman Chapin, Mrs. Stuart Duncan, Mrs. E. V. Loew, Mrs. Woodbury Langdon, Mrs. W. S. Gurnee, Jr., Mrs. Frederic Gallatin, Mrs. E. Morgan Grinnell, Mrs. C. L. Hackstaff, Mrs. C. R. Huntington, Mrs. Schuyler Quackenbush, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Talbot Olyphant, Miss Julia Chester Wells, and many others.

Social Notes.

Courtland Dixon Barnes, who is to marry on Wednesday afternoon, April 10, will give his farewell bachelor dinner tomorrow night at Delmonico's. His guests will include his best man and brother, Henry Burr Barnes, Jr., and the ushers.

Mrs. W. H. Emory, wife of Rear Admiral Emory, will give a small tea this afternoon at the Iroquois for Miss Elizabeth Winthrop Stevens, whose engagement to W. H. Emory, Jr., was announced last Tuesday in THE TIMES.

Mrs. Marcellus Hartley of 232 Madison Avenue gave a dinner last night at her home for her grandson, Marcellus Hartley Dodge, and his fiancée, Miss Ethel G. Rockefeller. The guests included only the members of the Dodge and Rockefeller families, who were invited to meet the bride-elect.

The last of the Neighborhood Cotillions took pince at Dodworth's last night. The class wss organized five years ago by Mrs. Francis M. Scott. Under her management the cotillions have been most successful, and last night's dance brought the series to a close. Charles H. Woodruff led the cotillion, and the favors were souvenirs of the dances.

George T. Brokaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac V. Brokaw, will give a cotillion at Sherry's to-night.

Mrs. Edward L. Welsh of Philadelphia and a well-known member of the Summer colony nt Narragansett Pier, has arrived at the Hotel St. Regis.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Carstairs of London have arrived in town.

The wedding of Miss Ethel Geraldine Rockefeller and Marcellus Hartley Dodge on April 18 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Rockefeller will be a very small and quiet affair, perhaps a dozen or a few intimate friends only being asked, as Mr. Dodge's father, Norman Dodge, died only a few weeks ago.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. S. Herbert Mapes, 103 East Fifty-seventh Street, on Wednesday night.

A large dinner will be given on Tuesday, April 9, for the Duke of Newcastle by Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Taintor of Bernardsville, N. J. Among those who are invited are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens of Castle Point, Hoboken; Mrs. Archibald Alexander, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens of Castle Point. Mrs. Taintor, who, before her marriage, was Miss Bayard, is a cousin of the Stevens family.

Mrs. Joseph Manning will give a bridge party on April 12 at 3 o'clock at her home, 15 West Fifty-third Street.

Mrs. Harold Hadden will spend the Summer in Europe with her two younger sons, Lavin and Edward L. Hadden. She will sail early in June.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Grace L. Fargo to Daniel Chauncey, Jr., on the afternoon of Thursday, April 25, at 4:30 o'clock at St. Thomas's Church. Miss Fargo, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Fargo, is a sister of Mrs. Nathaniel F. Moore, who was Miss Helen Fargo, who was married last year. Mr. Chauncey is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chauncey of Brooklyn.

FUNK-STEVENS MUSICALE.

The Second of a Series Given in Wilhelm Funk's Studio.

MISS BINGHAM ILL, THEATRE CLOSED

Adverse Newspaper Notices Are to Blame for It, Her Husband Says.

HE'S SURE THERE'S A PLOT

Why, She's Played More Parts Than Bernhardt and Doesn't Deserve Such Treatment.

Amelia Bingham did not appear in "The Lilac Room" last night, and a notice posted on the closed doors of Weber's Theatre explained that there would not be any performance owing to the illness of the star. It was said that the decision not to give the performance was not reached until just before the time for the presentation.

"The Lilac Room," a new play by Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland and Beulah M. Dix, in which Miss Bingham has been touring the South, had its first New York performance on Wednesday night, and met with practically the unanimous disapproval of the critics. Miss Bingham's illness was attributed last night to the shock caused by the newspaper notices.

Lloyd Bingham said he hoped his wife would be in condition to give a performance to-night, especially as he wished the public to see what the performance really was. But he was uncertain whether she would be able to do it.

"There is a conspiracy against Miss Bingham here," said Mr. Bingham. "Because the newspaper men are hostile to me they are determined to take it out of her. It seems to me that they might give a woman a fair chance, and confine their attention to attacking me.

"Oh, I know there's a conspiracy. Yesterday afternoon I received a printed postal card saying that we would get all that was coming to us, or something of that sort. They are determined to drive Miss Bingham out of the profession, and she's played more different roles than any living woman, not excepting Sarah Bernhardt. She played thirty-five roles in New York City last season.

"She doesn't deserve such treatment. It is absurd to say that the production was like a Harlem flat. Why, no New York audience ever saw so much genuine brick-à-brac on the stage before!

"We have Weber's Theatre for three weeks and, of course, it will be a very serious loss if we cannot fill the time, but I hope that Miss Bingham will be able to reaume to-morrow. I want the public to come and judge."

MISS BARRYMORE IN FARCE.

She Plays Stella in "His Excellency the Governor."

His Excellency, Sir Montagu Martin, G. C. S. I. ..... Bruce McRae
The Right Hon. Henry Carlton, M. P. ..... Eugene Jepson
Capt. Charles Carew, A. D. C. ..... John Barrymore
Mr. John Baverstock ..... William Norris
Capt. Rivers ..... George Pauncefort
Major Kildare ..... James Kearney
A Sentry ..... E. Soldene Powell
Grove ..... Harry Barker
A Clerk ..... D. Lyons
A Footman ..... Walter W. Young
Mrs. Wentworth Bolingbroke ..... Hattie Russell
Ethel Carlton ..... Mary Nash
Stella De Gex ..... Ethel Barrymore

There is no resemblance of personality or method between Miss Jessie Millward, who acted the role of Stella de Gex in the earlier production of "His Excellency the Governor," and Miss Ethel Barrymore, to whom it now falls in the revival at the Empire. And the difference is best expressed perhaps in the fact that those who saw Miss Millward in the part are rather inclined to refer to Stella de Gex as "the adventuress" of Capt. Marshall's little play.

No one who sees Miss Barrymore in the rôle will think of so labeling it. Stella, to be sure, still remains, as heretofore, rather doubtful as to antecedents, and not exactly strict in the observance of ordinary social conventions, but one would as soon think of investigating the previous history of a butterfly and requesting it to settle into the ways of a snail, as to demand of this particular Stella that she give an account of herself and submit to encumbering social proprieties. In short, Miss Barrymore makes of Stella de Gex simply an irresistibly charming young woman, whose worst offences appear to be love of a jest, and the exercise of woman's inalienable right to make as good a match matrimonial as circumstances and her own cleverness permit.

It is a richly humorous performance to which Miss Barrymore's youth and beauty and good spirits, not to speak of several lovely gowns, contribute an interest that will surely appeal to that particular feminine element, whose sense of justice was so gravely offended by the actress's recent appearance in gingham and smudges. These things apart, however, and they are of the least importance, Miss Barrymore's acting of Stella is chiefly diverting by reason of its conveyance of a sense of unaffected gayety, a result produced through the legitimate employment of a skilled and artistic comedy method.

Mr. William Norris again appears as the suddenly sentimental Baverstock, and, as heretofore, he is exceedingly funny. Mr. Bruce McRae, in an excellent make-up, somewhat suggestive of a younger Joseph Chamberlain, plays the Governor capitally, but like several of the others seemed a bit uncertain in his lines. In fact, there was an absence of spontaneity about the entire performance which more rehearsals will probably amend. As it stands, however, it is most agreeable. Miss Mary Nash and Mr. John Barrymore are the other conspicuously competent members of the cast.

LEASE BROOKLYN THEATRE.

Klaw & Erlanger to Produce Vaudeville at the Grand This Fall.

Another important move was made in the vaudeville situation yesterday by Klaw & Erlanger when they obtained a lease for a term of years, beginning this August, from the Hyde & Behman estate, of the Grand Opera House in Brooklyn. "Advanced vaudeville" will therefore receive lively attention on the other side of the bridge.

The season in Brooklyn will be begun early in August. The Grand Opera House is a theatre of large seating capacity, and is situated in the midst of the day and night shopping district of Brooklyn. The managers believe that in leasing this house they have added an important link to the chain of new vaudeville houses already announced.

Katherine Grey Helps the Animals.

Katherine Grey and Robert Hunter, her manager, will give a special matinée of "The Reckoning" at the Berkeley Lyceum this afternoon in aid of the Bide-A-Wee Home for Animals. Miss Grey's aid was unsolicited, and the Bide-A-Wee Home women ask all the members and friends to help along the good work.

New Try for a Theatre of Labor.

The Central Federated Union has arranged for a special conference of its Executive Board with the representatives of the Vaudeville Actors' Union and Julius Hopp and his associates to reconsider the establishment of a Theatre of Labor. The conference will take place this evening.

HERBERT OPERA FOR HAMMERSTEIN

Composer Under Contract to Produce One for Manhattan's Next Season.

MAY USE BELASCO PLAY

"Girl of the Golden West" May Be Taken as Foundation If Puccini Doesn't Want It.

Oscar Hammerstein signed a contract with Victor Herbert yesterday, in which that composer promises to furnish the impresario with an opera to be produced at the Manbattan Opera House next season.

Mr. Hammerstein also announced that he would pay $1,000 for a suitable libretto for this opera. Several librettos, many of them American, are in Mr. Hammerstein's hands now, and as soon as he reaches a decision Mr. Herbert will go to work. David Belasco has under consideration a proposal to furnish a libretto.

While Mr. Herbert has gained considerable reputation as a composer of light and romantic opera, and of orchestral tone poems, his serious opera will be awaited with interest. In two burlesques of grand opera, "The Magic Knight" and "The Song Birds," Mr. Herbert has exhibited much knowledge of the humorous side of the operatic situation.

If Puccini does not use "The Girl of the Golden West" for a libretto it is quite possible that this will be chosen as the foundation of Mr. Herbert's work.

MISS ABOTT TO QUIT CONRIED.

Wants More Chances to Sing—Sues to Break Contract.

Bessie Abott and Heinrich Conried have decided to part company at the end of this season, and their troubles may be taken to court if some amicable agreement cahnot be reached. Miss Abott was to have gone on tour with the opera company, but she stayed in town, and yesterday it was said that she was ill in her apartments.

Some time last year Mr. Conried engaged Miss Abott for a term of five years at a weekly salary, and since then, according to the singer, he has scarcely given her any chances to appear. The last season she has sung a few Saturday nights, at a few Sunday night concerts, and occasionally taken some one's place at a regular subscription performance. She has been much dissatisfied with this. Mr. Conried has consented to release Miss Abott if she wishes to go abroad and sing, but he refuses to let her sing in America under any other management, and says that he will take the case to the courts in case she attempts to do so. He said yesterday: "Miss Abott sent word to me that she would stay with me if I guaranteed her at least twenty subscription performances at $500 each, and that she could sing in all forty times in the season. To this proposal I would not consent, and yesterday her lawyer served my counsel with papers in an action for annulment of the contract."

SOTHERN-MARLOWE HARMONY

E. H. Sothern Says That He and Miss Marlowe Agree Perfectly.

Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1907, by THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 4.—When E. H. Sothern was informed to-day of the report circulated in America that he and Julia Marlowe would separate at the end of the season on account of a disagreement regarding the répertoire, he said:

"There is not a word of truth in the report. Miss Marlowe and I agree perfectly in every way. We have invested a large sum of money in productions for next season, which will include a comedy being written specially for us by Paul Kester."

The Sothern-Marlowe company of seventy, with the scenery for the ten plays to be given in the course of the London engagement, arrived to-day on the steamer Minnehana.

PROFIT BY MUSIC HALL WAR.

Noted English Artists Engaged for Long Tours in This Country.

Special Cablegram.

Copyright, 1907, by THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 4.—The newspapers to-day inform the British patrons of music halls that a great number of their favorite stars have been engaged for long American tours either by the Klaw & Erlanger organization or the rival Keith-Proctor concern, which are said to be fiercely fighting each other. The magnitude of these American trusts, makes the English music hall syndicate look small, and the proprietors of the halls are reported to be greatly disturbed over the approaching exodus of talent.

For Klaw & Erlanger Clifford C. Fischer is said to have carte blanche to engage the best English artists, while the Marinelli agency is fighting for Keith & Proctor.

Mr. Fischer says he has engaged Harry Lauder at $2,250 a week, Gus Elen at $1,500, and Will Evans at $1,250. The Marinelli agency has engaged Marie Lloyd at $2,250 a week.

RALPH VOORHEES DEAD.

Blind Philanthropist of Clinton Gave Great Sums for Education.

Ralph Voorhees, well known throughout the State of New erJsey as the "blind philanthropist," died at his home, at Clinton, on Tuesday. His funeral took place from the late residence at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

Mr. Voorhees, who was nearly 70, was blind. He posssssed great wealth, and his hobby was to devote it to worthy educational purposes. He founded the Elizabeth Voorhees College, at Vellore, India, the biggest college in Southern India, and of which Dr. William I. Chamberlain of Rutgers College was President before assuming his duties in Jersey last year.

A gift of value to Rutgers College was the Voorhees Library, a seventy-five-thousand-dollar struoture. Mr. Voorhees recently donated $10,000 to the Presbyterian College in Tennessee, and also took upon himself the burden of supporting an industrial college in the South, under the advice of Booker T. Washington, for colored people.

On Christmas Day, 1897, he distributed $60,000 among relatives who would have received the money at the time of his death. Of this sum the hen Gov. Foster M. Voorhees received about $10,000. Other gifts have been: Carroll College of Waukesba, Wis., $20,000; Huron, S. D., College, $100,000; Lafayette College, $100,000; Hope College, Holland, Mich., $100,000.

Mr. Voorhees leaves a widow, but no children. He also leaves a brother, State Treasurer Daniel Voorhees, and several nephews, among them being ex-Gov. Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth, and Dr. Edward B. Voorhees of Rutgers College, and Director of the State Experiment Station.

Dr. Voorhees attended the funeral yesterday, as did President William H. S. Demarest of Rutgers College.

BISHOP FITZGERALD DEAD.

Expired at Hongkong on His Way Home From the Far East.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, April 4.—Bishop James Newbury Fitzgerald of the Methodist Episcopal Church and President of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, died yesterday of pleurisy in Hongkong, China. Bishop Fitzgerald left Ocean Grove for India in October last to attend the fiftieth anniversary of Methodists in that country and to look after conference work in the missions and churches there. He was accompanied by Mrs. Fitzgerald and the Misses Bessie and Cornelia, their daughters, and their son, Raymond, who is blind. Bishop Cyrus D. Foss of Philadelphia was also a member of the party.

Bishop Fitzgerald's second daughter, Miss Cornelia, died suddenly on Sunday, March 3, while the party were at Penang, in the Straits Settlement. Her death occurred just as her father's work had been concluded in India. The family at once started for America and had reached Hongkong when the Bishop's death occurred.

Bishop Fitzgerald succeeded the first President of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, the Rev. Dr. Elwood H. Stokes, after the latter's death, in 1897. He was born in Newark, N. J., in 1837, and thus was 70 years old. He studied law and was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in 1858. He was ordained minister in 1862, joining the Newark Annual Conference. In 1888 he was made a bishop of the church. After having served as recording secretary of the church he was missionary secretary for eight years.

When the news of the Bishop's death reached Ocean Grove the flags in the resort were at once placed at half mast and the bell in the association office tower was tolled seventy times. Vice-President Ballard has arranged to hold a memorial service on Sunday afternoon.

MRS. FRANCIS E. BUTLER DEAD

Daughter of the Revolution and Mother-in-Law of President Thwing.

FARMINGTON, Me., April 4.—Mrs. Francis E. Butler, a "Real Daughter" of the American Revolution, died to-night. She was 94 years old. She was President of the Franklin County Equal Suffrage Association and was prominent also in W. C. T. U. work.

Mrs. Butler's daughter is the wife of the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Thwing, President of the Western Reserve University.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

John Joseph Riley.

John Joseph Riley, owner of the Brooklyn Steam Engine Works, in Van Brunt Street, Brooklyn, died on Monday at Lakewood, N. J. His home was at 412 Sackett Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Riley was born in Manhattan on Aug. 14, 1846, and had lived in Brooklyn since a boy. When a young man he entered the employ, in a minor capacity, of a firm of which he later became the head. He was one of the founders of the Modern Science Clubs of Brooklyn and a member of the New York and New Jersey Foundrymen's Association and the National Association of Foundrymen.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Veterans' Association of the Ninth Regiment. He leaves a widow, two sons, and a daughter.

OSCAR EDWARDS, former

BILLINGS WITNESS IN GOLD CUP CASE

Owner of Lou Dillon Accused of Being Instigator in the Present Action.

WILL TAKE STAND TO-DAY

Conflicting Expert Testimony Offered at Yesterday's Hearing—Motion to Dismiss Suit Denied.

C. K. G. Billings, owner of the famous trotting mare Lou Dillon, will appear to-day as a witness in the Memphis Gold Cup case at the Supreme Court before Justice Greenbaum. This announcement was made yesterday by former Judge Hatch, counsel for the Memphis Trotting Association, in response to the charge made by Counsel Coyle of the defense that Mr. Billings "is the man behind the gun in the case, and the instigator of the present action." The plaintiff's case was closed with the exception of the testimony of Mr. Billings, who was out of town.

The testimony of Veterinary Springer of Cleveland and of experts occupied a large part of yesterday. Dr. Springer was asked if aconite would produce slobbering or frothing at the mouth, to which witness replied that it would if properly diluted. Robert McCully, another veterinary, stated that he had treated horses in the Haggin, Belmont, Keene, and other prominent racing stables, but he had never seen Lou Dillon in action, and only once in her stable. He was asked the prepared hypothetical question as to the possibility of the mare being "doped," and said that in his opinion the mare did not stop on the day of the race from natural causes, and that some such drug as aconite must have been administered.

Judge Coyle discussed the symptoms of thumps, which is charged was the matter with the mare, and which the witness said might be caused without the use of drugs. In his opinion a horse which came in staggering and in a state of collapse after a race—presumably from aconite poisoning—might recover so as to go ten or twelve miles an hour, perhaps better, twenty minutes later, and might entirely recover twenty-four hours later. Counsel tried to make the witness say a horse might collapse in the manner of Lou Dillon from causes other than aconite poisoning, but Dr. McCully insisted that when a racer "simply quit" in a speed contest, it was done gradually, and not in the abrupt manner ascribed to Lou Dillon.

Judge Hatch then said he had no more witnesses to examine with the exception of Mr. Billings. Former Judge Coyle contended that Mr. Billings knew the trial was going on and should have been here.

"Billings is the man behind the gun. He is the most interested party on the side of the prosecutor, and the instigator of the present action," exclaimed Mr. Coyle, "and yet he is not here."

"He will be here, and I don't think such an insinuation is proper," said Mr. Hatch.

"We'll see," retorted Mr. Coyle, with a laugh.

Justice Greenbaum put an end to further discussion on the point by remarking: "When Mr. Billings is called the court will rule."

Former Congressman John J. Adams of counsel for Mr. Smathers asked the court to dismiss the suit. He said that the alleged conspiracy had not been proved, and that there was not the slightest evidence to connect Mr. Smathers with any conspiracy. He said that in support of the conspiracy and drugging charge, the plaintiff had put only George Spear and Millard Sanders on the stand, and that their testimony did not in any way connect Mr. Smathers with any conspiracy. The motion was denied and Mr. Adams said he would prove that the charge of "doping" was made by a discharged employe of Mr. Smathers.

John C. Christy of Kansas City testified that he was with Mr. Smathers continuously from the time of their arrival at Memphis until after the race, excepting fifteen or twenty minutes, during which time Mr. Smathers was with his horse. This was to show that the alleged conversation regarding the horse heard by George Spear could not have taken place.

Dr. J. M. Schreiber, formerly State Veterinarian of Tennessee, said that he examined Lou Dillon after the first heat of the cup race and immediately pronounced the mare to be suffering from thumps, a condition not brought on by aconite poisoning.

MRS. BURDEN IN THE LEAD.

Has Close Finish with Mrs. Ladenburg and Gladys Mills in Drag Hunt.

Three women riders made a close finish on the Harry Payne Whitney estate yesterday, in the third run this season of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. Each rode a fine strong hunter, and all were able, because their mounts had so much less weight to carry than those of the men to keep well in the van throughout the run, which was seven and a half miles long.

The start was from Westbury station, the surroundings of which presented a scene that reminded some of Southern hunting meets of years ago, save for the presence of many automobiles. From the starting point the hunters galloped to the Warner Baltazzi place, a short distance north, where the seven and a half couples of hounds were thrown in. They took the scent of the drag at once and started across the fields at a lively pace.

The conformity of the route chosen cut out work for the hunters, who had their first jump just after the dogs were thrown in. Reaching the Jericho Turnpike a double jump was encountered. All got over safely, except Hayden, the second whip, whose mount, a big green hunter, shied and refused the jump, throwing Hayden heavily upon his head. But he mounted and pluckily continued the run.

From the Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., place the hunt led a mile or more to the north over the property of Dudley Winthrop. It was up hill, and included twenty-three jumps, which winded the horses somewhat, and when the hunters reached the place of E. D. Morgan the first check was called. A few of those who had ridden thus far were obliged to give up and return owing to the greenness of their mounts. From the Morgan estate the hunt led over the Henry Rushmore farm and thence up to the Harry Payne Whitney place, where it finished.

It was a pretty run at the conclusion of the hunt. Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, Miss Gladys Mills, and Mrs. James Burden, in friendly rivalry to finish, just spurred their hunters to exert their powers, and the three thundered over the turf. Mrs. Burden finished first, Mrs. Ladenburg second, and Miss Mills third, but all were very close together. The others who followed the hounds were Frank G. Griswold, R. F. Potter, W. Scott Cameron, William C. Hayes, J. P. Grace, Samuel Willets, M. F. H., and William Davy, first whip.

The fourth run of the season will be held to-morrow, and will take the hunters, who will start from Woodbury, over the Cold Spring Harbor and Huntington sections. Arrangements are to be made next week for three runs after five foxes.

LARD'S GOLF TROPHY.

Washington Player Wins Final Round in North and South Championship.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 4.—Allan Lard of the Columbia Golf Club, Washington, was an easy winner of the championship trophy in to-day's thirty-six-hole final round of the seventh annual United North and South Amateur Tournament, being at the top of his game and finding his opponent, young Nathaniel F. Moore of the Onwentsia Club, Chicago, in bad form. He won on the twenty-fifth green by 12 and 11. Lard rounded out a seventy-eight in the morning with two bad holes, and was traveling fast in the afternoon, anything like a rally on the part of the Chicago player biting out of the question.

S. D. Bowers of the Brooklawn Club, Massachusetts, won the consolation from T. S. Lipp of Seattle by 3 and 2, with fast cards of 157 and 160.

Other cup winners were L. D. Pierce of Woodland, second division; George Robeson, Oak Hill, runner-up; J. P. Gardiner, Midlothian, consolation; third division, Lieut. Frank B. Barrett of Fox Hills, in a thirty-nine-hole match; T. H. Baldwin of Kenilworth, runner-up; J. E. Kellogg of Alpine, consolation; fourth division, I. M. Jackson, Plymouth; H. B. Miller, Shinnecock, runner-up; W. L. Murphy, Pittsburg, consolation.

Lard, the champion, has been playing golf for seven years. For a number of years he has figured prominently here, and his course turnament of 146, rounds of 72 and 74, has stood against all comers in the amateur lines for several years.

A special event, in which amateurs and professionals will participate, is booked for to-morrow, the week closing with the annual thirty-six hole open championship.

"Dinner Stakes" Subscribers.

The subscriptions to the Brooklyn Jockey Club's "Dinner Stakes," the Astoria, for fillies two years old, at five furlongs, to be run at the Gravesend second Spring meeting, were announced yesterday. In the list of twelve subscribers two names new to the Astoria appear in Perry Belmont and J. G. Oxnard, the latter being in the list of owners for the first time this season. The other subscribers are W. A. Chanler, Woodford Clay, H. B. Duryea, P. J. Dwyer, W. S. Fanshawe, H. K. Knapp, F. R. Hitchcock, Andrew Miller, P. H. McCarren, and R. T. Wilson, Jr. The race, a private sweepstakes, is the sporting feature of the Gravesend Spring meeting, the owner of the winner being host at a dinner to the subscribers and invited guests.

UPSET AT BENNING WHEN OTWELL WON

Thirty to One Laid Against His Chances, but He Beat the Favorite Handily.

PLUNGE ON RADTKE'S HORSE

Ran a Poor Race, Which Was Taken by Stickaway—Varner First in 'Chase.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 4.—The feature of the Washington Jockey Club's race at the Benning track to-day was the first race, a handicap, for three-year-olds and upward. Nearly all of the nine starters had a following, but a notable plunge was made on Vendor, ridden by Radtke. The running was made by Cousin Kate, but at the turn Stickaway came fast, with Right and True lapping him, the former winning in a drive. The favorite Tickle did not figure.

A big upset occurred in the second race, Otwell, at 30 to 1, winning handily. Lady Powell, the odd-on favorite, ran a poor race.

Jack McKeon won the third event by a length from the favorite Turipides. The latter led until within 200 yards of the finish, when he stopped badly and barely saved the place from Umbrella. In the handicap steeplechase at two miles Varner never was headed.

In the handicap, which concluded the card, the favorite, Ormonde's Right, won handily from Campaigner, which looked like a winner until the last furlong. The weather was ideal, track fast, and attendance good. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; five and one-half furlongs. Columbia course. Stickaway, 118 pounds, (McIntyre,) 5 to 1 and 2 to 1; Right and True, 106, (J. Johnson,) 15 to 1 and 6 to 1, second; Cousin Kate, 94, (Lee,) 8 to 2, third. Time—1:10. Patois, Vendor, Tickle, Diamond Flush, Revenue, and Autumn Flower also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Selling; for two-year-olds; four and one-half furlongs, old course. Otwell, 94 pounds, (Vesper,) 30 to 1 and 8 to 1, won; Awiess, 99, (J. Johnson,) 10 to 1 and 4 to 1, second; Merrimac, 99, (L. Smith,) 4 to 1, third. Time—0:58. Lady Powell, Arkobee, Vistula, Bayardo, Gold Foil, and Corbeau also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Selling; for three-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Jack McKeon, 109 pounds, (Mountain,) 8 to 5 and 1 to 3, won; Euripides, 104, (Englander,) 9 to 10 and 1 to 4, second; Umbrella, 86, (Goldstein,) 25 to 1, third. Time—1:29 4-5. Idle Dream, Betey Binford, and Oncore also ran.

Slosson and Morningstar Play To-night.

George F. Slosson and Ora Morningstar have been invited to play an exhibition billiard match at Fordham University to-night and have accepted. The two renowned players will meet in a 300-point 18.2 balk-line game; a 200-point 18.1 balk-line game, and a 50-point cushion carrom game. The exhibition will close with fancy shots by both men. Ed McLaughlin will referee the matches.

GIANTS HOMEWARD BOUND.

Rain Prevents Game at Columbus and Wheeling Contest Is Cancelled.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 4.—The New York Giants were unable to play their scheduled game against Columbus here to-day on account of the downpour of rain that has continued all day. The New Yorkers did not arrive until late owing to delays on the railroad, and were hopeful of having a good game with the winners of the American Association pennant. Manager McGraw was much disappointed that the game was prevented. The team leaves at midnight for New York, canceling the game that was arranged for to-morrow at Wheeling, W. Va., with the Central League team there because the weather conditions were as unsavory there.

It was rumored to-day that McGraw had decided to let several of his younger players go. Among those for whom it is said waivers have been asked are Outfielder Burke, formerly of the Connecticut League; "Hank" Matheweon, brother of "Christy," and Second Baseman Mullin. The three will be disposed of, it is understood, to minor league teams for another year of preparation for major league ball.

READY TO BREAK CAMP.

Americans Leave Atlanta Sunday and Go Back Again Next Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 4.—The Greater New Yorks play the Atlanta team tomorrow and Saturday, and Sunday will break camp for the North. "Tim" McGuire left at midnight last night with the colt division of the New Yorkers for Richmond, Va. Griffith has made arrangements to leave Atlanta Sunday afternoon. He has practically closed a deal for these training grounds next Spring, and will put in one solid month here. He is of the opinion that this is a better plan than to keep shifting from one city to another as the other teams are doing.

Atlanta "fans" will part with the New York with much regret, for the team is one of the best liked that ever trained here. The players in great demand for public affairs. William Keeler and Frank La-Porte last night officiated as judges at a skating rink carnival.

The Brooklyn team left for Lynchburg to-night to play two exhibition games.

Brooklyn's First Defeat of Year.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 4.—The Atlantas distinguished themselves this afternoon by handing the small end of a 10-to-5 score to the Brooklyns, and in so doing gave the National Leaguers the first defeat they have experienced in the exhibition series. Batting did the work. The locals found Pastorius nine times in six innings, and batted Harry McIntyre, one-time Southern Leaguer, for five bases during the three innings he was in the box. The score:

"Phillies" Beat Americans Again.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—The Philadelphia Nationals again defeated the local Americans to-day in the second game of the annual Spring series. Corridon pitched finely, holding the Americans down to two hits. Opportune batting coupled with loose fielding by the Americans gave the Nationals their victory. The score by innings:

Batteries—Powell and Stevens; Fromme and Marshall.

Scores of Other Games.

Bowdoin defeated Fordham yesterday at Fordham Field by the score of 8 to 4. Fordham took the lead at the start, scoring two runs in the opening inning. Bowdoin opened her scoring column in the second and made four runs in the third. In the mourth inning the Bronx players made a desperate effort to even up matters, and scored two tallies, when Mahoney made a single with the bases filled. A. Schiess at second played a good game for Fordham, and also made two singles. Hanrahan, Bowdoin's first baseman, was the leader with the bat, having three hits to his credit. Score by innings.

Captain of Navy Nine Is Sick.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 4.—Midshipman Benjamin R. Lombard, Captain of the Naval Academy baseball nine, is again in the quarters on account of a nervous affection with which he has been suffering for several months. It is likely that he will receive a long sick leave, and that a Captain will be elected to succeed him. Midshipman Lombard got a month's sick leave, and returned here just before the season opened. It is not believed that he can continue to play ball or perform regular duty.

Just Before the Baseball Season.

Patrick T. Powers is a firm believer in the "boiling out" process. The President of the Eastern League has just returned from French Lick Springs, looking in better health than in many years. Mr. Powers is rather enthusiastic over the prospects of his organization; in fact he believes it will be the most successful in its history.

The Giants wind up their preliminary training trip to-day with the Wheeling (West Va.) Club.

While Griffith and part of the Greater New York team is playing at Atlanta to-day and to-morrow, the veteran, "Jim" McGuire, is in command of another squad playing at Richmond, Va. On Monday the manager's nine will line up against the team at Al. Orth's home, Lynchburg, Va., while McGuire's aggregation will be at Roanoke. The teams will then combine and go to Baltimore for two games on next Tuesday and Wednesday. On Thursday they are scheduled to open the championship season in Washington.

Southerners are divided in their opinion as to the sprinting abilities of Harry Bay of Cleveland and "Billy" Maloney of Brooklyn. The Atlanta "fans" were very anxious to bring the two players together in a race of 100 yards when they met in Atlanta a few days ago, but Managers Lajoie and Donovan strenuously objected. If such a race had been arranged it is quite likely that Manager Griffith would have suggested the entrance of his fleet centre fielder, "Danny" Hoffman.

Brooklyn "rooters" are much pleased over the fact that the Rev. Father E. W. McCarthy of St. Augustine Church, Brooklyn, will throw the first ball on to the diamond at the opening championship game at Washington Park, April 16, between the Brooklyn and New York Clubs. Father McCarthy is an ardent advocate of clean sport, and at one time could play a splendid game of handball.

If the weather is propitious, a line can be had on the Brooklyn team when Manager Donovan will divide up his players into two nines for a game at Washington Park on Monday next.

"Farmer Cy" Young is in command of the Boston Americans, and will continue in that capacity until a permanent manager is secured.

The Cincinnati conference between President Taylor of the ex-champion Boston team of the American League and his obdurate short stop, Freddie Parent, showed that the ideas of the two men were as far apart as ever. As a result Parent has left for his home at Sandford, Me.

The Cleveland Club has met with the first serious mishap of the season. A surgical operation has been performed on the face of Third Basemen Bradley, and he has gone home to recuperate. It is not likely that he will play again until his team goes to Detroit for the first championship game on April 11.

I HAVE BEEN ARRESTED By the New York Doctors WHY?

Because I had discovered a method of relieving human suffering, which interferes with the drug doctors' trade; because I had discovered and set forth a new science, a science that teaches how to select and combine food so as to produce chemical harmony in the stomach, thereby removing a tremendous amount of suffering and disease.

According to the doctors, my crime consists in actually doing these very things.

THE CHARGE MADE AGAINST ME IS NOT GIVING MEDICINE, BUT RELIEVING HUMAN SUFFERING WITHOUT IT.

This is my crime, this is the harm I am doing. I have committed nearly 1,000 of these crimes within the past two years, and shall continue to commit them, unless every court in the State of New York, together with the Supreme Court of the United States decides that it is a crime to relieve human suffering without drugs or doctors.

This case involves the basic principles of our constitutional liberties, and I will fight it to the highest court in this Nation, unless my constitutional rights are granted me before it reaches that tribunal.

Every individual who loves liberty and hates tyranny should read the history of this case, which I have written and which is now in press, called "Medical Legislation."

You are especially invited to call and examine my methods, or write me for a copy of the above-named booklet.

FISHERMEN HAVE POOR LUCK.

Party of Two Hundred on the Angler Return with Small Catch.

The iron steamboat Angler, with Capt. Al Foster in command, made her first trip of the season to the Fishing Banks yesterday, carrying a quota of over 200 fishermen to make their first cast of the year. The steamer left the Battery at 8 o'clock in the morning and reached the banks before 11, but no luck was met with. After lying there for over two hours, Capt. Foster determined to go on down the beach to Seventeen Fathome, where the boat was again hove to, and for another two hours the fishermen met with little luck. The cod began to run then, and after delaying long enough to permit of a small catch the boat was turned and started for home. Against the strong tide running flood she made slow progress, and did not dock at the Battery until after dark.

Capt. Foster said last night that the boat would make three trips a week, carrying parties of anglers to the banks, making her next start to-morrow morning.

SCHOOLBOYS BEGIN ROWING.

Sixty-three Candidates Report for Practice at Harlem R. C.

The interscholastic eight-oared shell race, which will be one of the features of the Decoration Day regatta of the Harlem Regatta Association, is attracting widespread attention among the schoolboys of greater New York. Capt. J. Nagle of the Harlem Rowing Club instructed sixty-three boys who attended the first day's practice yesterday at the Harlem Rowing Club house. The boys represented the De Witt Clinton High School and the High School of Commerce. The practice was confined to the machines, which will be continued for at least two weeks. Capt. Nagle expects to boat the boys the latter part of this month.

Forty-five boys reported for practice at the New York Athletic Club house at Travers Island, and twenty young tars from the St. Mary's Schoolship received instruction at the clubhouse of the New Rochelle Rowing Club. Townsend Harris Hall athletes will begin training at the Harlem Rowing Club on Saturday, and the Stuyvesant Heights High School boys will begin work on the same day.

Poggenburg Not Going to Paris.

J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, ex-National amateur billiard champion, declared yesterday that no action was taken by the Liederkranz Club as to defraying his expenses to Paris as an entrant for the international tournament. He said that he had no intention of journeying to Paris, and even were he to do so he would pay his own expenses.

The statement of the amateur player was in contradiction to the statement made by Maurice Daly, Chairman of a committee on entering an American in the Paris international tournament. He said that the Liederkranz Club voted to defray the necessary expenses of its champion, Poggenburg, and enter him for the Paris tournament. He further said that the same action had been taken by the Chicago Athletic Association in regard to Calvin Demarest, and that possibly one or both players would go abroad to represent this country.

W. L. DOUGLAS

BEST IN THE WORLD $3.50 SHOES FOR MEN

Do you wear W. L. Douglas Shoes? If not, I believe I can give you good and sufficient reasons why it will pay you to wear them.

I give the wearer the benefit of my thorough and practical knowledge of shoemaking, which has extended over fifty years.

I give the wearer the benefit of my exclusive method of tanning the bottom soles, which makes them more flexible and gives longer wear than any other sole leather produced in this country.

As I am the largest manufacturer of men's fine Hand-Sewed Process shoes in the world, it is necessary for me to purchase leather and other materials in enormous quantities; the benefit of the very low prices I obtain I give to the wearer in superior quality over other makes.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer and are of greater value than any other make.

W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.
I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the past ten years, and have found them easy to walk in, stylish and very comfortable. I am constantly on my feet 16 hours daily, and have never known a pain or ache since wearing your shoes. WM. LEISHMAN,
Commissioner of Deeds, 46 Manhattan St., New York City.

These are a few of the reasons why I make and sell more Men's Fine Hand-Sewed Process $3.50 Shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

AUTOISTS TO TOUR ABROAD THIS YEAR

Many Americans Going to Witness the French and German Cup Races.

TAKING THEIR OWN CARS

More Foreign Touring Than Ever Before—Automobile Club Issues Book of Information.

American automobilists will invade Europe in greater numbers this season than ever before. Over seventy-five applications from members of the Automobile Club of America have recently been made to the Touring Bureau for information regarding the shipment of their cars, foreign regulations and other facts, which, if known in advance, will save many petty annoyances, while contributing to the comfort of the tour. The four-thousand-mile Gold Cup tour, restricted entirely to domestic cars, will by no means represent the bulk of the interest shown by Americans for touring in Europe. The novel features of this scheme have exerted a certain influence in the tendenoy to take one's own car abroad for motor traveling, and the fact, as announced yesterday by Georges Dupuy, who is managing this long-distance run, that over twenty cars have virtually been entered, indictes that tha plan is meeting with favor.

The two big automobile events of Europe, the German Emperor's Cup race on June 14, and the Grand Prix, in France, on July 2, are also exerting a vital influence in causing so many Americans to make preparations for an early trip abroad. With over ninety cars entered for the German contest and thirty-four cars for the Grand Prix, these two competitions will be well worth the journey, for those who are interested in studying the development of the motor industry and witnessing the struggle for supremacy between the best makes of cars handled by the most experienced drivers that the world has produced. The presence of Walter Christie's car, the only American entrant for the French race, has naturally directed particular attention to that event from this side of the water. Mr. Christie is a member of the Automobile Club of America, and while he may not drive the car himself, a number of members are making a special point to witness the race and show their appreciation of Christie's sportsmanship.

A. L. Westgard, Secretary of the Automobile Club's Touring Bureau, said yesterday that more than two-thirds of the members who have applied for touring information intend to take their own cars with them.

"This," he added, "is a larger proportion than has ever been the case before. Last year somawhat over a hundred members made European motor trips, but the chances are that this will be more than doubled this season. I have mapped out a number of tours through Great Britain, France, Germany, and Switzerland, which are the most popular motoring countries in the Summer, and many members have stipulated that they wish their routes so arranged that they may see the German and French races. In America, also, touring interest is decidedly increasing. More long-distance trips will be made by the members than ever before, and we are busy preparing new maps and new routes."

As an aid to Americans touring abroad the Runs and Tours Committee of the Automobile Club, under the direction of its Chairman, Waldron Williams, and Mr. Westgard, has just issued a book of information, giving the customs regulations, condition of the roads, speed limitations, National and local motor laws, and the various license and registration fees required in thirty-eight different countries.

The Automobile Club has a foreign representative in Paris, Major F. A. Mahan, and he secures frontier passes and licenses for visiting tourists, so that upon arrival their necessary papers will be delivered to them without delay. France is the only country in Europe requiring the owner and his chauffeur to submit their photographs to the officers in charge of automobile regulations.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., attended a meeting of the Plan and Scope Committee of the Long Island Motor Parkway yesterday at the Lawyers' Club. A report was presented of the preliminary work done during the last few weeks in securing rights of way for the entire course, and at a meeting of the Directors to be held within a few days an announcement will be made of the exact route chosen for the Vanderbilt Cup and touring car races.

Chairman Jefferson De Mont Thompson of the American Automobile Association Racing Board said yesterday that he expected to call a meeting for next week, when a definite announcement will ho mede of the time for the closing of entries, and the changed conditions for the event will probably be determined at that time.

The Run and Tour Committee of the Automobile Club of America met this week and discussed the proposition to hold a club tour from this city to Norfolk at the Jamestown Exposition in June. Information is being sought on the conditions of the roads between Philadelphia and Cape Charles, from which point it is proposed to ship the cars across Chesapeake Bay on a freight harge.

P. S. Palmer of the Martini Import Company sailed last week to visit the Martini factory in Switzerland. He will make an effort to secure the entry of a Martini car for the Vanderbilt Cup race, and will make arrangements for a larger importation of these cars to America. The Martini car embodies many original features, including the Martini "carbureter," which solves the multiple jet question. The hollow piston raises by the automatic air inlet and allows more gasoline to flow into the carhureter.

MOFFETT LEADS SHOOTERS.

Crescent Athletic Club Champion Beats Good Field at Bay Ridge.

The Crescent Athletic Club gunners did not have enough shooting at Montclair on Wednesday, so quite a good field appeared at the club's traps at Bay Ridge yesterday and participated in two 100-target matches. It served as excellent practice for the first competition of the home-and-home match with the Boston Athletic Association to-morrow, and while the results in general were hardly up to the Crescent standard, the work of some of the contestants was first class. Club Champion Moffett led in both events, while Frank Stephenson, who holds the best average for the season at Bay Ridge, was much out of form. The scores:

BROKAW BROTHERS

MRS. GERKEN BEATEN TWICE.

Second to Emily Bedford and Adelaide Doremus at Durland Show.

Competitions for women riders and drivers made up the greater part of the programme at the Durland Horse Show last night. Horses exhibited by Miss Emily H. Bedford showed successfully in the most prominent classes of the night, and made the opportunity for an abundance of enthusiasm on the part of the exhibitor's friends.

In two competitions women riders were required to go out for blue ribbons, the contests in both cases arousing keen attention from the crowd. Chief in interest of these was the ring for jumping horses, ridden by women, in which Miss Marion Holloway rode the winner, the second and the third horses in a big ring of competitors. The summary:

Combination Class.—Horses to be driven to an appropriate vehicle, then changed to saddle and ridden.—Won by Miss Emily H. Bedford's Patsey Palmer, h. m., 15.1¾ hands, 5 years; Mrs. John Gerken's Surprise, b. g., 15.3, 7, second; Miss C. Adelaide Doremus's Lady McDonald, b. m., 15.2½, 7, third; the Elsinore Farm's My Dream, b. g., 15.3, 7, fourth.

Pony Class—For ponies over 13 hands and not exceeding 14.1.—Won by the Elsinore Farm's All There, roan m., 13.2, 5; William Sellig's Miniature Forest King, br. g., 14, 6, second; Alfred P. Maclay's Mollie O., br. m., 14, 7, third; Alexander Watson's Fylde Forrester, b. g., 14.0½, 6, fourth.

Saddle Class, for Horsee 15.2 hands and over, ridden by women.—Won by Miss C. Adelaide Doremus's Lady McDonald, b. m., 15.2½, 7; Miss John Gerken's Surprise, b. g., 15.3, 7, second; the Elsinore Farm's Artist's Model, b. m., 15.2½, 7, third; McGibbon & Collier's Go Lightly, b. m., 15.3, 7, fourth.

Tandem Class, for the best Tandems over 15 hands.—Won by Miss Emily H. Bedford's team, Hildred, ch. m., 15¾, 9, and Plymouth Champion, ch. g., 15.1, aged; The Tichenor-Grand Company's pair, Invincible, b. g., 15.3, 6, and Three Cheers, b. g., 15.3, 6, second; C. W. Watson's pair, Lord Baltimore, b. g., 16¾, 8, and My Maryland, b. g., 15.2, 7, third; Paul A. Sarg's Lady Grayce, br. m., 16, 7, and My Lady, br. m., 16, 8, fourth.

Jumping Class, best performance over 4 feet, women riding.—Won by The Westchester Farm's Taconite, b. g., 16.3, 6; the Westchester Farm's Centennial, blk. g., 16.1, 7, second; Jack Frost, rn. g., 16.3, aged, third; Charles L. Knoeller's Volar, h. g., 16.1, 7, fourth.

Four-in-Hand Class, best Road Tandem.—Won by Fiss, Doer & Carroll's four; J. Campbell Thompson's four, second; Tichenor-Grand Company's four, third; Otto H. Kahn's four, fourth.

Runabout Class—Best runabout horse.—Won by Mrs. John A. Drake's Flying Jim, b. g., 14.3½, 8; Alfred B. MacCloy's Muecovite, ch. g., 14.2, 8, second; Tonza Sauvage's Lord Nelson, ch. g., 15.1, 9, third; Mrs. Edwin H. Hooley's Dorthea, ch. m., 15.2, 5, fourth.

Harness Class—Best horse over 15.1 hands.—Won by William A. Jamison's Jet, blk. m., 15.2¾, 7; John Doyle's Banker, b. g., 15.3, 7, second; C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore, b. g., 15.1¾, 8, third; C. W. Watson's My Maryland, h. g., 15.2, 7, fourth.

CLOSING ATHLETIC GAMES.

Military Carnival at Thirteenth Armory Winds Up Indoor Season.

The indoor athletic season will close with the annual carnival of the Military Athletic League, which will be held at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Sumner and Jefferson Avenues, Brooklyn, to-night and to-morrow night. The entry list, which numbers over 800, includes nearly all the metropolitan district Amateur Athletic Union champions and many National title holders. The events are closed to military organizations, including the United States Army, and keen competition is assured in every contest.

Record holders in the different branches of athletic sports will be on hand, and the rivalry between the National Guard organizations of New York and New Jersey and the army athletes will be productive of close finishes.

Many prominent guests have been invited and will attend the carnival. Major Gen. Roo, commanding the National Guard of New York, and his military staff and several prominent army and navy officers have accepted invitations. In view of the probable introduction of athletic sports in the army, the visit of the army officers will be attended with significance, as the army games will be patterned after those of the Military Athletic League.

The Athletic Committee, consisting of Major W. A. Turpin, Capt. John J. Dixon, Capt. Robert Huen, Capt. John Eimes, Lieut. Charles Diegen, and Lieut. H. L. Hillman, has arranged one of the most attractive programmes ever gotten up for an athletic meeting. Twenty events are down for decision, the trials of which take place to-night and the finals to-morrow night. The mile handicap, which will attract the best long-distance men in Greater New York, will be the featnre of to-night's programme.

Tha wall-scaling competition, which is reserved for to-morrow night, will bring together teams from the army and National Guard. The Forty-third Company of Coast Artillery from Fort Terry holds the world's record for this event, and will send a team to compete against the Thirteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, and Seventy-first Regiments of New York and the Fourth Regiment of New Jersey.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rise Sharply — Call Money Rates, 2½@2 Per Cent.

EASY MONEY THE FACTOR

Cash Flowing to Banks from Treasury —The Erie Note Issue—Foreign Money Position.

Continued improvement in the money market, as a result of the Treasury measures, which are promoting a great inflow of cash to the banks, was the underlying cause of yesterday's sharp rise in prices in the stock market. Appreciation of the better position of affairs in this respect led to heavy purchases of stock outright and induced once more a general short covering movement. The buying power was fully equal to the task of absorbing the heavy selling by London, which was estimated at no lees than 60,000 sbares, and the sslee for local account, which were presumably largely in the nature of profit taking. Sentiment was also helped by reports from Chicago to the effect that the threatened railroad strike on Western lines would in all likelihood be averted, and by the publication of the earnings statement of the Southern Pacific, showing that in the month of February that property increased its gross earnings by $2,055,000 and its net return by $1,148,000. The companion statement of the Union Pacific was much less favorable, disclosing a net decrease of $56,000 for the same period, this being the first report to sHow such a decrease in many months. The disposition, however, wae very plainly to make the most of favorable factors, and it was in this mood that the financial community received the further outburst from Washington over the Harriman-Webster letter and the announcement that in securing money to meet its maturing loans the Erie had been compelled to reeort to the very unusual expedient of discounting in advance $5,500,000 of one-year notes, making the return on theee to the purchaser practically 7 per cent. This is hardly a symptom of ease in money markets, but there is a general belief that the Erie's case is an exceptional one, and, therefore, that the charges exacted from the road are hardly representative of the actual money market position. Discounts in London were easier, but the regular weekly return of the Bank of England makes it clear, through the showing therein of the lowest reserve percentage reported at this season in several years, that however much clearer the outlook is here it is still somewhat obscure there. The French Bank's report, also made yesterday, supports this view, its gold holdinge having fallen off $4,500,000 in the week, while notes and bills discounted increased in the same period by $21,900,000 and a trifle lese than $50,000,000 respectively. The stock market closed strong, with the greater part of the day's gains intact, these running from 1 to 5 points.

Money rates again reflected the inflow of cash to the banke from the Treasury, lenders finding it impossible to secure more than 5 per cent. for the short periods on time loans, while the average rate on money put out on the Stock Exchange was 2¼ per cent. Since Friday last the banke have gained $10,000,000 from the Sub-Treasury, and all in all they have received as a result of Mr. Cortelyou's measures $22,000,000. The bond market continues to reflect this better position of the money markets, and it will be interesting to witness the effect which the changed conditions have upon the plans of those railroads and industrial concerns whose desires to borrow money were great on the eve of the recent Wall Street disturbances.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Riverside Bank (adjourned).

NEW NATIONAL BANK.

It Will Be Opened at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street.

Plans are under discussion for the organization of a new National bank, to be opened in the Madieon Square section. Those who spoke for the organizers of the bank yesterday were unwilling at this time to give the details of their plan, or to state the capitalization of the new bank. It was learned, however, that an option has been taken on quartere for the proposed bank in the New Brunswick Building, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street.

According to statements circulated yesterday this institution will not be established in alliance with any exieting institution, but will be specially devoted to the interests of the business men in the section of the city where the bank will be located. A number of these business men, it wae said, had consented to take part in the organization of the bank.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—Unusual activity was displayed at the local Stock Exchange today, especially in the public utility stocks, all of which advanced sharply. The Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit met and made the expected call of $5 a share, but it had been discounted, and the stock, under buying by inside interests, rose over a point. Philadelphia Electric was also persistently purchased up to 9, while United Gas Improvement advanced to 93 and closed near the top. Union Traction wae a trifle easier, but Bell Telephons, Cambria Steel, Electric Company of America, Elsctric Storage Battery, Lake Superior Corporation, Lehigh Valley, and Lehigh Navigation Trust Certificates were all higher. The buying was regarded as of a good character. Total sales, 70,148 shares.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 4.—Balaklala was easily the feature of the local market to-day. Its admission to the floor of the regular Exchange was accompanied by large orders to buy at the market, nsnrly every commission house in the city being represented in the crowd. The stock opened at 11⅝, and recorded almost a point gain inside of three minutes on transactions of very nearly 3,000 shares. Osceola, Old Dominion, and Centennial advanced about 2 points, while the balance of the list was active and fractionally higher. The close was quiet but steady at the advance.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

When the Inter-State Commerce Commission met in this city something more than a month ago to inquire into the Union Pacific's affairs Wall Street was on tiptoe to learn developments from moment to moment. The hearing was resumed in Washington yesterday, its session being largely in the nature of a summing up, and Wall Street paid no attention to it whatever. The whole affair is rapidly taking its place, in the Wall Street mind at least, among the category of "dead issues." This same attitude was displayed toward the Northern Securities litigation, and there the final awakening was abrupt.

It has always been a favorite saying in the Street that when the bond market turned after a slump things were "on the mend." The bond market has turned very decidedly in the last few days, although whether this is a permanent movement is still an open question. The rebound from depressed prices has been most noticeable in the convertible issues, which naturally follow the course of the stocks into which they are, at one time or another, exchangeable. Nevertheless, bonds of all kinds have participated in the improvement. Erie convertible 4 per cent. bonds, Series A, advanced yesterday from 80½ to 83, although the general comment in the financial community was that the road was getting its money on somewhat onerous terms.

The passing without comment of the annual meeting of the Southern Pacific stockholders, which was held at Beechmont, Ky., on Wednesday, was in striking contrast with the intense interest which Wall Street took in the annual meeting five years ago, at the time of the efforts of the Keene pool to control the election of the Southern Pacific Directors. All the Southern Pacific Directors were re-elected at Wednesday's meeting, and it is expected that when the board meets to organize for the coming year all the present officers will be re-elected.

One of the reasons assigned for the ease which has developed in call money, as well as for the greater ease in time money, is said to be the fact that a great deal of money which was tied up in time loans on stock collateral was released recently by the closing out of loans, the margins of which had become impaired through the severe declines in the stock market. Yesterday 2½ per cent. was the maximum rate for call money, and the average for the day was 2¼ per cent.

The foreign exchange market showed indications yesterday that many foreign loans are being paid off. Demand sterling rose to $4.8520, a recovery of 150 points from the closing price of last week. With the increasing ease in money here there is profit in paying off loans previously made abroad at 6 per cent. or even higher interest rates, and this movement is believed to have assumed large volume. The statement that owing to the sudden upturn in exchange, the gold engaged early in the week by Lazard Frères had been cancelled was denied at the offices of that firm yesterday. This consignment of gold, amounting to $2,500,000, is to be shipped here by to-day's steamer.

The sharp advance in Northern Pacific-Great Northern joint Burlington bonds, which rose yesterday from 94¼ to 96½, revived interest in the possibility of these bonds being retired in the near future. The fact was pointed out, however, that the earliest date at which the bonds could now be retired, should such a step be decided upon, is Jan. 1, 1908. Under the terms of the bonds they may be retired on any interest date at 105, but it is provided that three months' notice must be given to the holders. The interest dates are July 1 and Jan. 1, and as April 1 is passed, it is now too late to retire the bonds in July. The advisability of calling in these Burlington bonds has been discussed on several occasions by the Great Northern-Northern Pacific interests, and at one time the proposal was advanced almost to the point of an announcement, but was postponed at the last moment. It has not been suggested recently that there is any probability of the bonds being called for retirement at any time in the near future.

The hint of a dividend to be declared on the common stock of the United States Rubber Company was not fulfilled at yesterday's meeting of the Directors. While there has never been any official pronouncement on the question of a distribution on United States Rubber common, gossip to the effect that such action was imminent has several times been fostered in circles which might be presumed to be well informed. Wall Street has learned to take rumors affecting the affairs of the United States Rubber Company with caution. Yesterday's meeting declared the regular quarterly dividends of 2 per cent. on the first preferred stock and of 1½ per cent. on the second preferred. Both dividends are for the quarter beginning Jan. 1, 1907, and will be paid out of the net earnings of the fiscal year ended March 31, 1907. The dividends are payable April 30 to stockholders of record April 15.

While the United Metals Selling Company continues to quote copper unchanged at 25¼ cents for electrolytic and 25½ cents for lake, some of the smaller producers will be obliged to make small reductions as a concession to the recent recessions in the official prices as quoted on the New York Metal Exchange and in The Engineering and Mining Journal. The Granby, Old Dominion, and British Columbia Companies are among the principal producers who market their products on the basis of the published quotations.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 2@2½ per cent., with the last loan at 2½ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 2¼ per cent.

Time money quoted at 4½@4¾ per cent. for sixty days, 5 per cent. for ninety days and four months, and 5¼ per cent. for five and six months.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

After Brisk Opening, Trading on the Curb Slackens to Nominal Volume.

BALAKALA THE FEATURE

Nevada Issue Sags Off Fractionally on Heavy Trading — Coppers Generally Firm, but Sluggish.

After a brisk opening yesterday morning, in which Balakala was the active feature, curb trading fell away to meagre proportions, though prices were well maintained in the slack market which ensued. Balakala opened at 12¾, and in the course of the trading moved up to 13½. It receded to 11¾, however, and after transactions of 6,200 shares closed at 11⅞. The Cole-Ryan and Hedge stocks were firm under trading of small volume. United Copper, Greene-Cananea, and Greene Consolidated closing fractionally higher. Chicago Subway, trading in which fell away to the comparatively small volume of 2,400 shares, closed even with its opening at 19¾, after fluctuating between 19½ and 20½. The industrials were practically at a standstill.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 4.—The market was strong and active from opening to closing today. United Railways income bonds at 55 were up a point. The receipts for deposited stock were ⅝ higher, and Consolidated Cotton Duck preferred and common were ¼ stronger. Local trust companies' securities showed improvement, Mercantile being up 1 point and United States Fidelity 4½ points. Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company advanced 5 points. The market closed strong. Shares, 2,087; bonds, $53,000.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Increasingly Active, Closing Steady at 5 to 8 Points Net Gain.

WEATHER IN COTTON STATES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Federal Weather Bureau's forecast for Friday and Saturday in the cotton States is as follows:

North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia—Rain Friday, except fair on the coast; Saturday probably rain; fresh, variable winds.

Eastern Florida—Fair Friday, except rain in northwest portion; Saturday showers; light, variable winds.

Western Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi—Rain and colder Friday; Saturday showers; fresh southerly winds.

Louisiana—Rain and colder Friday; Saturday fair; fresh to brisk northwesterly winds.

Eastern Texas—Fair Friday, except showers in southern and eastern portions; colder; Saturday fair; fresh southerly winds, becoming northwesterly.

Western Texas, Oklahoma, and Indian Territory—Fair Friday and Saturday; warmer Saturday.

Tennessee—Showers and colder Friday; Saturday fair.

Arkansas—Rain and colder Friday; Saturday fair.

The cotton market was more active, and showed a continuance of the advancing tendency which developed during the late trading of the previous day. The close was steady at a net advance of 5@8 points. Sales were estimated at 160,000 bales.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 2 points, the gains being on the near positions. There was support from the hull leaders on and immediately following the call. There was a slight recession, but the market firmed up again in the early afternoon on reports of a better spot demand and big exports.

Business was more active than since Easter. A falling off in the movement is attracting attention, and bulls believe that if continued it will lead to a modification of commercial crop views.

The range of contract prices in the local markets was as follows:

The local market for spot cotton was steady, with prices 5 points higher, at 11c for middling upland and 11.25c for middling Gulf; sales, 31 bales.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Mobile steady, unchanged, at 10¼c, sales 1,200 bales; Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 11c, sales 344 bales; Augusta steady, unchanged, at 11¼c, sales 500 bales; Galveston firm, unchanged, at 10 13-16c, sales 236 bales; New Orleans firm, 1-16c higher, at 10 9-16c, sales 2,250 bales; Houston steady, 1-16c higher, at 10 13-16c, sales 615 bales.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Notwithstanding strong efforts by certain bull interests to check the declining tendency in wheat yesterday through the use of hug stories from pretty much all parts of the Southwest, the market was unresponsive. An important factor in this decline was the report of good rains in Oklahoma and prospects for a breaking up of the drought in Kansas and Nebraska. Liverpool declined ½ to ⅝d, and there was a break of 1¼c per bushel in April at Budapest. Although flour clearances aggregated 85,000 barrels, liberal receipts at interior points effectually prevented any aggressive bull action. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red, 81½c, elevator, and 82½c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 88½c, and No. 2 hard, Winter, 86¾c, free on board, afloat, opening navigation.

CORN.—The market developed a weaker tone through heaviness in wheat, fairly large receipts at Chicago and the West, and easier cables. Occasional slight rallies took place, but at the close prices were within ⅛c of lowest. The only cash trade that could be confirmed was a sale of 5 loads at outports. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted 56c, elevator, and 52c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 54½c, and No. 2 yellow, 52c, free on board, afloat.

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

Developments of Yesterday in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, April 4.—The supplies of money were plentiful in the market today and the demand was quiet. Discounts were easier, in view of the superabundance of cash and the prospect that the supplies would be further increased by the distribution of Government dividends to-morrow.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was dull in the forenoon, owing to the unfavorable news from the Continental Bourses. Later there was an improvement on better Paris support, but the transactions were restricted, with the exception of Canadian Pacific and copper shares, which were active. Rio Tinto advanced from 83½ to 86½ on bear covering. The tone at the close was cheerful.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 closed at 103¾.

Americans displayed irregularity. After a firm opening they drooped on account of lack of support, subsequently recovered, further improved on the receipt of support from New York, and closed firm. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé was favorably affected by the increased dividend.

The Indian Secretary to-day bought £150,000 in gold in the market, due here April 15.

Bullion amounting to £25,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day, and £25,000 was withdrawn for shipment to South America.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 10.65; Lisbon, 2.75.

Bar gold, 77s 9½d. American eagles, 76s 5½d.

Bar silver steady at 30 1-16d per ounce.

Money, 3½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 4⅛@4¼ per cent.; for three months' bills, 4⅛@4¼ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes:

Total reserve decreased	£326,000
Circulation decreased	329,000
Bullion decreased	655,529
Other securities decreased	1,124,000
Other deposits increased	1,004,000
Note reserve decreased	828,000
Public deposits decreased	2,421,000
Government securities decreased	2,000

The proportion of the Bank's reserve to liability this week is 41.42 per cent., as compared with 40.95 per cent. last week.

Rate of discount unchanged at 5 per cent.

PARIS, April 4.—Prices on the Bourse were unsteady at the opening to-day, but became firmer, owing to the satisfactory settlement and the fact that there was no change in the bank rate.

Russian imperial 4s closed at 75.90 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 489.

SAYS ALTON DEAL WAS OPEN AND FAIR

Cravath, Representing Harriman, Tells the Commerce Commission So.

EVERYBODY KNOWS OF IT

Thinks Stock Watering Has Been Helpful—Favors Federal Supervision of Security Issues.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The country has been unjust to E. H. Harriman, according to Paul Cravath, Mr. Harriman's attorney. He assured the Inter-State Commerce Commission of this injustice to-day, when the hearing into the combination of the Union and Southern Pacific Roads was resumed at its offices. Mr. Cravath appeared to explain the Alton deal, and he was supported by John G. Milburn and Judge R. S. Lovatt of the Harriman counsel.

Mr. Cravath assured the commission that the whole Alton transaction was entirely legal and proper. It was exactly such a transaction as had been carried through in scores of other cases without exciting any comment or criticism whatever. He pointed out from his brief the details of the Alton deal, step by step, and explained the profits that had accrued to each member of the syndicate. The only trouble was that since the deal had been made public opinion regarding such transactions had undergone a considerable alteration, and the moral aspect of such phases of high finance now received more attention than heretofore.

Then Mr. Cravath surprised the commission and those who were in the room by assuring them that what was everywhere been regarded as a discovery by the commission, in its hearings at New York, of the character of the Alton deal, was in fact nothing new. Everybody, according to Mr. Cravath, knew all about that deal when it was consummated.

"All of the transactions were carried through in the most public manner," declared Mr. Cravath. "Every important fact brought out at the recent investigation had been made public through reports to stockholders, listing applications to the New York Stock Exchange, and other publications."

There had been much misrepresentation and public misconception about the Alton deal, he continued. It was not put through by Messrs. Gould, Schiff, Stillman, and Harriman alone. There were at least a hundred other members of the syndicate to help extend the publicity. Not a man was frozen out, and not a man was the victim of discrimination.

Mr. Cravath concluded with these conclusions regarding the various proceedings in the Alton recapitalization:

"They were conducted lawfully. They were conducted openly, and all of the essential facts received wide publicity and have at all times been accessible to the stockholders and to investors in Chicago & Alton securities. They were in accordance with the approved methods which were at the time in vogue in recapitalizing other railroad companies and large industrial enterprises. They were conducted for the equal benefit of all stockholders, and there was no discrimination or injustice.

"While the Chicago & Alton transactions may be regarded as typical of a class of financial transactions which have been common in the past and which have generally been regarded as proper, and whatever basis there may now be for objection to such transactions as a class, there is no basis for singling out for special criticism the Chicago & Alton transactions and the gentlemen by whom they were conducted."

Mr. Cravath said that the time had come for much stricter regulation of the issue of stocks and bonds of semi-public corporations.

"The liberal laws that have existed in this regard," said he, "have materially aided in the development and growth of the country. The watering of stock, in my opinion, has been helpful in the past. The time has come, however, in the development of the country, in the balacing of the advantages and evils for a much stricter regulation of the issuance of stocks and bonds."

In the course of his argument Mr Cravath was deflected a little at times by questions and interjections from the Commissioners. They embarrassed him somewhat by exhibiting curiosity as to his personal opinions, which he thought he ought not to give, being there in the capacity of attorney to represent a client. He had dropped a chance remark to the effect that the time was coming, if indeed it had not already arrived, when Federal supervision of the issue of securities would be necessary.

"Suppose you tell us what you think about that," put in Commissioner Lane.

"Well, in a general way, I am in favor of a Federal commission," replied Mr. Cravath. "I opposed one bill because of some of its provisions, but I think there should be a commission which could control the application as well as the amount of new securities."

ALTON'S WATERED STOCK.

Cravath Argues That Reorganizers Were Justified in Issuing It.

Supplementing the statement made by Paul D. Cravath before the Inter-State Commerce Commission yesterday at Washington in behalf of Messrs. Harriman, Gould, Schiff, and Stillman as the managers of the syndicate which reorganized the Chicago & Alton in 1899, documents wiled with the Inter-State Commerce Commission in connection with this matter were made public in this city yesterday. These include an argument in support of the propriety of the Chicago & Alton reorganization filed with the commission by Mr. Cravath and an extensive report on the subject of the reorganization prepared by J. H. McClement, a railroad expert.

In his memorandum in support of the propriety of the reorganization, Mr. Cravath reiterates the many points in explanation of the terms of the reorganization which have been made public from time to time in behalf of the reorganization management during and since the sessions of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in this city.

On behalf of the syndicate managers he defends the various steps taken by them, and supplements his own statements by those of various experts, including Mr. McClement, who prepared a comprehensive review of the reorganization of the Chicago & Alton in comparison with other reorganizations. Of the readjustment of the accounts by which $12,444,177 originally charged to operating expenses was transferred to capital account, Mr. Cravath points out that conservative and reputable corporations followed a similar procedure in the issuance of new securities. In support of the admissibility of such a readjustment of accounts, Mr. Cravath submits the written opinion of several firms of certified public accountants.

The $20,000,000 of common stock, which Mr. Cravath says is the only part of the new capitalization of the Chicago & Alton which could be regarded as watered stock, no more than represented, he claims, the future value of the property at the time of the reorganization over and above the amount of its preferred securities. He adds that the framers of the reorganization plan were entirely justified in their judgment that with new management that amount of common stock would, under normal conditions, readily earn a fair dividend.

REFEREES' NOTICES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK County.—IRA O. MILLER, Plaintiff, against EDGAR LOGAN and EMELIE L. LOGAN, his wife; Asher Greenebaum, and Lewis Morris, Defendants.

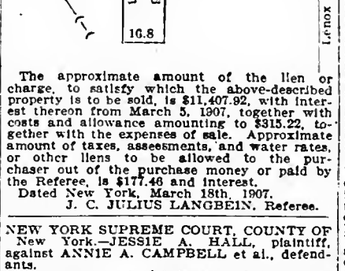
In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 14th day of March, 1907, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Real Estate Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 18th day of April, 1907, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, Auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows: All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City, County, and State of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the southerly line of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, distant three hundred and sixteen feet and eight inches westerly from the corner formed by the intersection of the westerly line of Lenox Avenue with the said southerly line of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street; running thence southwardly, but parallel with the westerly line of Lenox Avenue, to and through a party wall so far as the same extends, ninety-nine feet and eleven inches to the middle line of the block; running thence westwardly, but along the said middle line of the block, sixteen feet eight inches; running thence northwardly, but again parallel with the said westerly line of Lenox Avenue, and to and through another party wall, so far as the same extends, ninety-nine feet eleven inches, to the said southerly line of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, and running thence eastwardly, but along said southerly line of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, sixteen feet eight inches, to the point or place of beginning.

Dated New York, March 18th, 1907.

J. C. JULIUS LANGBEIN, Referee.

IRA O. MILLER, Plaintiff in person, 108 Fulton Street, Manhattan, New York City.

Following is a diagram of the property to be sold, its street number being 132 West 136th Street:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $11,407.92, with interest thereon from March 5, 1907, together with costs and allowance amounting to $315.22, together with the expenses of sale. Approximate amount of taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the Referee, is $177.46 and interest.

Dated New York, March 18th, 1907.

J. C. JULIUS LANGBEIN, Referee.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—JESSIE A. HALL, plaintiff, against ANNIE A. CAMPBELL et al., defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action, bearing date the twenty-first day of March, 1907, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the eighteenth day of April, 1907, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Bryan L. Kennelly, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot of land, with the buildings thereon erected, situated in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, and bounded and containing as follows: Beginning at a point on the southerly side of One Hundred and Third Street distant three hundred feet west of the westerly side of Columbus (formerly Ninth) Avenue; running thence westerly along One Hundred and Third Street twenty-five feet; thence southerly and parallel with Columbus Avenue to the centre line of the block; thence easterly and parallel with One Hundred and Third Street twenty-five feet; and thence northerly and parallel with Columbus Avenue to the place of beginning

BUSINESS TROUBLES

DORA LEVIN.—Judge Hough has appointed Henry Talmadge, 2d, receiver in bankruptcy for Dora Levin, dealer in housefurnishing goods at 1,664 Madison Avenue and 1,353 Fifth Avenue, with a bond of $1,000.

CHURCH CONSTRUCTION COMPANY.—Judge Hough has vacated the appointment of Roy C. Robinson as receiver of the Church Construction Company, builders, of 949 Broadway, made on April 1, not on the ground of lack of jurisdiction, but because he has been assured that his intervention of a receiver in bankruptcy takes away all hope of the immediate supply of funds necessary for the resuscitation of the concern, and there being no body of creditors apparently back of the bankruptcy petition who can or will do as much.

SOL BLOOM.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Sol Bloom, a corporation publishing music and dealing in phonographs and records at 3 East Forty-second Street, by these creditors: William H. Penn, $3,000 royalties on songs; Lee Hechheimor, $1,278 money loaned, and Railway Advertising Company, $775 for advertising. It was alleged that the corporation, while insolvent, transferred part of its property to the Jerome H. Remik Company, which obtained judgment on Wednesday in the City Court for $1,009, on which the Sheriff took possession of the place. Judge Hough appointed Eugene N. Robinson receiver, with a bond of $3,000. The liabilities are $20,000 and the assets are estimated at $8,000.

Application for a Receiver.

LOUISVILLE, April 4.—Ex-Congressman Wheeler of Paducah appeared in the Federal court to-day, representing George A. Kellogg of New York, a minority stockholder in the Morgenthaler-Overton Banker Company of Paducah, asking the appointment of a receiver for the plant, and a temporary restraining order to prevent the issuing of $250,000 worth of stock. Judge Evans granted the injunction and took under advisement the question of appointing a receiver.

Judgments.

The following judgments were filed yesterday, the first name being that of the debtor:

Adams, Maud—Sophie Cohn, $77.
Arthur, L.—A. R. Parsons et al., $178.

THE NEW BRONX

ORMONDE PARK

BUILDING LOTS,	$95 TO $400 FULL SIZE	$5 Down, $3 Monthly. 10% Discount for All Cash

(Located at City Line of New York City.) Frontage on the famous Merrick Road. Just escaping heavy taxes, but first to benefit by the enormous expenditures of the Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroad.

Third-rail system in operation—proof-positive there will be enormous demand for home sites at Ormonde Park, THE NEW BRONX, where the history of the Old Bronx will be repeated.

Investors need not go to obscure places, remote from the line of improvements. Here is a golden opportunity to purchase property where values will increase by leaps and bounds when the tunnel is finished.

This Company will build for their lot buyers artistic cottages of seven rooms or more. Concrete foundations, with cellars under all, for $2,000 and upward, and will accept small monthly payments as rentals.

Our cottage buyers will be glad to show their superior homes built by this Company.

Lots that were sold in the Bronx a few years ago for $1,000 now sell for $7,000. There is exactly the same opportunity at Ormonde Park, with this difference:—Increased valuations will come ten times as soon, because ten times the effort and money are being spent for your benefit at Ormonde Park.

An Office on Times Square.

Only 7 rooms vacant out of 200 offices in Times Building.

THERE ARE MANY REASONS FOR THIS SHOWING:

The building is the most central and most accessible office building in New York City.

Its tenants are selected with the greatest discrimination. High character and strictly legitimate business only accepted.

It is planned so that every office is an outside room.

It is on an island with 100-foot streets on every side.

No tall buildings near it to obstruct light.

The district has grown amazingly in the last three years.

The Times Square Station now ranks third in the Subway system—exceeded only by Brooklyn Bridge and Grand Central.

Times Square Station ticket sales have gained 100 per cent. in 2¼ years—that is, from 15,000 per day in November, 1904, to 29,429 in February, 1907.

The building is open night and day every day in the year.

Its elevator capacity with respect to rentable area is exceeded by that of only one office building in New York City.

Its ceilings are high.

It is the strongest office building ever erected.

Absolutely fireproof.

Doubly filtered water.

No steam in the building in Summer.

Wire outlets in every room for lights and telephones, telegraph, office boys, and stenographers.

Highest standard of operation for the safety, comfort, convenience, and health of occupants.

The building is a landmark.

More theatres, hotels and clubs located in its proximity than at any other point in the world.

MANY FIREMEN HURT AT FIERCE OIL FIRE

Chief Croker Injured by Flying Bricks and Four Others Buried Under a Wall.

ROOF FALLS IN ON HOSEMEN

All Escape Critical Injury—Malden Lane Paint Firms Lose Heavily by Four-Alarm Blaze.

Policeman McConnell of the Old Slip Station walked along to South Street and Malden Lane at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and, glancing upward discovered a burst of flame from the upper windows of tha old building at 159 Maiden Lane, occupied by the firm of William H. Sheel & Co., a paint and varnish concern. McConnell hurried to Maiden Lane and Front Street and turned in an alarm.

The first two alarms brought ten engines and four or five trucks, and when Chief Croker got there in his auto he turned in a third and a fourth alarm, bringing more apparatus.

The firemen tackled the job at both the front and rear of tha building, and, while tha men of Truck 15 put their ladders up on the Malden Lana side, the craw of Engina 4 started to push a way up tha main stairway of No. 159 through tha smoka to the floors above. Other firemen duplicated this operation in the rear.

All at once two explosions shook the neighborhood, and with a crash tha front of the upper story of Sheel & Co.'s place cama tumbling down into Malden Lana, while the rear wall was dumped into Fletcher Street. It seemed for a moment that the firemen who wera laying pipe in front of ths building and their comrades who had gone up the ladders to smash in windows had been buried. Bricks were flying through the air for a radius of fifty feet in front of tha building, and huge burning timbers crashed down with the tons of other debris frum the upper stories.

Lieut. Andrew Sweet and Truckmen David Murphy, John O'Reagan, and William McNicol, all of truck 15, were on the ladders. They were swept off the wall and covered from the sight in a pile of broken beams and bricks fifteen feet high in front of the building.

A score of other firemen were within range of the shower of debris, and most of them were struck by bricks; but that didn't appear to make any difference. There was a rush for the smoking ruins that covered the sidewalk. Frantic hands pulled away broken timbers and tossed the hot bricks in the search for tha four men who had gone down under the wall. In a moment or two O'Reagan and McNicol, who had escaped almost unscathed from the force of the avalanche, dragged themselves out and staggered across the street. Sweet and Murphy were not so fortunate. Their unconscious bodies were found by the searchers and were pulled forth to be cared for by an ambulance surgeon from the Hudson Street Hospital. Both had severe scalp wounds and lacerations over their bodies, and Murphy's legs were cruelly hurt.

The same shock that shattered the walls of No. 159 fairly raised the roof into the air, and when it settled down again on to the fifth story there was peril for Capt. Quinn of Engine No. 4 and his men, who had started up stairs. The crew, dragging a hose pipe, had reached the second floor when the explosion came. A tremendous back draught spilled them down stairs and into a heap on the floor below, while the walls went pounding into the street and on the men of Truck No. 15.

When things had quieted down somewhat firemen who had not thought anything about being hurt themselves began to discover things. Chief Croker remembered that a brick had struck him on the shoulder. Deputy Chief Guerin, who was the hero of the famous Williamsburg Bridge fire, had a bad cut on the nose whera a block of wood struck him. A dozen firemen were painfully injured. Scalp wounds and bleeding hands were common matters. Sweet and Murphy went to the Hudson Street Hospital and O'Reagan and McNicol were sent to quarters after being treated by the ambulance surgeons.

The fire was under control within half an hour after the explosion, but Chief Croker would not let any of his men go into the building until daylight. The loss to Sheel & Co. was estimated at $50,000, and a heavy damage by water was done in No. 157. The firm of W. H. Brown & Co., at 161 Malden Lane, also a paint estnblishment, suffered considerable damage by water.

Wreck Delays Lackawanna Traffic.

Traffic on the Lackawanna Railroad was badly delayed in the rush hour last night. The trouble began at 4:15, when a work train was derailed between tha west end of the Bergen tunnel and the Hackensack bridge. It was not until 8 o'clock last night that everything was running smoothly. Some of the trains were as much as an hour late in getting away from Hobokcn.

W. R. H. Martin Ill of Indigestion.

W. R. H. Martin of Rogers, Peet & Co., founder of the Trowmart Inn, the hotel for business women, has been confined to bed at his home, 114 East Thirty-sixth Street, for the last week, with an attack of indigestion. He is recovering and will probably be out again within a week. His son, who is in England for the hunting season, has been kept informed of his father's condition by cable. He is expected home in a few weeks.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A trough of low pressure stretches from the lake region to Texas, while an area of high pressure and lower temperatura occupies the Dakotas and a fresh disturbance is moving eastward over the northern plateau region.

WAY TO STOP SUBWAY BLOCKS

City Asked to Build Extra Tracks to Obviate Switching at 96th Street.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company submitted to the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday a plan for so changing tha track layout of the Subway at Ninety-sixth Street that the causes of the present congestion on that line, fundamentally dua to the switches at that point, would be entirely removed, and the carrying capacity of the road largely increased. The board was able to take no definite action yesterday, as it was proposed that the city should pay the cost of the improvement.

In brief, the plan submitted contemplates the building of three additional tracks between Ninety-sixth Street and 103d Street, making the total number of tracks running into the station seven, instead of four, as at present. Two of the new tracks are to ba built on the west sida of the present tunnel, and the other on the east side. The Interborough's engineers believe that this can ba done without interfering to any considerable extent with the running of trains in the meanwhile.

The increased area nacessary to accommodate the new tracks is readily available, as Broadway is very wide at the point indicated. The most westerly track would be used to bring south-bound Broadway locals into the station, the next would bring in Broadway southbound expresses, while the third track would accommodate both the expresses and the locals of the Lenox Avenua division. There would thus be no "cross-over" switches, the present use of which makes it imperative that south-bound Broadway expresses shall be held up until the preceding Lenox local crosses the switches into the station.

Practically the same plan would be put into operation on the easterly track. The Lenox locals would run on the new track, the Broadway expresses and locals on what is now the local track north of the station, and tha Lenox Avenua expresses would use what is now tha express track. The crossing of trains of one division before the trains of the other division would thus be entirely avoided.

In a letter to the board, read at yesterday's meeting, E. P. Bryan of the Interborough estimated the cost of tha proposed improvement at $850,000, and suggested that it be paid for by the city as "an extra in connection with tha original contract."

"That's another million dollars," said Mr. Metz. "And it will hava to come out of tha debt limit at that."

"Yes," said tha Mayor sorrowfully.

"I guess it will have to wait," said Mr. Metz.

At this point Georgs L. Rives, the counsel, suggested that it might be that the board would have to apply to the Appellata Division of the Supreme Court for permission to authorize tha improvement. He did not know whether the consents gained from property holders for the original construction work would cover the improvement. At his suggestion the matter was referred to him for an opinion. Engineer Rice has already sant in a report favoring the adoption of the plan, as it would end the trouble in what ha calls "the neck of the bottle."

It has geen generally agreed for some time that tha switches at Ninety-sixth Street were entirely responsible for the blockading in rush hours, which often extend north to 110th Street and south to Fourteenth.

DENOUNCE TRANSIT BOARD.

East Side Improvement Club Charges "Subserviency to Corporations."

The Citizens' East Side Improvement Association held a meeting last night at 641 Lexington Avenue, at which the Rapid Transit Commission was roundly denounced for the form of contract drawn up for the proposed Lexington Avenue Subway, and resolutions condemning the commission as "inimical to the interests of the east side people, subservient to the railroad corporations, and grossly incompetent" were passed.

The association took exception to the failure to insert an indemnity clause in the contract, and to the inclusion of the "link" section of the route, which will enable the Interborough to build only the upper portion of the road.

Court proceedings were threatened in the resolutions if thesa two alleged defects were not remedied.

TEST THE WOODLAWN CURVE.

Train Made Up Like Wrecked One Sent Over the Central Tracks.

The run of tha White Plains Express on the evening of Feb. 16, which terminated at the Woodlawn Avenue curve when the train left the track and twenty-three persons were killed, was repeated yesterday, but without accident. The New York Central had as its guests on a special train made up exactly like the express, except for tha number of passengers, Job E. Hedges, whom Gov. Hughes appointed to investigate the wreck; Charles Barnes, electrical expert of the State Railroad Commission, and about twenty reporters. Many officials and experts of the road were on the train, too.

Two trips were made over the track. On the first, the motorman who ran the express on tha night of the wreck stood by tha man at the throttle and instructed him to set tha lever just as ha had set it on the fatal trip. That produced, so the officials who made calculations said, a speed of forty-nine miles an hour around the curve.

Before tha second run was started representatives of the road told their guests that the electric locomotive would be driven over the route as fast as it could go. Then everybody on the train climbed into the locomotives, deeming them the safest place, and the run was begun. At starting Electrician Barnes, in the first locomotive, smilingly said to W. C. Brown, Senior Vice President of the road:

"Mr. Brown, I have never had the pleasure of meeting you, though, of course, I have heard much about you. I want to shake hands now, because we may not be able to do so at the end of the trip."

The run was begun at high speed, and when it had increased to sixty-six miles an hour and the fatal curve loomed ahead the persons in the locomotiva cabs, except possibly the railroad officials, graw nervous. But just befort the curva was reached the motorman closed the controller and let the engine drift or coast around the curva. He said that the speed then was about 56.8 miles an hour.

ADLER ON CIVIC VIRTUE.

Schools Must Train the Young to New Ideals, He Declares.

Felix Adler told how to train the young to becoma efficient citizens last night in an address before the Ethical Cultura School, held in the gymnasium of the school, Sixty-third Street and Central Park West.

"I do not know when I felt so bitter and despondent," he said, "as when I read the statement accredited to Mr. Harriman that 50,000 votes had been turned by spending $250,000. How can we maka progress against this worthless margin of tha Republic? Then I considered and said that I had no right to expect that we would not hava this element. Human natura has not changed, and the masses have not risen to a great height. We must counteract this by building up a naw nucleus of righteousness, and that must be the task of our schools."

DR. BUTLER HOME AGAIN.

Thinks Heney Will Convict 'Frisco Grafters—City's Reconstruction.

President Nicholas Murray Butler returned to Columbia University yesterday from his honeymoon trip to San Francisco and the Pacific Coast.

Respecting present conditions at San Francisco, he said:

"Whole sections of tha city, especially to the north and to the south, have been completely or almost completely rebuilt. Tha morc fashionable and expensive residence sections were of coursa practically untouched by the fira. The business sections are rapidly rabuilding, although as yet nearly every important business house in San Francisco is in a temporary habitation.

"Tha whole interests of the city are concentrated on the prosecution of the Mayor, Supervisors, and Boss Ruef by the District Attornay's office. Special Prosecutor F. J. Henay is confident he will send to the penitentiary the officials who have been bribed and also those who have bribed them. San Francisco is not only undergoing a physical but a moral cleaning."

ELLISON DEPOSES ONE OF HIS AIDES

Begins a Shake-Up by Transferring the Head of the Bureau of Arrears.

MAY APPEAL TO JEROME

Expects to Find Many Bogus Affidavits Involving Lawyers and Prominent Citizens.

Corporation Counsel Ellison began yesterday, with an office "shake-up," an investigation which may bring forth sensational results and drag in tha names of many lawyers and some prominent persons whose arrears of personal assessments have been, it is believed, remitted without their knowing anything about it. The investigation resulted from the suspension of L. Frederick Mount, a chief clerk, whose books were found to be irregular and who since has disappeared.

Without the slightest warning, Mr. Ellison and his assistant, Frank B. Pierce, walked into the office of the Bureau for the Collection of Arrears of Personal Assessments yesterday afternoon and summarily deposed James O. Keenan, the head of the bureau, who is also an Assistant Corporation Counsel. Mr. Keenan was told to report to Mr. Ellison's office to be assigned to other work, and Mr. Pierce was put in as head of the bureau temporarily.

Having removed Mr. Keenan, Mr. Ellison began a general "shake-up," which, in the course of the next few days, will affect ten clerks, six stenographers, six typewriter copyists, and two process servers. It is a foregone conclusion that most of theso employes will be removed to other departments, and an entire naw offica staff assigned to the work of the bureau.

As soon as he had been told to report for work outside of the hureau, Mr. Keenan, according to Mr. Ellison, asked for a vacation. The Corporation Counsel replied:

"All right, Mr. Keenan, you may have a vacation, but there is one thing I want to impress on you before you go. For every remission in taxes made through your office I shall expect to find a properly filled-out affidavit from the person whose taxes were remitted. I presuma that such affidavits are on file now, but if you have any doubt of that, or if any of your friends may hava been a little careless, I advise you to sea that tho error is rectified before you go away."

In explanaion of his action in removing Mr. Keenan Mr. Ellison said:

"I don't accusa any one, but I expect to find many bogus affidavits, and I shall not be surprised if many prominent citizens will be astounded to learn that affidavits have been filed in their names without their knuwing anything about it. In all such cases I shall turn the matter over to the District Attorney's office.

"I have ascertained that the practice of lawyers preparing affidavits for tha remission of taxation has become alarmingly prevalent. The scheme is for tha lawyer to go to some one whose personal taxes are in arrears and to tell him to wait until the matter has passed through tha Marshal's handa and got into tha Arrears Bureau. At that staga they offer to gat the taxes ramitted for a comparatively small sum.

"I have ordered an investigation of avery affidavit on file, and where I find there is any irregularity I shall summon the man who is supposed to have made the affidavit. If he declares that he has not signed such a document I shall send the whole case to the District Attorney.

"With regard to the casa of Mr. Mount, who was suspended some weaks ago, I have applied to the courts for the right to notify him, either by mail or by publication, that his position is vacant. The law requires that a civil service employa may not be removed except after a trial, but Mount can't be found."

It is said authoritatively that the office of Marshal may be practically done away with by a new plan of collecting taxes that Mr. Ellison has in mind. The incumbent is Louis Munzinger, ex-State Senator. The plan contemplates the sending to tha taxpayers of a notice, which is not now done. Whera a taxpayer fails to respond he will be summoned to appear before Mr. Ellison personally.

BUTLER MAID SWINDLED.

Man Who Got Her Money by Hard-Luck Story Held in Court.

A well-dressed man, about 27 years old, who gava his nema as Albert Schwartz and his address as 114 West Ninety-ninth Street, but who the police say they know as "R. W. Wilson," was before Magistrate Sweetser in the Yorkville Court yesterday morning, charged by Anna Gassner with having obtained $90 from her fraudulently. Miss Gassner told the Magistrate that she was employed as a maid by Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

Schwartz wns arrested Wednesday night in front of the Butler homa by Detectives Keenan and Dolan after ha came there in response to a decoy letter sent him by Miss Gassner under the instructions of the detectives. In court to-day Miss Gassner said that Schwartz had called on her about two weeks ago, representing himself as tha agent for a photograph enlarging company. He told the young woman, according to her testimony, that ha had lost all his possessions in the San Francisco earthquake and so worked on her sympathies that she gave him $10 to get his tools out of pawn so that ha could obtain employment as an engineer. A few days later she returned, according to Miss Gassner, and said that she was behind nine months in his dues to his union and needed $40 to square them up before he could start to work. He got the $40.

He did not return until Easter Sunday, so the complainant told the Magistrate, and then he exhibited what he said was a contract for employment in New Jersey as an engineer at $200 a month. He needed $40 to enabla him to take the job, so Miss Gassner testified he said, and promised if the maid would let him have that amount he would give her his first month's wages. Again Miss Gassner contributed. The next day she became suspicious, however, and reported tha case at the East Sixty-seventh Street Police Station. Then Detectives Keenan and Dolan were put to work.

The prisoner appeared in court dressed in a new suit and carrying a cane. Ha was represanted by a lawyar, who obtained an adjournmant until next Saturday. Schwartz was locked up in default of $500 bail.

LONG TRIP IN A LIFEBOAT.

Crew of the Wrecked Pandur Were 24 Hours in Reaching Bermuda.

Captain Bangaston, Mate John Jensen, and eight men who comprised the crew of the Swedish bark Pandur landed here yesterday from the steamship Bermudian. Somewhere in the Atlantic southeast of Bermuda their craft, floating on her beam ends, is drifting a helpless derelict. The men wera forced to abandon har on March 28, and after a twenty-four hours' row in their small boat reached Bermuda. All that they saved were tha instruments, the logbook, the clothes in which they stood, and the ship's dog.

Tha Pandur was lumber laden and bound from Appalachicola, Fla., for Apenrade, Germany.

A New Italian Line Starts.

CARUSO NEMESIS ACQUITTED.

Policeman Caine Found Not Guilty of Falsehood in Another Case.

Policeman James J. Caine, who arrested Caruso in the Central Park monkey house, was before Deputy Commissioner Hanson yesterday charged with making a false report to Magistrata Barlow in the Harlam Court on Dec. 29 of last year, when he was a member of Inspactor Sweeney's staff attached to the West 152d Street Station.

He had testified in the Police Court that he had been unable to find Giovanni Liberata, who had been assaulted on Chriatmas Day by a man named Buto, and produced a physician's certificate from Fordham Hospital to the effect that Liberata's injuries wera not so serious that he would have to be confined to his bed. He said he had been unable to find Liberata at the address he gave, I.106 Sharidan Avenue, and Buto, the alleged assailant, was discharged.

Then a lawyer, who said he represented friends of Liberata, allegad that tha wounded man was anxious to prosecute and that it would have been easy for Caine to find him. The matter was submitted to the District Attorney's office. Deputy Hanson believed that Caine told the truth and dismissed the charge.

CITY OF TROY BURNS IN HUDSON

The Old River Steamer Lands Her 65 Passengers Just in Time.

AFIRE OFF DOBBS FERRY

Captain the Last to Leave After Bringing Her to Edwin Gould's Pier.

BOAT A WRECK IN AN HOUR

Fire Started in Mid-River at 9 o'Clock —No Panic—Some Passengers Helped Fight the Flames.

With her hold a mass of crackling flames, the big steamer City of Troy of the Citizens' Line, a wooden side-wheeler, 280 feet long, on which were 65 passengers, plowed through the Hudson at full speed last night, her Captain endeavoring to find a pier to which he might tie long enough to land the passengers and crew. The City of Troy was on the Jersey side of the river off Yonkers, going up the river, when the fire was discovered, and it was an hour later before she was finally tied up at the private pier of Edwin Gould at Dobbs Ferry. There every passenger was safely landed. Mate W. S. Eagle was the only one overcome by smoke. He was taken ashore and soon recovered. The vessel, an hour later, was a blackened mass burned to the water's edge.

Some of the passengers who had retired early, were already asleep when shortly after 8 o'clock tiny puffs of smoke creeping up through hatches and companionways were noticed by other passengers and deckhands.

The fire alarm signal was rung through the boat and the crew rushed to their places, while terrified passengers rushed to the decks begging to be told what had happened. Many had been awakened from sleep by the alarm, and these, rushing on deck, added to the excitement. In the meantime the flames had been found in the hold amidships.

It is thought defective insulation on the electric wiring in the pantry started the fire. It gained rapid headway, eating its way fore and aft and licking at the deck above. Several streams of water were quickly turned into the hold and a desperate fight was made to check the flames. Many of the more cool-headed of the passengers joined with the crew in handling hose and carrying water.

Across the River on Fire.

Despite their efforts the flames continued to gain headway. When it was seen that there was no longer hope of saving the boat Capt. Charles H. Bruder turned his vessel's head off the shore and rang for full speed ahead. Straight across the river the boat ploughed, and at the Dobbs Ferry pier an effort was made to tie up.

For some reason the boat could not be made fast, and, despairingly, Capt. Bruder turned toward the pier of the Manila Anchor Brewery. The terror of the passengers was redoubled when it was found that here also the boat would be unable to land. By this time, too, the flames had gained dangerous headway and the passengers crowded on to the upper decks.

When the vessel approached Dobbs Ferry there was to those ashore no sign of fire aboard except a cloud of smoke trailing off to the stern, as she ran shoreward, and her whistles for help did not seem justified to those who saw her approaching.

There was no panic aboard as the boat neared land. All hands were ready to leave as quickly and quietly as might be. Planks were run out to the pier, and everybody got off safely, though it was said none of the baggage was saved. There being only a few passengers, they got off in two minutes.

Some time after she landed the vessel drifted away from the pier, somewhat. She was then ablaze from stem to stern. Capt. Bruder was the last man off, and he left in a rowboat.

When the steamboat was laid alongside the pier the crew had knocked out the forerail and had a gangplank ready to run out. It took but a couple of minutes to get the passengers ashore and on to the tracks of the Central Railroad. The fire broke out all over the vessel, flames breaking forth in a dozen places just as the last of the passengers got ashore.

Running toward the east side of the river, the steamboat had been running with the wind, so that there did not seem to be much draught for the fire, but once she stopped and the wind began to whistle through her the flames seemed to leap out in a dozen places.

The fire swept through the boat within a very few minutes. All effort had to be turned toward saving the brewery and the pier as well as the cottage on the pier. The latter was saved, as was the brewery, but a portion of the pier will have to be rebuilt, even to the pilings as the fire extended to it.

Then Capt. Bruder ran his boat toward Mr. Gould's dock. Here at last he was able to make fast, and with the flames crackling almost at their heels the passengers were tossed and tumbled over the gang planks to the pier.

The Dobbs Ferry Fire Department had turned out as the blazing City of Troy was seen approaching the town, and the men set to work to save the steamer. Their work was hopeless, however, and the flames were already eating into the upper works of the steamer when the word flashed through the crowd that a woman passenger was still asleep in her berth.

Alfred Smith and Robert Wilson of the Fire Department immediately darted down into the burning cabin. Choking

A $6,000,000 CARNEGIE GIFT.

The Present Endowment of the Institute Is Doubled.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 5. — Gifts totaling $6,000,000 were made to Pittsburg to-day by Andrew Carnegie, making $23,600,000 he has given to this his home city. Never has an individual given anything like this amount of money to one community. Four millions of the sum goes to the Carnegie Institute, doubling the present endowment, while $2,000,000 is given to the Carnegie Technical Schools.

It had been reported that Mr. Carnegie would announce a large gift at the dedication of the institute next Thursday, but he sprung a surprise this afternoon by having his benefactions announced at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the institute. It is rumored now that the ironmaster has even a greater surprise in store for the people of Pittsburg when he speaks at the dedication.

The letter to the Trustees in which Mr. Carnegie announces to-day's gifts is as follows:

"To the President and the Members of the Board of Trustees of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, Penn.:

"Gentlemen: There will be sent you $4,000,000 of United States Steel Corporation 5 per cent. bonds, which doubles the present endowment. In addition $1,000,000 cash and $1,000,000 bonds are subject to your call, the former as needed for further extensions to the Technical Schools, the latter when these are opened to scholars.

"The income of $450,000 per annum is to be applied by the Trustees as they deem best to support the Technical Schools, Art Department, Museum, Music Hall, Librarian's Schools, and such other classes and schools as may be established in connection therewith.

"I think the technical schools rank first in practical importance, since they chiefly instruct the sons and daughters of workers in the mills and factories, who labor through the day and seek instruction at night. Their success under Dr. Hammerschlag has been phenomenal, and they should, and no doubt will, receive your unfailing support.

"The art department should not purchase 'old masters,' but confine itself to the acquisition of such modern pictures as are thought likely to become 'old masters' with time. The gallery is for the masses of the people primarily, not for the educated few.

"The Director and teachers of the Technical Schools participate in the pension fund established by me for the advancement of learning, and this should be availed of. Those of the other departments do not. A pension system is therefore to be established for them out of the endowment fund; after the death of the recipient the pension to be continud to the widow in all cases where needed.

"I desire gratefully to acknowledge my unpayable indebtedness to yourself and the Trustees for services which have resulted in such complete triumph. My highest hopes will be realized if the future yields such golden harvest as the past.

"With renewed thanks, gratefully yours, "ANDREW CARNEGIE."

"P. S.—A simple rule would suffice such as some institutes have. Their officials get so much after certain services, or in case of ill health, or in old age.

MOB ATTACKS ARMENIANS.

1,000 Set Upon a Dozen Foreigners—One Boy Mortally Hurt.

In a battle between a crowd of about 500 men and boys and 12 Armenians in Eleventh Avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third Streets, shortly before 6 o'clock last evening, nearly a score of boys were injured by flying missiles and one boy's skull was fractured.

The Armenians were walking down Eleventh Avenue, each with a pack on his back. A crowd of young boys followed, and suddenly one of the boys hurled a stone at the men. Then the other boys began to throw missiles and the foreigners ran. When the crowd increased they turned on their tormentors and the air was soon full of flying missiles.

Soon there was a crowd of more than 1,000 persons in the block, all after the Armenians, and windows in stores and houses were broken. Just before the police arrived Detective Reed, who had called the reserves, saw Leo Mangin, 7 years old, of 627 Eleventh Avenue, lying on the street. He carried him to a drug store, where Dr. Sammis of Roosevelt Hospital found he had a fractured skull and many contusions. At the hospital it was said he would probably die.

SAVED FROM UPSET BOAT.

Police Boat and Tug Rescue Three Men in Peril in the Sound.

Charles Hendrickson, steward of the Stuyvesant Yacht Club on Pelham Bay, was sweeping the waters of the bay and Sound with his marine glasses yesterday afternoon, when he saw an overturned catboat, to whose hull three men were clinging and waving above their heads an American flag. The catboat lay floating bottom up half way between the yacht club and Hart's Island.

A moment later he saw a yawl rowed by half a dozen policemen pull toward the wrecked boat. Before the police boat reached the catboat he saw the tug Annie L. sweep around a bend in the bay, and sighting the small craft, head for it.

In a moment the three men were hauled aboard the tug, and with the catboat made fast by a line to its stern, the tug steamed toward City Island. Hendrickson, too, started for the island and reached the police station as the rescued men were brought in.

The rescued men said they were John Flynn of 124 St. Ann's Avenue, the owner of the boat; Joseph Morris of 994 East 134th Street, and Edward Polk of 617 Willis Avenue, all of the Bronx.

WOMAN TAKES POISON IN CAR.

Rides Downtown Weeping Bitterly—Taken to Hospital and May Recover.

A young woman believed to be Regina Goldner, or Goldschmidt, attempted suicide last night in a Third Avenue surface car while the car was rounding the curve at the Post Office loops by drinking a vial of iodine.

She was taken from the car and carried into Hegeman's drug store in Park Row, where she was attended by Surgeon David of St. Gregory's Hospital, to which she was taken later in an ambulance. The surgeon said she had a chance of recovery.

The woman had ridden downtown from above Sixty-fifth Street, and had her handkerchief over her eyes most of the way, crying bitterly.

After all the other passengers had left the car she took the poison. Conductor Joseph Berstrom knocked the bottle from her hands and it fell to the car floor.

When the woman became conscious she would make no reply to questions. She was held prisoner by the police at the hospital on a charge of attempted suicide

TOLD OF "PLOT" TO FOOL LOEB

Penrose's Friends Declare He Only Wanted to "Josh" the President's Secretary.

SENATOR'S DENIAL VARIES

Says He's Been Out of the Country a Month—Roosevelt Defines His "Conspiracy" Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—A denial from Senator Penrose that he had revealed the plans of the "conspirators" against Roosevelt and Rooseveltism reached here to-day from Philadelphia, but it occasioned no surprise at the White House or elsewhere in Washington.

At the White House it was promptly explained that in the talk there yesterday about the dinner at which the revelation of the intentions of the plotters was made, no mention had been made of the name of Senator Penrose or any other man, nor was any clue given as to the place or time of the dinner. It is pointed out here, however, that the denial of the Senator is based partly on the fact that for the last month he has been out of the country.

It developed to-day that the dinner where the revelation was made took place at the Shoreham Hotel, in this city, before the adjournment of Congress. It was given by Jonathan Bourne, the Senator-elect from Oregon, who is one of the staunchest supporters of the President. Among his guests were Senator Penrose, Senator Hansbrough, Senator Scott, and William Loeb, Jr., Secretary to the President. The fact that Mr. Bourne was the host disposes of the allegation that the dinner was given as a means of getting together the opponents of the President to talk over ways and means for their campaign.

It is a curious commentary on the Penrose denial, however, that some of the Senator's friends here have been explaining to-day that when he talked as he is reported to have talked he was really only having fun with Mr. Loeb. It was all a "josh," just to see how Loeb would take it. Penrose, they say, is and always has been a firm supporter of the President. He announced at this dinner that he was with Mr. Roosevelt if the President would consent to accept another nomination. Pennsylvania would give him all the delegates in the convention. But that was as far as he was willing to go. He would not submit to dictation from the White House as to the nomination of any other man than Roosevelt. And so on at great length, and with increasing emphasis, all for the purpose of having fun with Loeb.

The Only Way.

Certain friends of the President on whom there rests no suspicion of disloyalty, however, have pointed out to-day that this explanation of Penroso'e friends is absolutely the only thing they can say. It is exactly of a piece with the comment of Harriman and others in New York that the conspiracy story is "ridiculous" and "absurd." That sort of talk has been made in Washington, also, to-day, and it is pointed out that, the opposition having been found out and published by the President, the only means of saving their faces left to them is to ridicule the accusation against them.

But whether the conspiracy charge and the dinner story are entitled to credence or not, their publication has served the President a three-fold purpose. They have at once diverted attention from the question of veracity between him and Mr. Harriman, and discounted the effect of any similar charges which might have been brought out by others of his opponents. And more than that, they have clearly marked his entry into the campaign for control of the Republican National Convention next year, practically enrolled him under the Taft banner, and lined up the sheep and the goats in the Republican Party with an alignment from which the goats will find it mighty hard to break away. Those "friends" of the President who have been expressing solicitude over his need of rest to recover from the nervous strain of the very hard Winter he has put in, have had cause these last few days for extra fervor in their desire to see him take a vacation.

Foes on the Defensive.

The prime political result of the White House talk of the last two days is that from this time on it will only be necessary for a Republican anywhere to intimate that he might be willing to see some man nominated next year who is not avowedly a worker for the Roosevelt policies, to have him hailed by flocks of the rabid Roosevelt men as a "conspirator" and an enemy of the President. By this one stroke the President has put all his opponents severely on the defensive. Already they are explaining, and with the campaign that he will direct this Summer, he will keep them at it. He has taken off his coat and gone into the fight with a warwhoop that has made his followers perk up all over the country.

It was pointed out at the White House to-day that the President had been misunderstood in the conspiracy charge he made the other day. It was explained that he was not calling a movement to secure the nomination of this or that man at the next convention a "conspiracy," but that what he referred to in using that word was the combination that had been formed to defeat the policies for which he stands. He regards the association of Harriman, Rogers, the Standard Oil men generally, and other railroad capitalists to prevent the legislation to which he is committed at the next session of Congress, as nothing short of a conspiracy. It was in that connection that he linked the names of Harriman and Hearst, whose widely divergent political connections, on the surface, he believes to justify the use of the term conspiracy to describe the alliance which he charges that to be in for the defeat of his policies.

The Call to Taft.

This fight for the Roosevelt policies adds a powerful incentive to Secretary Taft to get into the fight on his own behalf. It is well known to friends and observers of the War Secretary that he has approached the campaign for the Presidency with reluctance. He has never been able to get up any enthusiasm for a fight on his own account, and his natural dislike for the rough and tumble of a

NEVIN TO WED DIVORCEE.

Composer, One of Pittsburg's Righteous 28, Will Marry Mrs. Dean To-day.

PITTSBURG, Penn., April 5.—Following on the heels of the Chamber of Commerce's banquet of the righteous last night, when a book containing pictures and biographies of twenty-eight "Distinguished Sons of Pittsburg"—twenty-seven white men and one negro—was made public, comes the announcement to-night that Arthur Nevin, one of the "Distinguished Sons," to-morrow morning in New York will marry Mrs. Mazy Lynham Dean, who recently obtained a divorce from Dr. Davis A. Dean of this city.

Mrs. Dean obtained her decree on June 30 last. The hearing was before a master, and it was thought best by both sides to have the evidence suppressed entirely. Within the last few days Thomas M. Marshall, who was counsel in the divorce case for Mrs. Dean, went into the county courts and obtained permission to take all the papers from the court-house. Mr. Marshall to-night said that he had the papers in his safe, and that he intended to keep them there.

The wedding is to be held in the Marble Collegiate Church, New York, at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, the Rev. David Burrell officiating.

Mrs. Dean, who since her divorce has made her home in Washington, D. C., is understood to be at the Grenoble Hotel in New York now. Twelve years ago she came to Pittsburg as governess in the family of Thomas Marshall. Dr. Dean, who is a relative of the Marshall family, saw here there and won the hand of the pretty governess. They lived in Sewickley, a fashionable suburb, and had two children.

Nevin, who was a rising young composer, also lived at Sewickley, and was a frequent visitor at the home of the Deans. He had been a schoolmate of Dean. The doctor, when seen this evening, said he hoped the couple would be happy. He said Mrs. Dean had frequently told him that the artistic temperament of Mr. Nevin appealed to her much.

"I licked Nevin once, and I'm glad of it," added Dr. Dean.

At the Grenoble Hotel last night it was said that Mrs. Dean was stopping there, but that she had gone out to a theatre, after leaving word that if any one called she could not be seen. It was also said that Mr. Nevin, who is registered at the Grenoble, had gone out with Mrs. Dean.

WOMAN ROBBED AND BEATEN.

Mrs. Helen Smith Struck Down in 6th Av. by Youth Who Is Caught.

Mrs. Helen Smith, a young married woman, who lives at 112 East Twenty-seventh Street, was attacked, beaten, and robbed of her chatelaine bag by highwaymen in Sixth Avenue at Forty-fifth Street shortly after 8 o'clock last night.

Third Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson was one block away, and was attracted by the screams of Mrs. Smith and her friend, Miss Grace Hoyt of 110 East Twenty-seventh Street. He got to the place in time to direct Roundsman Greber of the East Fifty-first Street Station in which direction to go to catch the robber. A youth of 17, who said he was Alffio Finnochioro of 114 Mulberry Street, a member of the so-called "Paul Kelly" gang, was arrested. He had Mrs. Smith's pocketbook in his possession.

According to Mrs. Smith, she and Miss Hoyt, were walking south in Sixth Avenue. At Forty-fifth Street a young Italian snatched at her chatelaine bag. Miss Hoyt saw the move and called to Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Smith resisted. Miss Hoyt screamed. The robber struck Mrs. Smith full in the face and the blow felled her on the sidewalk. As the woman fell her assailant, in trying to wrest the bag from Mrs. Smith, tore it into shreds, scattering some of the contents about the sidewalk. Still holding the bag, the Italian darted away.

Greber captured the thief 100 feet north of Forty-fifth Street and marched him back to where Mrs. Smith and Miss Hoyt were. Mrs. Smith identified the prisoner.

Nineteen dollars in money was recovered from him. The two women promised to be in the Yorkville Court this morning.

CLEVELAND'S 5-CENT FARES.

Street Railway Restores the Old Rate —Fight to Start Again.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 5.—Negotiations looking to a settlement of the traction question in this city were terminated to-day by the Cleveland Electric Railway Company announcing that it declined to accept the proposition to turn over its property to a holding company on the basis of $60 per share. It was also declared that the company would refuse to consider any further proposition from the so-called holding company on any basis. Following closely upon this announcement, the company withdrew the sale of tickets at the rate of seven for 25 cents and resumed the old rate of eleven tickets for 50 cents, with 5 cents as cash fare.

It is said that the street railway fight between the Cleveland Electric Railway Company and the city administration will be resumed at once, and it is believed that some sensational developments will follow within the next few days.

LEASES HOUSE TO MR. AND MRS. COREY

Mrs. J. E. Martin of Fifth Avenue Wouldn't Have Steel Trust Head as a Bachelor.

HER STIPULATION ACCEPTED

Tenancy to Begin on Aug. 1, So Marriage to Mabelle Gilman Is Looked For Soon.

It became almost certain yesterday that William Ellis Corey, President of the United States Steel Trust, will marry again before many months are over.

An agent acting for Mr. Corey has leased for a year the home of Mrs. James E. Martin, at 803 Fifth Avenue. Before Mrs. Martin would grant the lease to the head of the Steel Corporation, however, she demanded that it be made out for the occupancy of "Mr. and Mrs. Corey," and the demand was complied with. Mrs. Martin declined to lease the house to Mr. Corey for his sole occupancy under any circumstances, and the fact that Mr. Corey's agent willingly met this restriction is taken as a sure indication that Mr Corey will take another wife before taking possession of the Martin house.

The lease of the Martin house begins next August. Mr. Corey will take it furnished for a year.

When it became known that Mrs. Martin intended to give up the house for a year she received an offer from a real estate man and accepted it. Later, when she learned that the agent wanted the house for Mr. Corey, she was not entirely pleased and consented to close the lease only on condition that the house be occupied by "Mr. and Mrs. Corey."

Mabelle Gilman, the actress, whose name has been so long coupled with that of Mr. Corey before and after his divorce from his wife, is in Paris still at her vocal studies. Mr. Corey went abroad not many months ago and met her, starting a fresh batch of rumors that he was about to marry the actress. He has not replied to any of these.

Soon after his wife divorced him there was general critical comment through the country upon Mr. Corey's conduct toward the woman he had had as a wife since the days when he was neither rich nor well known. The name of Miss Gilman was constantly repeated in connection with the divorce proceedings.

So much notoriety of an unpleasant nature was given to the head of the Steel Trust and his domestic affairs that Mrs. Martin, whose house he desired, decided that her home should not be brought in touch with any further matters which might bring Mr. Corey's name into the newspapers if she could help it.

The house is a five-story one. It stands in the middle of the block between Sixty-first and Sixty-second Streets. It is a modern mansion in every particular, standing just north of the handsome mansion of Elbridge T. Gerry.

Mr. Corey is staying at Sherry's, but he was reported "not in" last night when a TIMES reporter sought to obtain the probable date of his marriage.

THIEF AT DOS PASSOS HOME.

An alleged sneak thief was arrested late yesterday afternoon after an exciting chase in Fifth Avenue. He was found in the home of John R. Dos Passos, the lawyer, who lives at 18 East Fifty-sixth Street.

The women members of the family were in the upper part of the house yesterday afternoon soon before 5 o'clock, when Enjiro Jalifito, a Japanese servant, took two French poodle dogs belonging to the family out for an airing. In passing out of the basement door the Jap did not close the iron door, as he said he had not intended going far from the house. One of the dogs ran toward Madison Avenue and the servant followed. A negro, who walked east through Fifty-sixth Street, saw the Japanese leave the house, and entered by the door he left open.

In about ten minutes the Japanese returned and found the negro rummaging through the drawers of a sideboard. Regardless of their difference in height Enjiro seized the negro, and they rolled about on the floor of the dining room. The negro finally got away, and with Annie Carroll, a maid, and the Japanese in pursuit, broke through the lower door and ran toward Madison Avenue, with the Japanese and young woman servant after him.

Detective Conroy of the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, who heard the cries for help and saw the negro, went in pursuit. He finally overtook the negro and arrested him. At the station the prisoner said he was Benjamin Gillig and had no home. The police said his picture was in the Rogues' Gallery. On the negro the police found a pocketbook belonging to Annie Carroll, which contained $1 in money and a string of beads.

TRAINMEN'S NEXT MOVE.

To Demand Concessions from Eastern Roads Next Fall.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 5.—The next big movement for higher wages on the part of the Railroad Brotherhood will be directed against the Eastern systems, and the leaders of 150,000 employes are preparing to take joint action.

Actual demands probably will not be made until late in the year. The formation of a joint board was completed last week in Buffalo.

Leaders of the unions believe their wage demands will not be strenuously opposed in the East, because of the action of the Western roads in granting them a substantial advance in pay.

Many of the trainmen left to-night for their homes to report to their local lodges regarding the success of their efforts. Chief Morrisey of the Trainmen's organization said that general satisfaction was felt by his men over the concessions obtained from the roads.

"I have been doing a little estimating," he said, "and I believe the average advance in wages we secured will be more than 11 per cent. Some classes of employes will get as high as 18 per cent. These are the conductors on work trains."

The conference with the firemen, which temporarily was suspended pending the outcome of the other negotiations, will be resumed next week.

BIGGEST WARSHIP FOR JAPAN.

A 21,000-Ton Vessel to be Built for Her in England.

LONDON, April 5.—It is reported here that the largest battleship in the world, to have a displacement of 21,000 tons, is to be built in England for the Japanese Government, and that a commission already is on its way here from Japan for the purpose of placing the contract with one or another of the great British shipbuilders.

It has been believed that Japan would in the future build all her own warships, but it is now thought that a vessel of this size would be too great an undertaking for her, and it is known that the Japanese Admiralty has a full programme for its home yards.

The cost of this new battleship will be about $11,250,000.

ODELL IN TOWN TO-DAY.

Coming, It's Said, to Fight for Control of Party Machinery Here.

Ex-Gov. Odell will come to town to-day and is expected to have something to say regarding the Harriman-Roosevelt controversy, in which his name was mentioned. Mr. Odell, it is believed, will take the initial steps in the next few days in an organized fight to recapture the machinery of the Republican organization in the city at the next primaries. His hand has been strengthened to some degree by the decision of the Court of Appeals on the reapportionment.

TRAIN ROBBERY UP-STATE.

Three Men Hold Up a Freight Train and Then Make Their Escape.

BUFFALO, April 5.—Three train robbers held up an east-bound West Shore freight train a short distance east of Clarence, N. Y., last night, and while two of them covered the conductor and engineer with revolvers, the third man broke open a car and threw out a number of packages of merchandise. The engineer was ordered to proceed.

At Fairport officials of the company were notified, and detectives were sent to the scene, but so far they have found no trace of the robbers.

BAD STORM AT NAPLES.

Several Vessels Wrecked—The Liguria's Departure Delayed.

NAPLES, April 5.—A severe storm is blowing here and causing serious damage to the shipping. Several vessels have been wrecked. The steamer Liguria has had to postpone her departure for New York.

OPPOSE BERLIN EXPOSITION.

German Ironmasters Say It Would Be Futile and Unprofitable.

ESSEN, Prussia, April 5.—At a general meeting of the German iron and steel manufacturers, held here to-day unanimous objection was voiced against the proposed world's exposition in Berlin in 1913, the twenty-fifth year of Emperor William's reign.

It was declared that the exposition would be futile and unprofitable.

MURDER IN CHINATOWN.

Man Shot Down in Doyers Street Early This Morning.

Just before 1 o'clock this morning a man was murdered in Doyers Street, near the Bowery, by being shot through the heart. The police of the Elizabeth Street Station were unable to identify the murdered man.

The shooting created intense excitement in the district, and hundreds of Chinamen, as well as the police, thought that it was another outbreak of the war between the Chinese societies.

CHANLER AND HIS BOOK.

He'll Supply It, Even If He Has to Employ Balloon or Ox Cart.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, April 5.—So uncompromisingly aggressive is John Armstrong Chanler in his book, "Four Years Behind the Bars of Bloomingdale, or the Bankruptcy of Law in New York," that the Richmond dealers are afraid to handle it. A lawyer waited on some of them and notified them that the house which put the volume on sale would be liable to an action for libel.

The author was in town to-day and said:

"If the book cannot be obtained I'll send it by mail if I can, and if not by mail, then by express. Should these two mediums fail, then I'll send it either by balloon or ox cart. By nature I am peaceable and good-natured, but I propose to make it hot for some people, and I am not done yet."

PILOT DEAD AT THE WHEEL.

Captain Saves Passengers by His Prompt Action.

PITTSBURG, April 5.—With a spoke of the pilot wheel in his grasp and a hand extended toward the bell rope, Pilot George W. Conant was found dead in the pilot house of the packet Lorena, near East Liverpool, Ohio, early to-day. The packet, filled with sleeping passengers, wandered hither and thither through the dense fog, and was running at high speed into a rock studded pool when Capt. John Richardson stopped the craft from running to destruction.

The packet started from Zanesville to Pittsburg yesterday. Last night the fog became so dense that Capt. Richardson stationed himself in the bow of the boat. In a few minutes he noticed the boat taking an unusually dangerous course. Believing that Conant had become confused by the fog he started for the pilot house. Opening the door, he found the body of the pilot.

FISH IN LAKE POISONED.

Thousands in Cedar Lake Killed by a Supposedly Revengeful Poacher.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., April 5.—The fish in Cedar Lake, near here, have been poisoned by some miscreant, it is believed, and thousands of them are floating on the water. The lake is owned by the Cedar Lake Club, a corporation recently formed, the members of which have lots fronting on the lake.

The club had the lake cleaned out and restocked with fish. It is thought that some one who has been in the habit of fishing in the lake has poisoned the fish out of spite because the club intended to confine the fishing to the club members and their friends. The poisoned fish are almost all black bass, with some perch and trout. Men were at work all day, gathering the fish and burying them.

UNIQUE PARTY CARNEGIE HOST

Brings Workmen and Employers Together for Talk on Industrial Peace.

NOTABLE LIST OF GUESTS

Leaders of National Civic Federation Meet Men Who Have Directed Strikes.

BELMONT GIVES WARNING

Time to Prepare for the Reaction from High Tide of Prosperity—Many Other Speakers.

Rough-handed men in sack suits, who had doffed their overalls only a few hours before, chatted with capitalists, manufacturers, bankers, merchants, and publicists, who wore evening dress, in the spacious, richly decorated rooms of Andrew Carnegie's residence, at Fifth Avenue and Ninety-first Street, last night. Later in the evening, when they had gathered in the big main room, all heard from August Belmont, President of the National Civic Federation, the organization that brought about the unusual conference, that a reaction from the high tide of prosperity is coming, and that it behooves both the employer and the employe to prepare for it.

It was a "peace evening," and Mr. Carnegie said that it gave him and Mrs. Carnegie the greatest joy they had known in many years, and that when he "grew old" he would recall it fondly. When he rose to greet the guests he saw before him an audience such as never had been assembled before. In the front rows of chairs were the "cone of toil," more than 100 of them.

Behind them, and sitting on the steps in the broad staircase, were such well-known men of the business world as Charles M. Schwab, Jacob H. Schiff, Isaac N. Seligman, John D. Crimmins, John Wanamaker, Leslie M. Shaw, ex-Secretary of the Treasury; Nathan Straus, Adolph Lewisohn; such prominent editors and publishers as Dr. Albert Shew, George Haven Putnam, Hamilton Holt, A. K. Fiske, St. Clair McKelway, Donald Scott, Lyman Abbott, and William B. Howland; manufacturers who control the largest industrial plants in the East, a score or more of college Presidents and professors, and a number of representatives of the clergy.

Almost in front of the host sat William E. Weihe, whose large body had loomed conspicuously when, earlier in the evening, he had moved among the other guests. Weihe led the employes in the great strike of 1892 which was made memorable by the Homestead riots. Many a time, he told those who inquired about his associations with the "Iron Master," did he confer with Mr. Carnegie about labor troubles, and always, he added, Mr. Carnegie had been fair and just. Mr. Carnegie had greeted Weihe most cordially when he approached him at the receiving hour. He shook the veteran labor leader's hand energetically and with evident delight presented him to Mrs. Carnegie.

All Presented to Mr. Carnegie.

Every one who attended the conference, bricklayers, iron molders, printers, stonecutters, musicians, actors, pilots, bartenders, engineers, lithographers, metal polishers, pavers, gold beaters, butcher workmen, poster artists, bookbinders, engravers, cigar packers, house shorers, hod hoisters, steam fitters, upholsterers, wood carvers, dock builders, caisson workers, brewery workers, cement masons, tile layers, mine workers, teamsters, stereotypers, clothing cutters, and the rest of the union men, were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie.

To some of them Mr. Carnegie said more than the usual greeting, but those so favored, apparently embarrassed, withdrew quickly, preferring to walk through the rooms, examining the rich decorations, or standing aloof and discussing with their friends the unusual scene to which they had been admitted.

When chairs had been placed in the main room and the guests had been seated Mr. Carnegie, at the request of a photographer, climbed on a sofa in the corner, where he would be conspicuous in the picture that was to be taken. He remarked that he felt lonesome there alone, and asked that Mr. Belmont stand with him. The flashlight being taken, Mr. Carnegie called for order, and proceeded to tell the guests how happy he and Mrs. Carnegie were to be hosts to such a gathering.

He discussed arbitration at length and interestingly, referring to the coming Peace Congress that is to be held in this city, and said that it was fitting and proper that America should show to the visiting foreigners who came here to talk about the peace between nations that there was peace within this Nation, especially between the employers and employes. He also told some stories of his dealings with the workingmen when he was in business, and said that perhaps the most pleasing thing for him to recall of all his business experiences was his association with the men who toil. He criticised the employers who did not show proper regard for the rights and a proper appreciation of the merits of their employes, and said that that condition was responsible for more strikes than the matter of wages.

When he had finished, Mr. Carnegie introduced Mr. Belmont, and then climbed down from the sofa. He climbed up on the organ bench, which was near, and sat there, dangling his feet, while the others spoke. At his left sat Archbishop Farley and Mgr. Lavelle, and at his right ex-Mayor Seth Low.

Warning from Mr. Belmont.

"There is no time more important than this for a gathering of this nature," said Mr. Belmont. "It is very easy to remain at peace during prosperous times, but sometimes times change, and I feel greatly impressed that the unparalleled development of our country and its prosperity have been so extraordinary that it is undoubtedly time to call a halt, and it is not wholly undesirable.

"I do not desire to be either a prophet or an alarmist, nor will I discuss the causes which appear to lead to the beginning of a change, but it is unquestioned that we should prepare ourselves through just such gatherings as this to understand and solve the problems with which we are at any time likely to be confronted."

Mr. Belmont then discussed the trade agreement, describing it as one of the most potent factors toward the solution of industrial problems and insuring peace.

Then he presented William A. Coakley, General President of the International Lithograph Apprentices and Press Feeders of the United States and Canada. Mr. Coakley is a comparatively young man, and spoke with great ardor. He told what the trade agreement had done in the United States and Canada, and declared that labor as a whole, "the conservative men who love their country and their home," were absolutely sincerely in favor of the agreement. Also he predicted that before many years the strike and the lockout would be no longer resorted to by workingmen.

Archbishop Farley, asked by Mr. Belmont to speak, said that such a gathering augured well for the future of the country. He emphasized the need of greater consideration by the employer for the employe, and said that one reason why the workingman found it difficult to deal with the great corporations was that the corporations had, not only no soul, but no person in charge with whom the men could deal directly.

The plea of the toiler, he said, was "referred to the board," a most discouraging method to the workmen, and declared that each corporation should appoint some man—"a man with a big heart and a sympathetic nature"—to deal with the men, who should "recognize in them the seme image of God that was stamped upon his own soul." Then, he said, labor difficulties would be ended.

International Treaty on Labor.

President Nicholas Murray Butler spoke of the need of an international agreement in labor matters. Industrial peace, he declared, could not be obtained hy any other methods than those which nre now being used to bring about political and governmental pesce between nations.

"The National Civic Federation," he said, "could, in my judgment, do no greater service to mankind than to urge upon the Government of the United States the making of a formal proposal to other nations of the world to assemble at no distant date in international conference on industrial conditions and industrial peace.

"The same united force which has made such rapid progress in advancing the world's education and science would then be brought into play to advance the world's industrial peace and to improve, not little by little, but more speedily and in large and generous fashion, the conditions which surround manual labor in its activity and the production of wealth."

A paper prepared by Herman Ridder, President of the Newspaper Publishers' Association, with the assistance of John Norris, was read by Mr. Ridder's son, Bernard H. Ridder. In that were discussed the relations of the newspaper publishers with their employes.

"Arbitration," it said, "has secured industrial peace for 200 members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, employing four-fifths of all newspeper labor. In six years there has not been a strike or cessation of work in any of the union composing rooms of our association. There has not been a single disagreement which has not been amicably adjusted. We are glad to report that agreements just signed provide for a continuance of that happy condition for an additional period of five years. Neither employer nor employe has been subjected to the wasting effects of warfare; both sides have been gainers. The publishers are paying higher wages. The unions are treating the publishers with greater respect, greater caution, greater justice. Both sides are pleased. Our principal gain is not in the troubles we have settled, but in those we havo prevented."

The various agreements made by the newspaper employers with their employes were received and the steps of interesting negotiations described. The concluding statement, which was cheered heartily by the laboring men, was:

"We look forward to the day when the unions will realize that all union men should be proficient in their work and of good moral character, in order that publishers may not want other than union men."

Other speakers were Lyman Abbott, editor of The Outlook; T. V. Powderly, and Seth Low. Afterward supper was served in the large dining room.

TWO PEACE CONGRESS DINNERS.

No Dining Room Big Enough to Accommodate the 2,000 Guests.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Arbitration and Peace Congress, held at the City Club yesterday afternoon, it was reported that nearly 2,000 applications had been received for tickets to the dinner which will be held at the Hotel Astor at the close of the conference and attended by many distinguished foreigners and members of the Cabinet, Congressmen, Governors of States, Presidents of universities and colleges, editors of magazines and newspapers, and men prominent in all branches of American life.

New York has no dining room that will seat 2,000 persons; in fact, the largest will not hold more than 1,000. Consequently the dinner committee was authorized to arrange for an additional dinner at some other hotel. The second is to be in every way equal, both in style and importance, to the first. There will be so many eminent men in attendance at the Congress that the necessity of dividing them between the two affairs will not mean any appreciable diminution of interest in either, so a member of the committee said yesterday.

Hamilton Holt, managing editor of The Independent, was appointed Chairman of a committee to arrange for a suitable affair in honor of the editors who attend the Congress. There will be a large number of these from all parts of the United States and from many foreign countries, and the desire of the committee is to give them an opportunity to meet personally all of the distinguished statesmen, jurists, publicists, and professional and business men of whom they often write, but whom many of them, presumably, have never met personally.

W. D. Trueblood of Boston, Secretary of the American Peace Society, was made Chairman of a Committee on Resolutions. John Bassett Moore, Professor of International Law and Diplomacy at Columbia, will be associated with him, and they will choose several other members.

Robert E. Ely was elected Secretary of the Congress, and will have charge of the business management of the meetings, which will be held from April 14 to 17, inclusive, in Carnegie Hall.

Richard Bartholdt, President of the American Group of the Interparliamentary Union, sent out a letter yesterday to the 200 members of the group informing them that Baron d'Estournelles, the eminent French Senator, had extended to them an invitation to visit Paris and tour France as guests of the Baron's parliamentary group. Baron d'Estournelles, with M. Doumer, ex-President of the French Chamber of Deputies, will arrive in New York to-morrow morning. He will be entertained by the members of the Conciliation Committee on Sunday, and on Monday will go to Washington, where he will spend Monday night at the White House as the guest of President Roosevelt. He will deliver two addresses at the Peace Congress here.

20 KILLED IN TORNADO.

Storm Sweeps Parts of Louisiana and Mississippi.

NEW ORLEANS, April 5.—A score of persons were killed to-day by a tornado which swept for 300 miles across portions of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. Parts of four towns were devastated, with damage exceeding $500,000. The wind damaged property, crops, and telegraph wires throughout its course.

The tornado began at Alexandria, La., soon after 1 o'clock this morning, killing four persons there, probably fatally injuring three and seriously hurting fifteen others. Soon after daylight it neared the Mississippi River, killing five persons nt Jackson, La., while at Bayou Sara, La., at least half a dozen others are reported killed. There was one fatal injury at Jackson.

The tornado next appeared at Carson, Miss., where great property damago was done, and disappeared sbout noon near Selma, Ala., where the inhabitants saw whirling clouds rise into tho air as they crossed the river. A negro was reported killed near Selma.

The main portion of Alexandria escaped the worst of the tornado, which cut a path through the northern part of the town, a residence quarter. About a score of homes were demolished, fifty were damaged, and altogether about 100 buildings wrecked, including several business hduees. The Iron Mountain Railroad lost its roundhouse. A freak of the wind drove a small section of a house into an empty passenger coach, wedging these two bodiee almost inextricably together.

At Jackson, La., the insane asylum was wrecked, with a loss of about $200,000. In addition to three female inmates killed, many others were injured. Mrs. Seach Lea's reeldence was blown down, she and her daughter Mary being seriously injured. Two negroes were killed on a nearby plantation, while reports from the surrounding country indicated that there was probably more loss of life among negroes, whose flimsy cabins tumbled on the heads of the occupants.

CARNEGIE CAN'T TELL HIS GUESTS' NAMES

But Distinguished Visitors of Laird of Skibo Are Still Coming from Europe.

SIR ROBERT BALL ARRIVES

Looks Very Like the Original of John Bull—Provost Macbeth Thinks This an Astounding Country.

Andrew Carnegie's guests are still arriving. Nine more came on the White Star Line steamship Baltic, which docked here yesterday, and went to join the sixteen already enjoying the Laird of Skibo's hospitality at the Hotel Belmont.

The newcomers are Sir Robert Ball, LL. D., F. R. S., former astronomer royal, now Lowndan Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge University; Prof. John Rhys, Master of Jesus College, Oxford, and holding the chair of Celtic, here recently as a member of the Mosely commission; Oliver Rhys, Provost and Mrs. Macbeth of the town of Dunfermline, Scotland, the birthplace of Mr. Carnegie; Sir John Ross, Chairman of the Carnegie Dunfermline Trustees, who handle the £500,000 fund given by Mr. Carnegio to the town, and William Robertson, Vice Chairman of the Carnegie Dunfermline Trustees; Mrs. Robertson and Miss Robertson, his wife and daughter.

Sir Robert Ball is a jovial person, who looks as though he might have posed for the original drawing of "John Bull." After the Baltic had docked, he said:

"I am always glad to come over and see my astronomical friends in America, especially as it is in America now that all the greatest discoveries are made in astronomy. The observatories at Harvard, the Yerkes in Chicago, and the Lick in California, have enormously advanced our knowledge of the heavens. Then there is Prof. Newcomb, who in theoretical astronomy, is one of the great leadere of the science."

Provost Macbeth, at the Hotel Belmont last night, said:

Thinks We're a Wonderful People.

"This is my first trip to America, and I must say that it exceeds even my expectstions. You're a wonderful people, and you do things on a scale so gigantic that it makes us folks from across the water open our eyes."

"How did I get my invitation? Why, Mr. Carnegie and I are old friends. My father used to play in the streets of Dunfermline with Mr. Carnegie when both of them were barefooted youngsters. I've frequently been a guest of Mr. Carnegie at Skibo Castle. He had mentioned a number of times that he would like me to come to America as his guest, but it never took definite form until this year.

"How do the old folks who remember Mr. Carnegie when he was a barefooted youngster look upon him now that he has become the Laird of Skibo?" asked THE TIMES reporter.

"Why, they look upon him as one of the wonders of the world," said the Provost, "and they love him dearly. Mr. Carnegie is the most democratic of your American millionaires. He remembers the old townspeople, and he talks to them as though he were stil lone of them."

THE TIMES reporter tried to obtain a complete list of Mr. Carnegie's guests yesterday. First, he went to the Hotel Belmont, which has been deputed by Mr. Carnegie to look after his guests while they are in this city. But the hotel had only a list of those who had already arrived. The reporter sought Hayne Davis, American Secretary of the International Conciliation.

"Who's coming?" said Mr. Davis. "Why, Enron D'Estournelles de Consinut is coming, and William T. Stead is here, and—and—now, why don't you go see Mr. Carnegie's secretary. He'e the man to get hold of."

The reporter tried it, and presently found himself in the ante-chamber of the secretary.

"He says," remarked the footman, returning, "that he's too husy to see you."

Carnegie Doesn't Know Himself.

The first man that the reporter met in the street as he departed was the Laird of Skibo himself.

"Tut, tut," said Mr. Carnegie, laying a hand on the reporter's shoulder. "That's all a mistake. What was it you wanted?"

"A list of your guests," said the reporter.

"List of my guests?" repeated Mr. Carnegie. "Then it's just as well you didn't see my secretary, he couldn't have given it to you: he hasn't got one. Where can you get one? Why, I don't know just where."

"Can't you give me the names, Mr. Carnegie?" asked the reporter.

"Why, no," said the laird. "I haven't got thet information, either."

And then the reporter gave up the job.

THE DEDICATION PROGRAMME.

Official List of Three Days' Doings at New Carnegie Institute.

An extensive programme has been arranged for the three days during which ceremonies of the dedication of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburg, beginning Thursday, April 11, will last. TOLD OF "PLOT" TO FOOL LOEB hard political campaign has made him hesitate to get into this contest. Two things were lacking which would furnish the strongest kind of motives for him. One was a fight directly on himself, and that Senator Foraker has supplied. The other was a draft on his loyalty to the President. Now the President has made that draft. He has set up the crp that there le a fight to defeat his projects of legislation, and that is the strongest call that could be made to Taft. For to Taft, with that cry, the fight ceases to be his own and becomes Roosevelt'e, and his loyalty to the President engages him heart and soul in such a struggle. No ono understands better than the President that side of Taft's character or realized more clearly the result of such an appeal to him.

UNTRUE, SAYS PENROSE.

Not in "Conspiracy" to Beat Roosevelt—Thinks Knox a Good Man.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—Senator Penrose to-day denied the report sent out from Washington last night to the effect that he was party to a conspiracy to defeat either President Roosevelt or any candidate that Mr. Roosevelt might eeek to have nominated for the Presidency; that a $5,000,000 corruption fund had already been raised to carry out this purpose, and, further, that he (Penrose) unwittingly disclosed this scheme at a dinner supposed to have been held recently.

"So far as it concerns me," declared Senator Penrose, "the story is absolutely falso from beginning to end. There is not a single word of truth in it."

Senator Penrose prepared a denial to the Washington story. He said that he would "stand pat" on this denial, which is as follows:

"There is absolutely no truth in the report from Washington, and I have no idea how the dispatches are inspired. I never heard of any such conspiracy, and do not believe one exists. As for my being estranged from the President, I think all my votes in the Senate will show that I have upheld his policies and supported his Administration. Pennsylvania has always done likewise, and there is no break now. Pennsylvania delegates were the first to urge Roosevelt for the Vice Presidency at the Philadelphia Convention and to support him for the Presidency at the Chicago Convention. It will he recalled that they stood firm in the face of obstruction which favored other interests.

"I do not believe there is any such combination as the Washington reports allege—the $5,000,000 conspiracy. And as for my attending any dinner recently, that is out of the question, for I have just returned from a three weeks' cruise on the Dolphin with Secretary Metcalf of the Nevy and Senator Flynn of California. During that time, and I was away practically a month. I did not even see an American newspaper.

PROTEST FROM HAYWOOD.

Says President's Reference Will Injure Him in His Trial for Life.

DENVER, April 5.—A dispatch from Boise, Idaho, contains a statement from William D. Haywood, Secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, now in prison there in connection with the assassination of ex-Gov. Steunenberg, commenting upon certain references to him by President Roosevelt in letters to J. S. Sherman of New York, which received publicity recently through the Roosevelt-Harriman episode. The statement says in part:

"The President says that I am en 'undesirable citizen,' the inference being that as such I should be put out of the way. His influence is all-powerful and his statement, coming as it does on the eve of my trial for life, will make me irreparably injury and do moro to prevent a fair trial than everything that has been said and done against me in the past."

Thomas Crimmins, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Moyer-Haywood Protest Conference, mailed a letter to President Roosevelt on Thursday, which read in part as follows:

"Neither Moyer nor Haywood—we leave Debs out of present consideration for obvious reasons—has any connection with the quarrel between you and the financial magnate who claims to have raised a large campaign fund in 1904 by means of which 50,000 votes were turned in New York City, assuring your triumphant election. Why, then, should you drag Moyer and Haywood into this mess? Does your language come within the definition of 'a square deal,' so fervently urged by you on other occasions?

"Is it too much to ask of you to make such public amends as any true gentleman is bound to offer when inadvertently he has made a mistake and inflicted grievous wrongs upon men who have nothing to do with his personal quarrel?"

DIDN'T SAY IT—McCARTER.

And Anyway This Is No Time for Controversies with Roosevelt.

Attorney General McCarter of New Jersey denied yesterday that in his speech at Trenton Thursday night he had said that President Roosevelt "summons into his presence prospective appointees of the Federal Judiciary and makes their appointment contingent upon their opinion with regard to certain laws that may come before them for consideration."

"The newspaper reports of my speech," said Mr. McCarter, "are entirely wrong. I made no such remarks as I was reported to have made. Besides, this is no time for newspaper controversies with the President."

The Trenton correspondent of the Standard News Association, which supplied tho New York newspapers the report of Mr. McCarter's remarks at the dinner of the Mercer County Bar Association, insisted last night that while the wording of Mr. McCarter's speech as quoted might vary in some slight degreo from that used, the sense was correct and the words "very nesrly exact." The editor of The True American of Trenton and the oditor of The Trenton Times, with whom the correspondent compared notes after the dinner, supported his statement as to what they understood Mr. McCarter to say.

HARRIMAN CLERK BAILED.

Let Out Under $1,000—Union Pacific Man Prosecutes Him.

Alexander Millar, Secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and Gordon M. Beck, attorney in the Harriman interests, were both present in the Tombs Court yesterday when Frederick W. Hill, the former stenographer for Mr. Harriman, who is charged with selling the letter which has started the controversy between Harriman and President Roosevelt, was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle.

Assistant District Attorney Krotel, who is prosecuting the case against Hill, conferred with his counsel, ex-Magistrate Alfred E. Ommen, and it was understood that bail of $500 had been agreed upon. When Magistrate Wahle held Hill for examination on Monday at 10 o'clock, however, Mr. Krotel asked that bail be fixed at $1,000. To Mr. Ommen's objection, Mr. Krotel explained that Mr. Millar had desired the larger amount.

Abraham Harnisch of 530 West Sixty-eighth Street furnished the bail, offering as security his home and other property on the same street in which he held an average equity of from $60,000 to $75,000.

NEBRASKA WITH ROOSEVELT.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 5.—The Nabraeka Legislature to-day adopted a resolution indorsing the position of President Roosevelt in his controversy with E. H. Harriman, and declaring the confidence of the Senate in the President's motives.

CITY OF TROY BURNS IN HUDSON

with the dense smoke they fought their way from stateroom to stateroom until they came to one which was looked.

Sleeping Passenger Saved.

Putting their shoulders to the door they smashed it in. In the berth they found a woman, whom neither smoke nor noise had awakened. She had not been overcome by smoke, however, and grabbing her in their arms Smith and Wilson rushed with her to the deok. From here sbe was got safely ashore.

In the meantime the flames had been communicated to the pier, and thie, too, was soon blazing fiercely, driving the firemen back foot by foot, until at last they were compelled to abandon all hopes of saving the vessel. On board of her were thirteen horses, besides a valuable cargo of freight. All the horses and the freight were lost.

Before the firemen were driven from the pier an effort was made to reach the horses. Several men dropped into the burning hold, but it was quickly found that the horses could not be reached.

The passengers hurried to the railroad station after leaving the boat, and many of them returned to this city on the 11:30 o'clock train, while others left for Troy shortly after midnight.

STORIES OF PASSENGERS.

All Praise Bravery of Capt. Bruder, Who Was Last to Leave.

Seven passengers and about twenty-five members of the City of Troy's crew arrived at the Grand Central Station on the 12:53 train from Yonkers this morning. The passengers looked very little the worse for their experience, but it was different with most of the crew.

They were asleep in their bunks when the fire was discovered, and as the quarters were close to where the fire started they had no time to get together their belongings. Several of the negro stewards when they got to New York had on only an undershirt, overalls, shoes, and a blanket. They were bareheaded, and were still wondering what had happened when sadly they walked down tbe platform of the Grand Central.

On only one point did those who got here this morning agree, and that was the bravery of Capt. Bruder, the skipper of the City of Troy. The skipper, all said, was the bravest man on the boat, and it was not until the last person had been safely landed that he made his way through the smoke to the gangway that led to Edwin Gould's pier at Dobbs Ferry.

"I was in the engine room watching the machinery," said Carl Carlson of 5 Water Street, this city, "when the fire wes discovered. I immediately ran up on deck and mede my way to the bridge, where I informed Capt. Bruder what was the matter. I never saw a cooler man than that Hudson River skipper. He did not lose his head for a single second. He called his officers to him and then ordered every man to the place assigned to him in the fire drill.

Captain Reassures Passengers.

Then he made his way to the saloon where the passengers were and begged them to keep cool and trust to him to get them to land. He said that we were in danger, but that the greatest danger of all was a panic. When we got ashore he told us to meet him at the police station and he would furnish us transportation to wherever we wished to go. Then the skipper rushed back to the bridge and guided the boet to the pier at Dobbs Ferry. So fer ns I know no one was lost, although I did hear that two men had jumped overboard but were rescued.

"The passengers had just finished dinner and were making themselves known to one another in the saloon," said R. H. Keller of Troy, "when the skipper came into the saloon and informed us in a cool business-like wey that bad luck had come our way, and that the boat was on fire. Several of the women appeared to be on the verge of going into hysterics, but the skipper had foreseen all that and assured them that the greatest danger of all lay in their losing their heads. Then he told us what to do and where to go, and hurried beck to his place on the bridge.

"It was as cool a piece of work as I have ever seen under such serious conditions. 'Meet me at the police station and I'll send you home,' the skipper said as he hurried out of tho saloon."

"As far as I was able to ascertain," said Frank Fletcher, one of the engineers of the City of Troy, "the fire started in the pantry, which is located on the main deck about amidships. I have not yet learned the cause, but imagine that defective insulation must have started it. The moment the skipper realized what the matter was he headed straight for Dobbs Ferry. There was not any panic, and we did not lose a soul, either among the passengers or the crew."

Four Streams Didn't Check Flames.

"When the fire alarm was sounded Capt. Bruder hustled every man to the place assigned to him in the fire drill, and soon we had four streams playing on the fire. Despite our efforts the flames gained rapidly on us, and in a few minutes after we bumped up against the dock at Dobbs Ferry the boat was a mass of flames from stem to stern.

"We were going at full speed when the fire started, that is, about 14 knots an hour. The most pitiful incident of the fire was the loss of seven fine horses that we had on bonrd. We all wanted to save the poor beasts, but it was impossible to do so. I do not know to whom the animals belonged."

Michael Murray and Thomas O'Hara were two of the crew that arrived here this morning. They did the talking for their fellows and all agreed that they were mighty lucky to get baok to New York alive.

Most of these men were asleep when the fire drill was sounded. They did not stop to pick up any of their personal belongings, but hustled on deck to help try put out the fire. O'Hara said that Capt. Bruder had to be taken off the ship in a lifeboat, as the vessel was ablaze from stem to stern on the landing side when the skipper deserted the boat, after tho last of the passengers were taken off.

Some of the others said that O'Hara was mistaken in this and that the skipper had left the boat via the gangplank, which he reached by a perilous groping through the smoke that enveloped the ship.

The negro cooks and stewards were the great sufferers and saved almost nothing at all. Several of them had very few clothes on last night, and were trying to keep themselves warm with blankets that had been given them by kind hearted people in Dobbs Ferry.

One of the crew said that one of the officers found a crowd of fifteen excited Italians preparing to jump overboard. He remained among them until the boat landed, after issuing a standing threat to brain the first man that moved, with a belaying pin. The Italian realned quiet.

The City of Troy was a wooden side-wheel steamboat, 280.6 feet long and 38 feet in breadth, drawing ten feet of water. She was built in Brooklyn in 1876 for inland passenger service, and had continuod in the Hudson River service for the Citizens' Steamboat Company since. She cost $250,000 originally. Her gross tonnage wes 1,527, and net tonnage 1,280.

The steamboat had a crew of forty-eight men and 200 staterooms.

Some thirteen years ago, when the present management of the Citizens' Line assumed control, the boat was remodeled at a cost of $150,000. On each deck she was provided with fire cocks and hose. Tho officere and crew have always been considered most efficient, and were well versed in the fire drill.

NEW MERIT ROLL FOR FIREMEN

Commissioner Orders More Care In Recording Rescues.

Fire Commissioner Lantry took cognizance yesterday of an old subject of dispute in the Fire Department—the roll of merit. It has been common talk in the department that more often than not the men who are deserving of the highest praise for heroism at fires do not get the credit for it, but the men are loath to talk about such matters.

The Commissioner's letter explains as follows: "It is my desire that reports of rescues and other meritorious acts should be made with the utmost promptness and that there should he no delay on the part of any officer into whose hands they may come in forwarding them to this office. I want the facts clearly set forth, every man given just credit—no more, no less—and the investigation must be conducted so as to secure to every man in this department full justice and fair play. This is not to be taken as a criticism of any one. I simply desire to throw additional safeguards around the rights of the members of the uniformed force."

LEFT $50,000 TO A COLLEGE.

Mary T. Donnell's Will Provides for a Missouri Institution.

The will of Mary T. Donnell, who died in this city on Dec. 10, was filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday. Mrs. Donnell left an estate estimated to be worth $75,000. William Thornton Lawson, named as executor, is directed to invest $50,000 until the accumulations shall reach the amount of $50,000, when he is to hand the entire sum over to the Trustees of the William Jewell College in Missouri. The income from this fund is to be used for the establishment and maintenance of a historical library, to be known as the Robert and Mary Donnell Library.

The will also directs that $10,000 be expended on two portraits, one of the testator and the other of her husband, and when completed to be presented to her sister, Theodosia T. Lawson of 333 Riverside Drive. The rest of the estate goes to relatives.

LEONARD VANCE ARRESTED.

Metropolitan Life Cashier Accused of Embezzlement and Forgery.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—Leonard Vance, 30 years old, for twelve years cashier of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in the company's New York and St. Louis offices, is a prisoner at the Four Courts on an information charging him with forgery and embezbzling between $800 and $1,000. George W. Makepeace, an auditor for the company in New York, caused the arrest. He has been in St. Louis for three weeks investigating the books kept by Vance.

One of Vanee's first requests was that a message be sent to Michael Hecht, President of the Siwanoy Democratic Club, New York. The telegram read: "Am arrested. Get me out without delay." He said he could not explain the shortage, but denied having misappropriated any of the money he is charged with taking.

Michael Hecht said last night that he had received no word from Le

HUGHES TELLS OF OFFICIAL FETTERS

Can Remove a Mayor, but Not Some Appointed Administrative Place Holders.

RESPONSIBILITY IS DIVIDED

And People Can't Tell Whom to Blame for Failure to Govern Well—"Senator G." Talks Briefly.

Special to The New York Times.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., April 5.—Gov. Hughes and a party of forty Senators and Assemblymen came up from Albany to-day to attend a reception and banquet given by the Glens Falls Club in honor of the Chief Executive, who was born and brought up here. Greater enthusiasm could not have been manifested by a crowd of 325 men, and the Governor said he had the time of his life.

The Governor made a forceful defense of the Public Utilities bill, and said it was his conviction that the Governor should have power to remove for cause the various appointive administrative heads of departments created by the Legislature. There would be no division of authority in that event, and the Governor would be held accountable to the people for the conduct of affairs.

Senator Thomas F. Grady was conspicuous at the banquet. It was suggested by Toastmaster Joseph A. Kellogg that perhaps "Senator C." would give some inside information about "Little Old New York," his toast. The Senator replied that there might be some truth in stories told lately about bad places in New York City, but he of all men, at this particular time, could not be expected to talk of anything in particular or of syndicates.

Gov. Hughes's Speech.

The Governor spoke as follows:

"This paramount need in the administration of the government of this State is to make it more largely responsible government. The effort should be to fix responsibility so that accountability to the people cannot be escaped. Some assert that for this purpose all administrative heads of departments and members of administrative commissions should be elected. I do not assent to this proposition. I believe that on the one hand it is destructive of necessary unity in administration, and on the other increases the opportunities for manipulation and intrigue. Experience shows that in a political campaign it is difficult to concentrate the attention of the people upon a large number of offices. The election of all administrative heads and members of commissions would tend, in my judgment, greatly to increase the difficulty of securing responsible government.

"The Constitution provides that the Executive power shall be vested in the Governor, who 'shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed.' In the popular imagination the office is invested with those powers which the people instinctively associate with the first office in the State. But in reality, while the administrative powers and responsibilities of the Federal Executive have increased, those of the State Executive have diminished. This is a mistaken State policy.

"We have now an anomalous condition. In the Constitution the people in regard to several important offices have given to the Governor appropriate power. Thus it is provided that the Superintendent of Public Works shall be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. But he 'may be suspended and removed from office by the Governor whenever in his judgment the public interest so require.' The Superintendent of State Prisons is to be similarly appointed; but 'the Governor may remove the Superintendent for cause at any time, giving to him a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity to be heard in his defense.' The members of the State Board of Charities and of the State Commission in Lunacy are similarly appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate; but any member 'may be removed from office by the Governor for cause, an opportunity having been given him to be heard in his defense.'

"The Constitution also gives the Governor power to remove important elective officers. Thus Sheriffs, Clerks of Counties, District Attorneys, and Registers of Counties are removable by the Governor, subject to the provision that the officer shall receive a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity of being heard. Statutes have also conferred upon the Governor the power to remove other important elective officers. Thus by the Greater New York charter the Governor may remove the Mayor of New York upon charges, and he may remove the Police Commissioner of that city whenever, in his judgment, 'the public interest shall so require.'

Office "Under Cover."

"But in connection with the important administrative offices created by the Legislature, the Governor's power of removal has been fettered. So that while in public opinion he is chargeable with the administration of the Government, he has not the power of removal, through the right to exercise which correct administration may be secured. For example, the Superintendent of Banks, the Superintendent of Insurance, and members of the Railroad Commission are removable only by the Senate upon the recommendation of the Governor. Now it is not sound policy to create administrative bodies, without appropriate means for enforcing accountability. If these offices are not to be elective then those that hold them should be directly responsible to the Executive, who must account to the people. There should be no distribution of responsibility between the Executive and the Senate. As a recent writer has said, 'It frequently happens that the law organizing the commission is so expressed as to give the Governor, after making the appointment of its members, no further control over the actions of that body. The power of removal either is denied him or is hedged about in such a way as to make its exercise practically impossible except for the grossest malfeasance. * * * After appointment by the Governor they are launched in their orbit with practically no one to restrain or limit their action within the law. The Governor's reputaton may suffer by their action, yet, as he has practically no power of removal, he is helpless except so far as he may direct public attention to the wrongdoing.' In effect, as has been said, 'the commission system establishes a fourth department of government' without suitable responsibility.

"This matter has particular importance in connection with the proposal to reorganize the system of State supervision of public service corporations. In the bill now pending before the Legislature, the power of removal of the members of these commissions is lodged with the Governor. This has been strongly attacked upon the ground that it gives the Governor too much power. It is insisted that the power of removal should be lodged with the Senate.

"Now, so far as I a mpersonally concerned, the matter is not of grave consequence. It is very unlikely that I should have occasion to remove an officer whom I had nominated, and whose qualifications I had had an opportunity carefully to examine before the nomination was made. I may therefore refer to the matter in an impersonal way, and simply for the purpose of stating my view as to the correct political principle.

"The vesting of the power of removal in the Governor is objected to on several grounds. First, it is said that men of self-respect would not take the office on such terms. This is absurd. No one yet has declined the office of Mayor of New York or of Police Commissioner, or of Sheriff, District Attorney, or Superintendent of Public Works because the Governor has the power of removal. The President has a broad power to remove administrative officers, and this has not interfered in his calling to his aid the best talent in the land. Any Inter-State Commerce Commissioner may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office.

"It is also said that if the Senate confirms the appointment, its concurrence in the removal should be required. Neither in logic nor in precedent is there a satisfactory basis for such a claim. Where the people have spoken through the Constitution they have made the Superintendent of Public Works, the Superintendent of Prisons, the members of the State Board of Charities, and of the [illegible] Governor alone, although the appointment is with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"But the objection that is most seriously urged is that it increases the political power of the Governor, and that this may be used for political purposes. I believe that to fix the responsibility with the Governor, thus making him directly accountable to the people for the administration of important departments, will do much to free administrative offices from improper political control, and will create a powerful incentive toward efficient administration.

Scrupulous Officials Blocked.

"The point is that the Governor cannot escape accounting to the people for the misuse of his power. His term of office is only two years. The broader his powers, the more careful the people will be in his selection. To the public mind he is, or should be, responsible for administration, and it is not wholesome that he should be induced to attempt to accomplish results by indirection. Undoubtedly an unscrupulous Governor may abuse his powers. As the case stands at present, an unscrupulous Governor may use unscrpulous means to attain the object of his ambition. The statutes intended to restrain operate but slightly to the disadvantage of those who are impelled by bad motives. The situation now is, that an unscrupulous Governor may attain his end by a misuse of power, while a scrupulous Governor is blocked in his efforts to achieve results. It is a great mistake to be so intent on preventing bad administration as to make difficult a good one. It is also a mistake to distrust the people.

"This true remedy, as I have said, is to unify administration, to concentrate administrative power, and thus sharply defins administrative responsibility. Those who have studied the problems of municipal administration are practically unanimous with reference to the importance of this policy. It is equally important in connection with State administration. In this way only can proper correctives be supplied for administrative abuses.

"This is the more important as the activities of the State increase. If we are to protect our administrative wards and departments from improper influences, if we are to secure administration for the benefit of the people without favoritism, we must see to it that administrative offices are not created which are practically immuns from accountability, and that the people, through officers of their choice, are able to express their will.

No Chains on Labor.

Referring to the Public Utilities bill, the Governor then said:

"I may say a word in regard to another matter affecting the pending legislation. It has been pretended by some that it interferes with the freedom of employes to work or not to work, as they choose. Such a contention is absurd. No commission, under this law or any other law, would have the right to compel men to work against their will. This is a free country, and, under our Constitution, slavery and involuntary servitude are impossible. A law which undertook to compel men to work for a corporation who did not wish to work for that corporation would not be worth the paper that it was written on, and no one can find any such intention within the four corners of the proposed law.

"It has also been said that the bill legalizes mergers which have already taken place. It does nothing of the sort. Past transactions are either lawful or unlawful. If they were lawful it is important that the new legislation should not be construed as intended to affect any right which is safeguarded by the Constitution. If they were unlawful, the proposed bill does not legalize them. The provision in the bill simply is that it shall not affect what has been lawfully done, and every right which exists, with every reference to any illegal transaction in the past, will continue to exist without impairment by anything in the proposed law.

"Something has also been said regarding the penalties provided for by the law, but it will be noticed that the penalties stated are merely maximum penalties. There is no provision in the bill, for example, that a corporation violating the act shall be mulcted in a penalty of $5,000 for every day that the violation continues. The penalty is a sum not to exceed $5,000 for each offense or for each day's continuance. The penalty is not required to be a particular sum, but within the limit stated will be fixed at such sum as the court may find just, in view of all the circumstances of the case. If the company ought to pay $5,000 a day it will have to pay that sum. If this would be unjust and result in the extreme penalties described by the opponents of the bill, a sum will be fixed that is both adequate and just. The court has the necessary latitude so that proper punishment may be meted out. Nor is any one in danger of a penalty unless he violates the law. And, of course, there will be no penalty at all unless the order is valid and should be obeyed.

"As I have said before, the law in its operation should not be unfair or oppressive, but it should be effectual.

"Property rights are not threatened, freedom of management consistent with just recognition of public obligations is not interfered with. I need not repeat what I have recently said in regard to the proper function of the courts and the importance of avoiding dilatory proceedings to secure a court review of matters which are purely administrative.

"Let me say in conclusion that I believe there is general recognition of the importance of providing for suitable State supervision of public service corporations, as is now proposed; that I believe the people of this State indorse the effort to place an adequate measure of relief upon the statute books, and I believe that a majority of the members of the Legislature are alive to the importance of the question presented and will be found to be in accord with the public sentiment upon this question."

MR. MERRITT SPEAKS UP.

Utilities Bill Helps the Public and the Honest Investor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 5.—Assemblyman Merritt of St. Lawrence, who is one of the two legislative sponsors of the public utilities measure, issued a statement to-day relative to it, which contained these utterances:

"The Public Utilities bill is not the invention of some one person or set of persons. It has grown. It is demanded by the sober and conservative people of the State. It is based upon the doctrine that the public service corporations are neither the master nor the servant of the State, but the partner of the people in their corporate capacity.

"Gov. Hughes is a courageous and conservative man. He will appoint honest and conservative Commissioners. It will be their duty, and they will have the power, to protect the people's interests in the operation of public service corporations.

"This bill is not revolutionary; it is not radical. It does not aim to destroy any business corporation. By its enactment every share of stock and bonds will have a more stable value, and it is in the interest not only of the public, but the honest investor. Corporation managers who operate their business mainly with reference to the stock quotations in Wall Street should readjust their notions and practices."

WEBB HEIR WINS SUIT.

Webb's Academy Loses Contest for Broadway Property Named In Webb Will.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday reversed the judgment of the court below and set aside a judgment obtained by Webb's Academy and Home for Shipbuilders against Thomas B. Hidden, as trustee under the will of Henrietta A. Webb and others, heirs of Henrietta A. Webb. The judgment gave to the plaintiff title to certain property on Broadway, running back to Sixth Avenue, just below Thirty-second Street.

The claim of the academy to the property was based on a contract between the late William H. Webb, the founder of the academy, and Henrietta A. Webb, his wife, providing for the disposal of their property after the death of both, and which gave the land to the academy. Subsequently they made a new contract, giving the reversionary interest in the property to their son, William H. Webb, Jr., after the death of Mrs. Webb. The academy authorities claimed possession under the original contract, taking the ground that it was irrevocable. The Appellate Division Justices declare that the original contract could be revoked. The judgment is reversed and the title to the property given to the sch[illegible]

MORE POOLROOM MEN IN JOHN DOE NET

Jerome Himself to Take a Hand Soon in Hunt for Syndicate Heads.

JERSEY PROSECUTOR AIDS

The 108 Fulton Street Place Appears to Have Been a Turf News Agency.

That District Attorney Jerome will take a hand in the prosecution of the poolroom men at the close of the Thaw trial, coupled with more revelations concerning the executive office of the syndicate, at 108 Fulton Street, were two of the developments concerning the progress of the poolroom crusade yesterday. The establishment at 108 Fulton Street was, according to the men who did business with it, a turf news agency, operating under the name of W. D. Miller & Co. It is said to have been incorporated under the laws of Maine, with headquarters somewhere in Jersey. Assistant District Attorney Vandiver's men who got into the safe in the place, with the aid of a chisel and jimmy, brought to light a lot of checks and memoranda which showed that the alleged turf news agency had much business to transact with the Davis-Reilly poolroom syndicate. The continued examination of the papers and memoranda found in that safe has revealed that the two men who collected the moneys and drew the checks for the concern were the men who are down in the ledgers as "R. H. D." and "J. P. R."

These two men—Davis and Robinson—appear to have left the betting on the horses to their clients. "G.," "Sen. G.," "Grady," and the others of the syndicate, "C. R." and "M. J. R.," all took fliers of no inconsiderable size in the horse-racing game themselves from time to time, and appear honestly to have lost, if they did not honestly win, on occasion. Davis and Robinson are shown from the memoranda to have been the only ones empowered to draw checks.

Manager Put Under Bail.

Hearings in the poolroom cases were continued again before Magistrate Barlow yesterday. The tangible result was that Edward A. Fisher, said to have acted as a manager for the syndicate, was placed under $1,000 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. Fisher deposited $1,000 to insure his appearance when wanted. Thomas R. Keator, who is accused of being the proprietor of the first poolroom raided in the crusade—namely, 47 Broadway—was also present at the hearing, but he was not held on any charges. He is now under bail to appear before Magistrate Barlow on April 9, when the Magistrate will give his decision as to whether he shall be tried on the charge of keeping a poolroom or not. This makes two men who are now in the net which the District Attorney threw out over a week ago. Fisher has been hitherto spoken of as one of the principals because he was the reported manager of the syndicate. Nor was any charge brought yesterday against Charles Reilly, who was also present.

The cases of the men taken in one of the Cedar Street building raids were next taken up by the Magistrate. They were taken in the subsidiary poolroom in that building, which the raiding party discovered on Tuesday last while they were searching for the telephone distributing station in that building, which they found on the next day. The three all thought of Newark, N. J., when they were being registered at the Church Street Police Station, and they also thought of these names: Henry Newman, John Mack, and Nathan Jacobs. To Newman Mr. Vandiver showed check vouchers which seemed to indicate that he had bet and won $2,970 in three days in one instance, and then had had a dark day when he lost $1,600.

Although no evidence which the Assistant District Attorney seemed to think was useful was obtained from these three men at that time, the case seemed different during the John Doe proceedings afterward, during which they were reminded of the stipulations of the Dowling law. During that session, the Assistant District Attorney said afterward, the three men gave their right names.

Bettors Make Confession.

The John Doe hearing was again continued after the two public hearings. Besides the two young women, Erna Sanntrock and Clara Robinson, who have signified their willingness to testify to what they know, and also Floyd M. Grant, the auctioneer, some prosperous-looking men passed in and out of the hearing room. Neither the men themselves nor Mr. Vandiver would tell who they were. None of the men of prominence who had been mentioned as having been subpoenaed by the District Attorney was among them. When asked if they had all proved willing to tell what they know about their transactions of placing bets with the poolroom syndicate, the Assistant District Attorney said they had—all but one. To this man, Mr. Vandiver said, had been given the night to think over the matter.

During the day Mr. Vandiver received a letter from Prosecutor W. H. Speer of Hudson County, N. J., in which that official offered to co-operate with the District Attorney of New York in any way that he might deem useful to bring the poolroom men to justice. As the telephone distributing station had been repeatedly said to be over in Jersey, his offer of assistance may be accepted. The telephone feature is no unimportant one. The means of transmission of the race track information is almost as involved as the bookkeeping of the syndicate was intricate. Both from this source, as well as in the case of the banks, the Assistant District Attorney yesterday acknowledged having received valuable assistance.

EXETER ALUMNI DINE.

Sons of the Famous Academy Meet to Sing Songs of School Days.

Oh, Exeter, our mother dear,
Thy sons to-day are gathered here
To win—to win for thee with might
New laurels for thy garland bright.

These words of the "Red and Gray," sung to the tune of "Die Wacht am Rhein," resounded in a dining room of the Hotel Manhattan last night, while 150 of the New York alumni of Phillips-Exeter Academy stood up and toasted their Alma Mater. It was the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the alumni, and song was an important item on the bill of fare. The old class yells of the academy were shouted with an enthusiasm which bespoke the love the alumni bear to the institution.

Ex-Assistant District Attorney William Rand, Jr., was toastmaster. He introduced as the first speaker Harlan P. Amen, Principal of the academy, who told of the prosperous condition of the school and suggested that the old motto "Learn or Walk" has been a useful one in the history of Phillips-Exeter.

Prof. Lee McClung of Yale talked of the football days in '88, when he was one of the boys who helped buck the line of Andover and other schools which were arrayed against Exeter on the gridiron. Prof. McClung was greeted as "Bung" McClung, the nickname by which he was known in his student days.

Judge William H. Wadhams of the New York Andover Association was the representative from Andover at the dinner. He characterized Exeter as "our dearest foe."

"Politics will never be corrupt so long as men have ideals such as are inculcated at Andover and at Exeter," he said. "The motto of each is to play the game and play it hard, and I advise any young man who cannot go to Andover to go to Exeter."

Others who spoke were Prof. William A. Francis of Exeter, Prof. James A. Tufts, Secretary of the New England Exeter Association, and Frank W. Hackett of the Southern Exeter Association.

"The Queen of Table Waters"

MRS. VON CLAUSSEN IS WRITING A BOOK

Meantime Is Going to Washington to Stir Things for American Womanhood.

GIVES INTERVIEW ABOUT IT

More Interviews Coming—As to Advertising the Book That Is Being Attended To.

Mrs. Ida M. Von Claussen, who was not presented to the King of Sweden by Charles H. Graves, the United States Minister, and has written to Secretary Root complaining of her treatment at the hands of Mrs. Graves, said last night that she would go to Washington to-day to carry the war against "snobbishness" in American Embassies into the halls of government at the Nation's Capitol, "on behalf of American womanhood." She also announced that she is writing a book detailing her experiences with the Grayeses near to the Court of King Oscar.

With the International Peace Conference only a few days off, Mrs. Von Claussen sat in her boudoir at the Prince George Hotel last night, planning her war for American womanhood. About her were two or three men reporters and two women reporters, one of whom actually came from Washington. She sat at a little table reading the last of a statement to the public between little laughs.

"I do this wholly upon behalf of American womanhood," dictated Mrs. Von Claussen. "Now, don't put anything more after that 'American womanhood.' Have you got that? Before I have finished with this business Mrs. Graves will look like a Methodist—"

Interjections from the Washington journalist caused the conversation to become disjointed. The newspaper woman reached for a photograph on the table.

"That's another friend of mine," volunteered Mrs. Von Claussen.

"Are you engaged to him?" asked the Washington newspaper woman with a smile.

"No; just nearly engaged. He's a Newport swell."

Two or three began talking at once. Presently Mrs. Von Claussen's musical voice was heard above the rest.

"Yes, and Harry Lehr behaved like a—Well! Yes, and Charlemagne Tower is likely to be dragged into this before it's over."

Mrs. Von Claussen was asked why she sent to Germany for the credentials that were to be presented in Stockholm.

"Because my ancestry could be identified in Germany and couldn't be in Sweden," she replied.

"Now then," she said to some of the reporters who were preparing to go, "your object is to uphold me, because by so doing you uphold your mothers and your sisters. If you don't, don't you see, you don't give them protection?"

Asked about her arrangements for to-day, the lady said:

"My arrangements? Let me see. I'm to take the train at 3 o'clock; and by the way, I must be very careful because a clairvoyant told me I was going to get hurt. Now I wonder who is going to push me off the train? Ha, ha!

The Court train," suggested the Washington journalist.

"Ha, ha!" laughed Mrs. Von Claussen. "That's awfully clever."

The rest of the reporters were leaving. Meantime a copy had been made of part of Mrs. von Claussen's written statement to the public. Here it is:

"I am taking this stand by reason of my desire to protect American women abroad. The snobbishness of the embassy attachés of America is a serious matter to the thousands of Americans who go abroad yearly. I have been a guest of the Czar at St. Petersburg, also Ferdinand of Bulgaria at his capital city of Sofia.

"The women connected with the embassies have a tendency to bring Americans abroad into absolute contempt. As I have met practically all the rulers in the world, certainly I should know what is 'en regale' so far as the social side of American Embassies is concerned. My dear friend Mrs. Craigie and myself went to India during the famous 'durbar.'

"Now, don't publish too much," Mrs. von Claussen was saying to the reporters at the door, "and don't forget to put in about the book. Don't say too much, and then you'll have a lot of material for the next time."

"I suppose you'll advertise the book a lot," suggested the Washington visitor.

"I don't know about that," replied Mrs. von Claussen, laughing very merrily indeed. "I think you people have attended to that."

As to the letters from Mr. Graves, which she expects will clinch matters when she shows them to President Roosevelt, Mrs. Von Claussen declared that her maid had unfortunately packed them in the wrong box, and they had been left in Germany.

Another New Italian Line.

C. B. Richards & Co., steamship agents, announced yesterday that a new line, the Sicilian-American Line, has been formed to operate fortnightly sailings to this port from Naples, Messina, and Palermo. The company's steamers are the Italia, San Giorgio, and San Giovanni. They are each of 6,500 tons register. The last two were built at Sunderland, England, where they were launched recently. The head office of the new company will be at Messina.

Hearst Must Answer Jerome's Suits.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the decision of Justice O'Gorman overruling the demurrer interposed by the Star Company and the Evening Journal Publishing Company in the libel suits brought by District Attorney Jerome. Mr. Jerome sued for $100,000 damages because of statements in "The American and Evening Journal reflecting on his honesty. The defendant must now answer.

BUCHAREST, April 5.—The conflicts at Baclesht, near Craivou, last week were the severest of the peasant revolt. The inhabitants, who are Bulgarians, fought with the obstinate determination characteristic of their race.

The insurgents, who are said to have numbered 10,000, were confronted by a battalion of infantry and a battery of artillery. Armed with guns, axes, knives, and scythes, the peasants, who were accompanied by their wives and children, made a desperate onset on the troops, who fired a volley, killing a large number of their assailants. The remainder retreated to the village, carrying their dead and wounded. Immediately afterward quiet prevailed in the village.

Half an hour later a funeral procession issued from the village, headed by the priest and parish clerk. The coffin was followed by the peasants, weeping and lamenting. As the mourners approached the troops the commandant ordered them to stop, but they continued to advance, and the troops received the order to prepare to fire. Just then the peasants suddenly made a furious onslaught. They were met by a volley, and several fell. The remainder fled, leaving the coffin behind. It was empty.

Returning a few minutes afterward, the peasants made another attack, which met the same fate. The artillery was then brought into action and the insurgents were summoned to leave the village in three hours. They utilized the interval to units their forces once more, and delivered a fourth desperate assault, advancing notwithstanding the volleys of the troops, and coming into hand-to-hand conflict with the soldiers, of whom a considerable number were wounded. The result, however, was similar to that of the previous encounters, and the artillery bombarded the village. Toward evening all was quiet.

BERLIN, April 5.—Despite the official assurances that everything is quiet in Roumania, the Prefects of all the districts of Moldau, according to a dispatch from Czernowitz, are engaged in driving the Jews out of the villages, and agitators are stirring up the peasants.

HEARS CZAR WILL ABDICATE.

London Paper Also Has Other Sensational News About Russia.

LONDON, April 5.—The Daily Mirror asserts that it is in a position to announce upon the "highest authority" that the Emperor of Russia purposes to abdicate within a month and that Grand Duke Michael will be appointed Regent during the infancy of the Czarevitch. For the last three or four weeks, the paper adds, the events in this direction have been proceeding with lightning rapidity in St. Petersburg, but the secret has been well kept. Continuing The Daily Mirror says:

"Lately the Emperor's mind has given way even more completely, and he has shown himself incapable of performing the smallest duties of his rank."

The lower house of Parliament is to be abolished, and there will be formed a military dictatorship with the object of stamping out revolution and putting an end to anarchy in Russia. The paper declares further that a marriage has been arranged between Grand Duke Michael and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and that the visit to London of the Dowager Empress of Russia was chiefly for the purpose of negotiating this marriage.

Count Benkendorff, the Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, in an interview regarding the story published in The Daily Mirror, expressed surprise thereat, and said he had heard nothing officially or otherwise to confirm these statements. He did not believe them, and discredited the story entirely. Baron Sternberg, the Russian Consul General here, when questioned regarding this story said it was "all rubbish."

QUEEN LEAVES ENGLAND.

Dowager Empress of Russia Goes as Far as Calais with Her.

LONDON, April 5.—Queen Alexandra, the Dowager Empress of Russia, and Princess Victoria left London for the Continent this morning. The Queen and her sister will separate at Calais, the former and Princess Victoria proceeding to Toulon, where they will join King Edward preparatory to the meeting between the latter and King Alfonso at Cartagena. The Dowager Empress will go to Biarritz.

The same extraordinary precautions were taken for the safety of the Dowager Empress as marked her arrival in England. No one was admitted to the railroad station except on written authorization, and the railroad from here to Dover was closely patrolled. A number of Russians who have arrived in England since the advent of the Dowager Empress have been kept under close surveillance since their landing.

BIARRITZ, France, April 5.—King Edward this morning took a special train for Toulon, where he will arrive late in the evening, embark on the royal yacht, and await the arrival of Queen Alexandra to-morrow. Their Majesties will then sail for Cartagena, where they will be met by King Alfonso.

BRITISH LABEL OUR GOODS.

75 Per Cent. of Canned Products from Here Not Labeled, It Is Said.

LONDON, April 5.—Dr. Thomas, the chief health officer of Stepney, during a hearing in a police court to-day of a charge of selling bad condensed milk, made the statement that "75 per cent. of the canned goods imported into this country from America is not labeled, and English firms afterward put on their own labels."

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, expressed surprise to-night at the dispatch from London in which Dr. Thomas, the chief health officer of Stepney, is quoted as saying that 75 per cent. of the canned goods imported into England from the United States is not labeled and that English firms afterward put on their own labels. Dr. Wiley said that he had always supposed that such goods were fully and correctly labeled.

Socialist Success in Finland.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, April 5.—The official election results show that the Socialists won 80 of the 200 seats in the Diet. With the 13 Agrarians the Socialists lack only 8 of having an absolute majority. The Old Finns obtained 58 seats, the Young Finns, who control the existing Government, 25, and the Swedes 24. The Diet will meet early in May.

CORRUPTION IN MOROCCO.

Military Commanders Buy Gold with Pay of Imaginary Troops.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cablegram.

TANGIER, April 5. — Corruption among the highest native officials progresses by leaps and bounds. It is the only thing that does progress in Morocco. Not only are civil officials selling Government land and pocketing the proceeds, but the supreme military commanders are purchasing so much gold coin with the pay of imaginary troops that the premium on French and English gold has risen.

The unfortunate Sultan, whose finances are in such a state that he has been pawning his jewels, is actually paying for 9,000 soldiers in the Tangier district alone, where it is believed not half that number exist, and those that do exist are practically useless.

In spite of these unconcealed abuses it is satisfactory to know that the Moorish Minister of War has unshattered confidence in his own honesty. This is more than can be said of the opinion of the public, who criticise his methods and envy his opportunities.

NEW TRAGEDY BY SWINBURNE.

Poet, 70 Years Old, Receives Congratulations from All Over the World.

LONDON, April 5.—Algernon Charles Swinburne, who was 70 years old today, received birthday congratulations from all parts of the world.

His friends and admirers will be glad to know that he is strong and well and intellectually wide awake. It is announced that he is writing a tragedy based on Caesar Borgia, and friends who have heard parts of it read speak highly of it.

Swinburne spent the day at his home in Putney in company with his old crony Theodore Watts Dunton.

CALLED FRANCE CORRUPT.

Views of a Diplomat as Alleged to Have Been Given by Montagnini.

PARIS, Saturday, April 6.—The Figaro continues its publication of the Montagnini documents. Among the papers brought out to-day is a letter implicating a diplomat. It sets forth that M. de Stuers, the Minister of the Netherlands to France, called upon Mgr. Montagnini and said he wished to express personally his great regret at the conflict with the Vatican, concerning which he had reflected at length.

"M. de Stuers," writes Mgr. Montagnini, "said France was becoming more and more corrupt, and that she was being led by Freemasonry toward ruin or barbarous revolution. This Minister did not hesitate to avow to me that he was disgusted with the conduct of the French Government toward the Holy See."

CONSTERNATION AT FEZ.

Occupation of Oudja by the French Scares the Sultan's Court.

PARIS, April 5.—The official dispatches received here from Fez say that the French claims were presented to the Sultan March 31. The news of the occupation of Oudja by French troops arrived at the Moorish capital March 29, the day the column entered Moorish territory.

The impression prevails that the Sultan will concede all the French demands. The energetic action of France caused consternation among the Court entourage at Fez, and is expected to result in a prompt reply, but no official notification of its nature has yet arrived here.

Staal Out, Dutch Cabinet to Stay.

THE HAGUE, April 5.—At the request of Queen Wilhelmina the Cabinet has withdrawn its resignation, tendered Feb. 12, but the War Minister, Gen. H. P. Staal, whose proposals for a reduction of the expenditure on the militia were rejected by the Lower House of Parliament and led to the Cabinet's resignation, will give up his portfolio, Major Gen. Van Rappard, Commander of the Military District of Amsterdam, has been appointed to succeed him.

Austria and Hungary Agree.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 5.—According to statements made in well-informed quarters, Austria and Hungary have agreed to patch up their quarrel and renew the Ausgleich (or compromise agreement regarding the contributions of the common expenditure, &c.,) until 1917. The negotiations on the subject, which were broken off before Easter, will be shortly resumed at Vienna.

Porto Rico's Sanitarium Dedicated.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, April 5.—The Tuberculosis Sanitarium founded here by the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Porto Rico was dedicated to-day by Gov. Winthrop. The Right Rev. W. A. Jones, Roman Catholic Bishop of Porto Rico, made an address. The Insular Government and the City of San Juan together give $700 monthly toward the support of the institution, and funds are also received from private sources.

Treaty Before Domingan Congress.

SAN DOMINGO, Republic of Santo Domingo, April 5.—The new treaty between the United States and Santo Domingo, intended to replace the Domingan treaty which has been pending before the United States Senate for the last two years, was presented to Congress this morning and referred to a committee for examination and report. Quiet prevails throughout the republic.

Japan Wants Embassy in Turkey.

LONDON, April 5.—Japan has opened negotiations with Turkey, according to a special dispatch from Constantinople, with the view of establishing embassies of the two countries at their respective capitals. Russia has raised objections, but Japan insists that she is entitled to the same representation on the Bosphorus as the other great powers. Her interests at present are under the protection of the British Ambassador.

Italian King Starts for Greece.

ROME, April 5.—King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by Foreign Minister Tittoni, Minister of Marine Admiral Mirabello, and a number of Court dignitaries, left here to-day for Athens to return the visit last November of King George of Greece. The party will embark to-morrow on the royal yacht Trinacria, which will be escorted to Piraeus by a fleet of eleven warships.

Notes of Foreign News.

LONDON, April 5.—Negotiations are understood to be proceeding between the British companies concerned in the Argentine meat trade with the view of effecting a combination or an agreement to restrict supplies and keep up prices.

PARIS, April 5.—The semi-official Temps today published another article devoted to opposing a discussion of the limitation of armaments at The Hague, which, the paper declared, would only result in arousing bitterness among nations, and added: "The continual talk of peace will eventually lead to the complete embroilment of Europe."

HAMBURG, April 5.—Pamphlets signed by the "Executive Committee" have been distributed among the ships where imported English longshoremen are quartered threatening to blow up the vessels, urging at the same time that the Germans employed on the ships leave at once. No importance, however, is attached in shipping circles to the distribution of the circulars.

ROME, April 5.—Queen Margherita received Lloyd C. Griscom, the American Ambassador, in private audience to-day. In the course of the conversation her Majesty gave expression to her lifelong affection for America and Americans.

ARMIES MASSING TO CONTINUE WAR

Hondurans and Salvadorans Ready to Resist Advance of the Nicaraguans.

COMAYAGUA NEW CAPITAL

President Zelaya Calls Infamous the Reports That Tegucigalpa Was Looted by the Invaders.

PUERTO BARRIOS, Guatemala, April 5.—After the battle of Namasigue, in which the forces of Honduras were defeated by the Nicaraguans, President Bonilla withdrew and occupied Amapala, which place is fortified and defended by a strong force of Hondurans.

Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, was considerably weakened by forces being sent to Gene. Barahona and Christmas, who were defeated after eight days' fighting at Namasigue, and a mutiny occurred in the garrison at the capital. President Bonilla sent instructions from Amapala authorizing Gen. Saturnido Medal to evacuate Tegucigalpa if he was unable to defend it, and save the city from bombardment and looting. The city was evacuated.

The forces of President Bonilla and Gen. Medal are now uniting with the army of President Figueroa of Salvador on the frontier, where the combined armies are being massed for continuing the war. Gen. Solomon Ordonez, the Honduran Minister of War, arrived at Puerto Cortez to-day and has taken command of the coast defenses.

President Bonilla's forces occupy all the cities and towns of the north coast of Honduras except Trujillo, and the principal ports of the republic, Amapala and Puerto Cortez. The Honduran forces also occupy the railroad and the departments west of Comayagua, containing the principal fighting population of Honduras. President Bonilla's line of defense extends from Amapala along the frontier of Salvador, thence north to San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortez. He will establish his new capital at Comayagua.

SAN SALVADOR, Thursday, April 4.—The bombardment of Amapala by Nicaragua steamers only damaged the tower of one church. The United States cruiser Chicago, anchored off Acajutta, has received orders from Washington to leave in the direction of the Gulf of Fonseca, in order to be near the probable scene of war developments. President Bonilla has established governmental headquarters at Amapala. The Salvadorean frontiers are protected by a large army.

A dispatch received by The Associated Press from President Zelaya of Nicaragua denouncing reports that looting had been indulged in by the Nicaraguan and Honduran troops at the time of the capture of Tegucigalpa follows:

Managua, Nicaragua, April 4.

Facts have demonstrated the falsity of Salvadorean news. Reports about the occupation by Tegucigalpa by the Nicaraguan Army are infamous calumnies. The American Chargé d'Affaires is able to give testimony. ZELAYA.

CAME NORTH TO GET COOL.

Gen. Gallardo Found Honduras Too Hot for Him.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 5.—On the fruit ship Dictator, which arrived here to-day from Ceiba, Honduras, were two officers and eight or nine men late of the Honduran army. The officers are Gen. Alfonso Gallardo and Col. C. C. Padilla, the latter late Commandant of the Port of Ceiba.

All members of the party were very reticent, but upon being pressed for the reason which had prompted him to leave Honduras, Gen. Gallardo said it was very hot there, and he had come to New Orleans to cool off. The General expects to make his headquarters in this city for several weeks, perhaps longer.

$750,000 FIRE AT McGILL.

Engineering Building of the University Entirely Destroyed.

MONTREAL, April 5.—The McDonald Engineering Building at McGill University was destroyed by fire early to-day. The loss will exceed $750,000. It was supposed to have been the best-equipped building of its kind on the continent, and was opened by Lord Stanley. No lives were lost. Nothing definite is known as to how the fire originated, it having broken out presumably in the furnace room. The insurance on the building is $420,000.

Dean Bovie of McGill issued an official statement this afternoon to the effect that on account of the inabi[illegible] replace certain collections kept in the building the total loss will exceed $750,000. The Building was the gift of Sir William McDonald.

BLAZE ON BIG STUD FARM.

Sewell House Burned, but Stables and Arabian Horses Saved.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., April 5.—Returning from the station, where he had driven Mrs. S. V. V. Sewell at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning, to the Huntington Stud Farm, recently purchased by the Sewells from Randolph Huntington, Mrs. Sewell's coachman found the dwelling house in flames. An alarm was turned in, and while a squad of neighbors and servants moved things from the burning house, another group turned their attention to the stables.

In these were twenty Arabian mares and colts an dthree Arabian stallions, besides eight thoroughbred brood mares belonging to Sydney Paget. The animals were terrified by the smoke and flames and were taken out with great difficulty. The stables were not burned.

A number of valuable paintings were saved from the house before it was totally destroyed. Both Mr. Sewell and his wife are artists, and the dwelling was packed with valuable art objects. Among the paintings was a life-size portrait of Mrs. Paget. This was saved.

A pipe organ valued at $8,000 was lost. The total loss is estimated at $9,000.

It is believed that the fire was started by a coal falling to the carpet from an open grate fire in one of the rooms.

MISS McCLENAHAN HOME.

Eccentric Heiress Came to New York to Consult a Lawyer.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, April 5.—Miss Giles Gamble McClenahan, the eccentric daughter of the late William McClenahan of New York, who ran away from the McClenahan homestead, in New Canaan, Tuesday afternoon, accompanied by her nurse, Miss Annie Phillipe, Lillian Richter of 217 East Eighty-sixth Street, New York, and Dora Zeth of New Canaan, was brought back to New Canaan last evening by Dr. C. H. Scoville, her conservator.

Miss McClenahan and her friends, on arriving in New York, called on H. A. Herold, a lawyer, of 198 Broadway. Miss McClenahan asked the lawyer to do something to rid her of the restraint under which she was held. She desired to have control of her estate.

Mr. Herold called Dr. Scoville by telephone, and the physician went to New York. Miss McClenahan returned to New Canaan with him. She is being held under strict guard there. It is understood that Dr. Scoville will apply to the Probate Court for her formal commitment to a sanitarium.

EARTHQUAKES IN THE ALPS.

LONDON, April 5.—Lord Lister celebrated his eighteth birthday to-day. Congratulations poured in on him from surgeons in America and every other part of the world.

China to Raise a Foreign Loan.

LONDON, Saturday, April 6.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post says in a dispatch that the Chinese Government proposes to raise a foreign loan of $7,500,000 for the purpose of erecting and equipping arsenals and for the construction of a railroad from Peking to Kalgan, 125 miles to the northwest.

Chicago Weather Amazes Bryce.

CHICAGO, April 5.—James Bryce, the British Ambassador, who is to make an address to-morrow night, arrived here to-day. He was so much astonished by the local brand of weather that he could be induced to talk of nothing else.

STEINWAY PIANOS

The international leadership of the Steinway among pianos is not the result of accident; it is the reward of over half a century of unparalleled effort, backed by creative genius. While others are only following and imitating, the Steinways are always leading and creating.

The newest evidence of this is the Steinway Vertegrand at $500, the standard for all uprights.

Men's Spring Clothes
SATISFACTORY to Men Who Buy Them.

THE IDEA of PERMANENT SATISFACTION for the men who come here to buy Clothes is the foundation idea of this Clothing Store.

Stores do manage to get business in a big city like this by making great claims in the newspapers and living up to them only when compelled. Clothes that look well when you try them on will often fail miserably to stand any test of wear.

To us there is something in storekeeping beyond the selling of goods. And you can find that something manifested in the great stock of Spring Clothing which fills the STORE FOR MEN now.

Loeser Clothes, being made for us in special ways, have a style that can be equaled in few places. There are such variations of sizes as assure CORRECT FIT for men of practically every build—a thing that many men know it is hard to get.

Loeser Clothes, being carefully tailored in every part, not only look well at the start, but will HOLD THEIR SHAPE until they are worn out.

Sum it up and the word SATISFACTION indicates the service afforded by these Spring Clothes—a satisfaction that we believe is not to be equaled by any other ready-for-service Clothes you can buy.

Another consideration is the fact that these Clothes COST AS LITTLE OR LESS THAN CLOTHING OF INDIFFERENT CHARACTER.

The men who come back here season after season telling us that they can find in no other Store Clothing that satisfies them as well, is sufficient proof to us that we are on the right track.

2-CENT FARE BILL SIGNED BY STUART

Protest of President McCrea of the Pennsylvania Is Unheeded.

CALLS MEASURE UNJUST

In a Letter to the Governor He Explains How Rates Are Regulated.

HARRISBURG, Penn., April 5.—Gov. Stuart signed the bill to-day making the maximum rate of fare on railroads within this State 2 cents a mile. The new law goes into effect on Sept. 30 and applies to all steam railways. It prescribes a penalty of $1,000 for any corporation which violates its provisions, and also provides that a single fare need not be less than 5 cents.

A bill exempting lines less than forty miles in length from the provisions of this act is pending in the House Railroad Committee. It probably will be amended so as to apply to roads less than fifty miles in length and reported favorably. It permits such lines to charge not more than 5 cents a mile.

Every political party in Pennsylvania was pledged to a two-cent fare in the last campaign. The railroads declare that the act is unconstitutional on the ground that it is an unreasonable regulation, and they will test it in the courts.

President McCrea of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company wrote a letter to Gov. Stuart yesterday in which he said:

"Dear Sir: Before affixing your approval to the act recently passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania fixing the maximum rate to be charged for carrying passengers at 2 cents per mile, a reduction of one-third, I respectfully ask that you should give consideration to the following reasons why you should disapprove sama:

"First—The maximum rate fixed is unjust, because it will not permit the railroads of the State to collect an average rate that is a fair and proper return for the services rendered.

"I would explain that the average rate is made up by adding together the amounts received from the sale of:

	Penn. R. R. Lines east in Pennsylvania for year 1906. Av'g P. C. Rate per Mile.	of T'l Business.
One-way tickets	2.51c.	51
Round trip and excursion tickets	2.009	27
Commutation tickets	1.061	9
Mileage tickets	2.00	13
Total average rate	2.055c.	100

and dividing the total by the number of miles traveled by all passengers.

"The rates at which these various classes of tickets are sold are governed by a proper consideration of the extent and frequency of their use, the concentration of travel resulting therefrom, and the character of the service rendered.

How Returns Are Figured.

"In order to determine whether the average rate received yields a fair and just return, it is necessary to know the average cost of carrying a passenger one mile. It has been a favorite argument to say that this cannot be ascertained, but this is an error, for at least it can be determined with reasonable correctness, and particularly so when it is borne in mind that the margin for error is all in favor of making the cost too low. The method of calculation, in brief, is as follows:

"To all items of expense incurred solely on account of the conduct of passenger business are added such items of expense as are common to the conduct of both freight and passenger business, in the proportion which the passenger train mileage bears to the total passenger and freight train mileage passing over the road under consideration, or when (as in yards) a joint service is rendered, the relative division of which can be definitely fixed in accordance with the service rendered, such division is used.

"These items of cost being added together and the result divided by the number of passenger train miles, the cost per passenger train mile is obtained, and its apportionment between passenger, mail, and express business in proportion to the space assigned to each class, gives the amount chargeable to each. Taking the total amount chargeable against passenger business, and dividing it by the number of miles traveled by all passengers, gives the cost per passenger per mile.

Figuring the Average Rate.

"As thus ascertained, we have the average rate received and the average cost per passenger per mile; and if the difference is not sufficient to yield a fair return on the capital invested, plus a proper margin to produce the credit necessary to secure the additional capital for improvements needed properly to conduct the company's business for the accommodation of the public, than the average rate is too low, and either the maximum rate should be increased or an advance made in rates less than the maximum.

Statement of Costs and Receipts.

"In support of my statement that the maximum rate fixed is unjust, I beg to submit and invite your consideration of the following statements of cost and receipts, calculated in the manner described:

Passenger earnings	$26,284,732.13
Passenger expenses	20,753,529.83
Net passenger earnings in Pennsylvania	$5,531,202.30
Less proportion of taxes chargeable to passenger business	649,591.58
Balance	$4,881,610.72
Proportional part of 6% interest of money invested to enable road to do the passenger business	5,478,780.00
Deficit of passenger business in earning its proportion of interest and dividends	$597,119.28

To produce a credit that will secure additional capital to provide additional facilities required to meet the demands of constantly increasing business the Pennsylvania Railroad lines East should earn a surplus of not less than 8% on the money invested and use same in bettering the road without capitalising the expenditures; of this amount the passenger business should have contributed 2,739,365.00

Amount which passenger business was short in 1906 of earning a fair return on capital invested and establishment of credit basis $2,536,484.28

If average rate in one-way tickets (51% of total) should be reduced from 2.51 cents per mile to 2 cents per mile the reduction on the business of 1906 would amount to one-fifth of 51% of $26,284,732, equal to..... 2,600,787.81

Amount passenger business would have been short in 1906 of earning a fair return on capital invested and providing for credit, if maximum rate had been 2 cents per mile $5,097,222.09

"I would draw your attention to the fact shown by these figures:

That in 1906 the lines east of Pittsburg failed to earn 8% on the capital invested in doing a passenger business of..... $600,000.00

That if rates had been on the 2-cent basis the receipts would have been less by..... 2,660,000.00

Making the deficiency (without any consideration of a surplus) $3,260,000.00

"Should you desire personally or wish to have the Secretary of Internal Affairs examine into the correctness of these figures or further extend their scope, it will give me pleasure to place the services of our Controller and his department at your disposal.

MUST SUBMIT, SAYS JOLINE.

President of the M., K. & T.'s View of the Railroads' Position.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—A speech on the agitation against railroads was delivered to-day by A. H. Joline, President and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway system, before the board at Parsons, Kan.

"There is no stock ticker in the offices of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, and the comments of the Carnegies and the comic papers do not wring our withers," he said.

"We may as well make up our minds that if the people of this country have made up their minds to destroy our property, and the courts decided that they have the right to do so, we must submit. But I cannot believe that in any country which calls itself free and enlightened such a thing can ever come to pass.

"This is the remedy: Give the public the very best service we can and obey the laws, remembering that railroads are meant to carry freight and passengers and not merely to carry mortgages."

CAUGHT BY FALLING HOUSE.

Driver Caught by Beam Supporting House Over an Excavation.

For an hour or more yesterday afternoon Dominick Jeraldo was pinned to his seat on a dirt cart at Belleville, N. J., by a falling building. The building is owned and occupied by Dominic Cappozi. It is used as a candy store and shoemaker shop. The structure is a two-story frame building. Recently the owner made up his mind to build a basement, and the work was being done by digging the ground out from under the house and putting in props to hold it up. A slanting roadway had been made for the dirt carts to pass under the building.

Jeraldo drove in under the structure about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. His cart had been loaded and he was driving out when he accidentally struck one of the props and knocked it over. A crunching and crackling sound followed and the entire building sank, swerving to one side, but not toppling over.

The gang of Italian workmen who were digging in the cellar, and who had helped to load Jeraldo's cart, all crawled out from under the falling building and got away. They ran so far away that they could no longer hear the cries of Jeraldo, who was held down on his seat. One of the rafters had forced the Italian over on his face on the seat and was resting on his back. His horses had been crushed down and they were lying on their sides tangled up in the harness.

The workmen who had fled were soon replaced by a large crowd. There was great danger that the structure would fall to the bottom of the excavation and kill the driver.

Despite this danger, three men crawled under the toppling building. They crawled out again in a minute and cried:

"A rafter is resting on him. The building has got to be jacked up!"

A contracting firm in the neighborhood sent a corps of men to the scene, but their jacks were wholly inadequate to lift the building. The three fire companies in Belleville were called, and finally the building was raised enough on jacks and rafters to make the cutting of the beam that rested on Jaraldo possible, and that was done. The injured man was then lifted out. He had been in his perilous and painful position for over an hour and had been conscious all the time.

When physicians got to the wounded man they found that his shoulder had been broken, and several of his ribs crushed in. The driver was taken to St. Michael's Hospital. The doctors there said his condition was critical.

Cappozi, his wife, and daughter were in the candy store when the building fell. They all escaped unhurt. The horses were dragged out from under the building by ropes around their heads. They were only cut and bruised, but not seriously injured.

WILL TRY MAJOR FREMONT.

Court-Martial Named for the Son of the Famous General.

Major Francis P. Frémont of the Fifth United States Infantry, son of the late Gen. John C. Frémont, "The Pathfinder," and the first nominee of the Republican Party for the Presidency, has been ordered to face a court-martial, which will convene in the Army Building in Whitehall Street next Wednesday.

While the coming trial promises to develop sensations, the officers stationed on Governors Island would not discuss it yesterday. It was learned, however, that the charges deal with the financial affairs of Major Frémont. A number of civilians have, it is said, been subpoenaed to appear against him.

Major Frémont filed a petition in bankruptcy last May. His liabilities were given as $11,297 and cash assets as $28. The debts were contracted in Plattsburg, Mobile, Washington, and San Francisco. A number of banks held the Major's notes and there were other debts to tradesmen.

It was intimated yesterday that the present charges had nothing to do with his going into bankruptcy.

Gen. John C. Frémont was once court-martialed and found guilty of mutiny, disobedience of lawful commands of his superior officers, and conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline. This was the result of a misunderstanding between Col. Frémont, Gen. W. S. Kearney, and Commodore Stockton in 1846, when the conquest of New Mexico was under way. Frémont was tried in the arsenal at Washington, D. C., in November, 1847.

Upon an inspection of the records President Polk was not satisfied that the charge of mutiny had been sustained, and dismissed that count. The others he approved, but in view of the extenuating circumstances of the case and on Col. Frémont's record that officer was restored to rank and ordered to duty. On the same day, Feb. 16, 1848, Col. Frémont resigned his commission upon the ground that he had done nothing to merit the finding of the court against him, and could not seem to admit its justice by accepting the Executive clemency.

Transfer Verdict Set Aside.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision in an action brought by Theresa Nicholson against the New York City Railroad Company for refusal to issue a transfer to her. The Municipal Court gave judgment for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court. That judgment is now reversed. The opinion says the plaintiff did not prove that she became a passenger in the first instance in good faith.

STATE HAS TO BUY ITS CANAL BONDS

Practically No Response by Investors to the Offer of the First $5,000,000.

$300,000 TAKEN PRIVATELY

Sinking Fund Moneys Taken to Acquire the Remainder—3 Per Cents Not Attractive.

ALBANY, April 5.—Out of the $5,000,000 issue of 3 per cent. barge canal improvement bonds, advertised for sale to-day by the State Controller, only $300,000 were taken by private subscription, the State purchasing the remaining $4,700,000 from the moneys of the sinking fund.

Albert L. Judson offered to take the entire issue at 101.6323 providing the Hill bill, now pending in the Senate, be passed by the Legislature. He accompanied the offer with a check for $100,000 as security. The Hill bill referred to would exempt savings banks from the 1 per cent. State tax on surplus and undivided profits to the extent of their holdings of the State's 3 per cent. bonds. The Hill bill, which is still in the Senate Committee, is said to express the views of Controller Glynn. It was designed to encourage the purchase of the bonds.

The purchasers of the bonds are: State of New York, $4,700,000; Merchants' National Bank of New York, $100,000; Columbia National Bank of Buffalo, $100,000; First National Bank of Oswego, $35,000; First National Bank of Tonawanda, $25,000; Central National Bank of Buffalo, $25,000; Citizens' Trust Company of Brooklyn, $10,000; Mrs. E. J. Furst of La Fargeville, Jefferson County, $2,000; Montauk Bank of New York, $1,000; Spencer Trask & Co., $1,000, and the Albany County Bank, $1,000.

The failure of State Controller Glynn to sell more than a small part of the 3 per cent. barge canal improvement bonds to the banks or public yesterday caused no surprise among bankers in this city. Ever since the sale was authorized bankers have privately expressed the opinion that the sale would be a failure.

It was learned yesterday that none of the big savings banks in this city, which are usually bidders at sales of bonds of this character, had put in any bid. The present active demand for money and the lack of demand for both State and city bonds at the prices asked were given by bankers as the cause of the failure of investors to take any interest in the sale of State securities.

It was pointed out yesterday by the Controller of one of the largest savings institutions in this city, which holds probably the largest block of city bonds of any savings bank in the State, that there was nothing attractive to investors in State bonds at the prices fixed—par or better. He pointed out that the recent issue of New York City 4 per cents were at present selling at but a trifle above par, or, to be exact, 100.39, for short-term revenue bonds, and 100.05 for the 1928 4s. These 4 per cent. bonds are exempt from taxation, as are the State bonds, and, by reason of the higher rate of interest, much more attractive than the State's 3s, and at the same time are backed by security equal if not better than the State's security.

Old issues of New York City 3 per cents, are now quoted nominally at 78.45 to 80, with no sales. These bonds have within the last three or four years sold as high as 105. The old issues of city 3½s per cents are quoted at about 89¼. They have sold as high as 114.

"The investing public cannot absorb these low-priced bonds at the rate they are being issued," said the banker who gave the above information, "and it would be well to go a little slower. What is needed is an international market for bonds of this character, particularly city bonds, which are the best kind of security I would recommend for a safe investment.

"The money market seems to be clearing up somewhat, but it will be some time I think before investors will take any interest in State bonds at 3 per cent."

DOOLEY NEPHEW, SAYS THIEF.

He Snatched a Satchel and $850 and Ran—Police Get Him.

A fleet-footed thief of athletic build raced northward on Columbus Avenue yesterday morning clutching a satchel containing $850. A dozen pursuers were close behind him. In front was Mrs. Emma Sharp of 112 West 139th Street, owner of the bag.

"Stop thief! Police! Help! Oh, stop him, some one!" called Mrs. Sharp as she sprinted along.

The exertion was too much for her, and her steps began to lag. Just then the man with the satchel looked back. He stumbled and fell into the arms of a citizen and a moment later was being handcuffed by Policeman Sprague of the Sixty-eighth Street Station. Mrs. Sharp came up as the handcuffs were being slipped on the thief's wrists.

"Oh, give me my bag!" she exclaimed, and, seeing it on the ground, grabbed and opened it. The $850 was safe inside. Most of it was in small bills. The satchel was quite full.

The prisoner was taken to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, where he at first said his name was Charles Clark, but later chose "Dooley" as his family name, and said that he had given Clark in order to protect his relatives from notoriety. He said he was formerly employed on the street cars, but lost his job, was hungry and desperate, and capable of doing anything to get money.

"Any relation to Martin Dooley of the Archey Road?" asked the house Sergeant when the prisoner was through.

"Sure," replied the young man, "he's me uncle."

"What!" exclaimed the house Sergeant, looking sharply at the prisoner.

"Oh, I'm the lad what has heard me uncle tell Hennessy some of the big talk the papers print."

TEXAN MADE THREATS AGAINST ROOSEVELT

Flores Arrested Here for Deluging Pension Office with Wild Demands.

WROTE ABOUT CZOLGOSZ

Also Had Delusions About Major Warner and Nathan Straus—Under Observation.

Fearing that he might attempt to carry into effect threats which it is charged he has made against both President Roosevelt and United States Pension Commissioner Warner, Pension Examiner P. L. Cole yesterday caused the commitment to Bellevue Hospital for observation of Marcos Flores, a native of San Antonio, Texas, but of Spanish deacent, and at present a resident of this city. The commitment papers were signed by Magistrate Wahle in the Tombs Court.

The threats which Flores is alleged to have made are contained in letters with which he has deluged the Pension Office at Washington for over a year, and in which, it is charged, he has threatened dire results to President Roosevelt and Commissioner Warner unless action was taken on a pension claim of his brother Alfredo, who served in the Eighteenth Infantry during the Spanish war, and who died on last Thanksgiving Day, leaving a widow and child at 537 West Forty-seventh Street, Manhattan. These letters contain frequent references to Czolgosz, the slayer of President McKinley.

More than thirty of those letters are now in the possession of the District Attorney's office, where they were submitted by Examiner Cole after being received by him from S. W. Cudday, Chief of the Law Division of the Pension Bureau. In referring to them Mr. Cudahy said:

"They are apparently the work of a crank, or of a demented person. Many of them contain scurrilous attacks on the Commissioner of Pensions, and also veiled threats."

Flores also had a delusion that Nathan Straus had swindled him out of patents which would have been worth millions of dollars to him, and he hastened his commitment to the hospital by adding to the others threats against Mr. Straus.

Flores declares that he is proud of being an American and a Texan. In one of his letters to Mr. Warner he wrote:

"We Texans care not about consequences provided we are right. Our guns go with our hands.

In another letter, evidently inspired by the shooting of Senator Brown, he wrote:

"All I have to say is that ye who waive all responsibility in such responsible things, with so much indifference because you are not advised by Maude Adams, shall not do so in the day of Judgment. Has it come to this, that a woman must shoot you down? God knows I have borne calumny enough for me.

The Brownsville shooting also stirred Flores, for he wrote to the War Department soon afterward:

"In behalf of the President of the United States and in the rights of the Texans as a born freeman of those who gave the heroic prerogatif of a civil and religious liberty to that, my native soil, I demand that no negro troops be sent to my State to murder my little ones."

Flores's feelings apparently led him occasionally to express himself in verse, and he wrote an epitaph for Miss Helen Gould, for the purpose, he explained, "of defending Miss Gould's name by the play of words." It contains many stanzas, written in rambling atyle.

Wehner, Say Police, Was a Suicide.

Sergt. Price of the Bronx Detective Bureau, who has been investigating the finding of the body of John Wehner of 1,813 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, in the Hudson River, off the Fort Lee Ferryhouse on Wednesday night, is satisfied that the man committed suicide. Mrs. Wehner believes that her husband was murdered. A watch and chain, a gold piece, and a handful of small change were still in Wehner's pockets when the body was found, and the police have learned that he was despondent over business troubles.

DENOUNCE GRADY AND RAINES

Citizens' Union Speakers Also Get After McCarren and the Mayor.

Gov. Hughes and Police Commissioner Bingham were lauded, Mayor McClellan was severely criticised, and Senators Grady, McCarren, and Raines denounced at the meeting of the Citizens' Union last night. The meeting was in a sense the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the organization of the union in April, 1897, by Charles S. Fairchild, the late Abram S. Hewitt, and others. R. Fulton Cutting, Bishop Greer, Cyrus S. Sulzberger, Julius H. Cohen, John E. Eustis, and Robert Wilson made speeches. Mr. Wilson, who is a union labor man of thirty years' standing, was certain the union could do much good if it expended some of its energies in the sections of the city where the laboring classes live, and a great deal toward keeping the streets in those sections clean, and "stop the rushing o' the growler on Sundays."

Bishop Greer eulogized Gov. Hughes, and said that the Governor was making good his campaign pledges, and that the great mass of the people were giving him their support in the stand he had taken for the political betterment of the State.

Resolutions were passed indorsing the Hughes Administration. Mr. Eustis, who read them, regretted, he said, that Mayor McClellan was not a man more on the order of Gov. Hughes.

Mr. Sulsberger, in seconding the resolution, said:

"On one side Tom Grady, Pat McCarren, John Raines—on the other Charles E. Hughes. On one side all the vile, abhorrent forces—on the other Charles E. Hughes. Shoulder to shoulder with the Governor stand the masses of the plain people."

Julius H. Cohen, Chairman of the Legislative Committee, said there was every indication that the "Wells bill" for the relief of the municipal courts would be made a law by the present Legislature.

THE VILLAINS UNMASKED.

The country has been startled by Mr. LOEB'S exposure of "the rich man's conspiracy" to nominate a reactionary for President next year. There is some vagueness about the source through which the White House learned of the villainous plot, but it is generally believed that Senator PENROSE mentioned the matter to a faithless fellow-guest at a dinner, and so the secret was out. The fund is $5,000,000, and among the conspirators are those fine old reactionaries, Mr. WILLIAM R. HEARST, Mr. E. H. HARRIMAN, and the ROCKEFELLERS.

There is nothing very terrifying in the fund. Five million dollars is not much money. It is PENROSE'S connection with the undertaking that creates alarm. This extraordinary man is an almost ideal conspirator. Large, wise, silent, the embodiment of discretion, a master of tactics, and full of resource, he is universally considered to be capable of anything. He talks little because he thinks much. Probably he is the hardest and deepest thinker in the country—just the sort of man the ROCKEFELLERS and Mr. HARRIMAN would choose as their associates in a subterranean political venture. When it was made known that PENROSE was in the thing the experienced mind of LOEB was swift to recognize the full magnitude of the peril.

There are men, apparently sensible men, too, and we are afraid there are a good many of them, who receive this latest White House communiqué with immoderate and irreverent mirth. They say that the plan of the conspirators as outlined would be unanimously voted down at any political conference of common barn owls. For these unbelievers there is, however, a working theory which we submit for their consideration and for the exercise of the detective genius of LOEB. We suspect that the campaign to which PENROSE and the five millions have been devoted is a mere ruse, a feint to divert the Presidential attention from the real work. Very likely ten times, even twenty times, five millions has been raised—possibly the entire capital stock and bond issue of the railroad systems of the country has been pledged. In such ventures reactionary capitalists like HARRIMAN and ROCKEFELLER do not haggle about the cost. It may be that already in every State in the Union delegates to conventions have been secretly chosen and sworn on their sacred honors to vote, resolve, speak, and choose as the reactionaries shall direct. It is time for LOEB to get to work.

Still other carpers inquire what there is so terrible in the conspiracy, after all. At most it implies that certain gentlemen having views about the election next year are conferring with one another about the candidate. In this free country there have always been such conferences, hundreds of them, in the year preceding Presidential elections. The right to advocate one candidate and oppose another has been held to be one of the inherent privileges of citizenship. So that if properly accredited Republicans anywhere should choose to express a preference for the nomination of Mr. SHAW, Mr. FAIRBANKS, Mr. KNOX, Mr. CANNON, or Gov. HUGHES it is held that they would not thereby be guilty of such flagitious behavior as to invite and justify the discharge against them of White House thunderbolts accompanied by shrieks of conspiracy and treason.

These gentlemen forget that times have changed. It is true that up to a time as yet by no means remote hob-nobbing or "horseshedding" about the Presidential nomination was not held to be conspiracy; or if it was conspiracy, it was privileged. But there was a time, too, when men were permitted to carry on their business without the presence of a United States Marshal in their counting-houses, when men who conducted their private affairs honestly and in the fear of the Lord were not exposed to overmuch supervision, regulation, and penitentiary restraint simply because some of their neighbors had been sinful. All that has been changed. Acts and decisions formerly of free popular choice are now taken and made at Washington. The new era saves a lot of trouble, but until the people of the country get used to it there will, of course, be sporadic instances of reversion to the old custom. They will disappear under reproof.

There is another theory of the "rich man's conspiracy" of which frequent mention is made in the public prints. It is that the President ought to take a rest.

JAPAN AND THE PHILIPPINES.

An old "roorback" has been revived after one had reason to suppose that it had been permanently laid to rest. The rumor is that Japan desires to extend her rule southward, and to become still more an "Island Empire," or an archipelagic Power, by gaining possession and control of the Philippines.

It is true that, on the atlas, the natural extension of the northern archipelago to the southward would seem to denote the possession or control of the Philippines. Before the Treaty of Paris was formulated, which took those islands from Spain and gave them to the United States, one of the dispositions that was suggested, and it was suggested in these columns, was that an Anglo-American-Japanese protectorate should be extended over them on the basis of the "open door." But the sole control of Japan was not at that time suggested. Whenever it has been suggested since, the Japanese Government has frankly declared that it did not desire the control of the Philippines. It has fortified its denial by excellent reasons. Japan did not desire dependencies beyond its own commercial radius. Japan did not desire dependencies beyond the boundaries of the temperate zone. Japan had not unlimited money to spend, and was compelled to husband her resources for the protection of her real interests. These included the commercial control of Korea and Manchuria. They did not include any kind of control of the Philippines.

These reasons were conclusive of Japan's good faith in the minds of considerate persons. It is quite possible that some misguided Filipinos, misled by the cry of "Asia for the Asiatics," may have intrigued to substitute Japan for the United States as the suzerain of the Philippines. Such a substitution, if it were managed with due regard to the National dignity, might not be displeasing to a large number of Americans, who are weary of that control of the islands which has cost us so much and brought us so little. But we have good evidence that it would be displeasing to Japan, which has not so much money as we have to fool away upon projects either of "benevolent assimilation" or of nursing alien "wards" into a condition in which they would be able to walk alone. The persons mainly misled by the propaganda in the Philippines of substituting the rule of Japan for the rule of the United States are the Filipino propagandists themselves. If their project were successful, they would very speedily find the little finger of Japan heavier upon them than the loins of the United States.

THE SUBWAY "HOURGLASS."

Engineer RICE calls the Ninety-sixth Street junction of the Lenox Avenue and Broadway branches of the Subway "the neck of a bottle." It rather resembles the middle of an hourglass, through which expresses and locals dribble in rush hours, blockading the whole system. With the "hourglass" crossing rectified, it is estimated that the carrying capacity of the Subway local trains would be increased 50 per cent.

Mr. E. P. BRYAN of the Interborough Company has submitted a plan to the Rapid Transit Commission which, at a cost of $850,000, would do away with the "cross-over" switches at Ninety-sixth Street, providing three additional tracks between that point and 103d Street. Two new tracks would be run on the west side of the tunnel, the outermost to bring in the southbound Broadway locals and the other the southbound Broadway expresses, and one on the east side to accommodate both expresses and locals on the Lenox Avenue division. The execution of this plan would convert the morning and evening rush-hour journey, which at present resembles too much a Black Hole experience, into pleasant and rapid transit.

The Board of Estimate will hem and haw about the cost of the proposed improvement, the courts may have to be consulted, and the rights of property holders must be looked to. But Broadway at Ninety-sixth Street can amply accommodate the new tracks, and the investment is a good one, even at the debt limit. The city's percentage receipts from Subway operation would show an increase, while taxable valuations would rise more than enough to pay the cost of the new tracks.

TARIFF BLESSINGS.

Our neighbor The Tribune, with whom we have a friendly difference of opinion regarding the beneficence of the Dingley tariff, has no liking for our invitation to a discussion of foreign trade of various countries in proportion to population or wealth. This we understand to be a confession that, however large the growth of the United States in these respects, it is inferior to that of other nations, despite the help of the Dingley tariff. Since The Tribune prefers to deal with totals, we ask why, since exports of manufactures are regarded as beneficial, the United States should be thankful for any law which restricts its exports of manufactures to $686,023,000? The total is among the largest in the world, but it is under 40 per cent. of our exports, a proportion which is smaller than for any other nation in our class, except Russia, which exports only 23 per cent. in manufactures. With half our population England exports $1,892,851,000 in manufactures, or 88 per cent., and without any help from the Dingley tariff. Germany, which has a species of Dingley tariff, exports $910,017,000 in manufactures, or 66 per cent.

We cheerfully join The Tribune in congratulating Americans that their restrictive legislation has not had a more depressing effect upon exports, but if we are asked to be really joyful over Republican policies we demur, observing that the growth which The Tribune remarks is less in proportion to the trade of the previous year—neglecting population or wealth—than England's, or Belgium's, or even Spain's. We take leave to believe that, well as we have done with the Dingley tariff, we should have done better with some modification of it.

The test run over the electric road where the accident occurred at Woodlawn a few weeks ago was a duplicate of the fatal journey except in two respects—the track was double spiked and there were speed-recording instruments aboard. The spikes will doubtless remain, and why should not the recording instruments stay on the engine? No engineer is left to guess at his steam pressure or at the condition of his brakes, but he is not supplied with instruments for indicating speed, although velocities are difficult to estimate in proportion as they increase above accustomed rates. The Engineering News says that foreign engineers are supplied with speedometers, and that the neglect to supply them is a survival of primitive methods here. An instrument which may save lives is cheap at any price, and it is worth something even if it substitutes certainty for guesswork about such a condition as the rate of speed.

TO-MORROW THE NEW YORK TIMES will publish the results of inquiry made of 500 editors of Republican newspapers throughout the country as to whether President ROOSEVELT is now as popular among the people as he was when elected. It will surprise nobody to learn that Mr. ROOSEVELT is reported to be more popular than ever. But the unanimity of the replies to this effect, and the length to which the editors, as men most closely in touch with the sentiment of the country, go in asserting the overpowering strength, the deep seriousness, and the blazing enthusiasm with which the mass of the Republican Party and a large proportion of Democrats have now come to the support of the President, is an astonishing revelation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Defended the Indefensible.

Father PROUT'S eloquent and obviously sincere little essay on political contributions printed in THE TIMES yesterday illustrated very strikingly how many things not only true but undeniable a man can write, and yet be entirely wrong as regards his main contention. Of course nothing could be further from our intention than to be disrespectful to the clergy, but it was—well, just a little provocative of kindly smiles to read that "it is about time that we clergymen should come forward and define definitely the propriety and morality of political contributions."

Others than clergymen have been giving no little attention of late to that domain of propriety and morality, and they have reached conclusions—now embodied in the Criminal Code, though apparently Father PROUT doesn't know it—which differ widely from his, especially as concerns the political contributions of insurance companies and other corporations. And these conclusions—we would like to be able to sigh "alas!" but really we can't—are not going to be changed, even though he and all his brothers and cousins of the cloth were of the same opinion as to the rightness of the use by corporation officials for political purposes of money intrusted to them for purposes quite different.

Our reverend correspondent was as correct as correct could be in declaring the right of any individual to work, and, within limits, to spend his money, for the success of his party, nor does anybody question the right of organizations to collect funds to be applied to announced and legitimate ends, but experience has taught the people of this country—none too soon, and long after several other countries had learned the same lesson—that public safety and public interests demand that the financial operations of political committees be not shrouded in secrecy; that candidates for office reveal how much they spend, and for what, in running for office, and that corporation officers who feel moved to replenish party war chests do the same out of their own pockets.

Father PROUT could not well be more mistaken than he was when he wrote: "The executives of the different [insurance] companies had a perfect right with the money of the company to safeguard and propagate the political tenets most favorable to their existence, and this they could do, even though some of the stockholders in their own personal opinion and for their own personal reasons entertained different views in politics." This reads like an utterance from another age. Such sentiments are no longer heard, even in the executive meetings of Boards of Directors, and anybody who should carry them into effect, no matter how conscientiously, would be a lawbreaker, and therefore a criminal.

Secrets Kept Too Long.

Little by little the inside facts, the carefully concealed details, of the Swettenham episode are leaking out, now one in England, now one in the United States, and sooner or later, of course, we are going to know all about it.

These slow disclosures, which were inevitable and which should have been foreseen by everybody directly or indirectly concerned with the affair, have had the effect of keeping public attention fixed on what, had a different and franker policy been followed, would have been long since forgotten. The result is that the tactlessness and bad manners of the Jamaican Governor have been talked about ten or a hundred times as much as they would have been if the whole story had been told in the beginning.

The trouble was too much "diplomacy" in both London and Washington, and too little plain common sense in either. There was not the slightest danger that the peoples of the two countries would have become unduly excited if every report made had been published as soon as received and all action announced as soon as taken. The purely individual quality of the offense committed was appreciated from the start, as were its distinctly humorous elements, and the one minute chance that serious misunderstanding might follow was due to nothing except the fact that certain department officials thought that the best way out of the little mess was through a combination of—well, call them fibs, since they deceived nobody, with a lot of laborious silence.

That is extremely old-fashioned statesmanship, and more easily excusable in London than in Washington. In these days the peoples of civilized countries want to know promptly all about their own affairs—of which this was one—and they have no gratitude to spare for salaried servants who in mistaken kindness and foolish caution devote themselves to making "state secrets" out of happenings that could be better and more safely attended to if handled in the open.

To be Clean or to be Cleaned.

As the cleaning of New York's streets seems to be a job too big for anybody we can set at it, there might be hope in trying the plan of not letting them get dirty. Commissioner CRAVEN recently made a suggestion somewhat along this line, and we notice that it was repeated in one form or another by several speakers at the conference of the Academy of Medicine.

Of course, until we can finally get rid of that worst of urban nuisances, the noble horse, a very considerable amount of street cleaning will have to be done, but the amount could be much reduced if everybody would be more careful than hardly anybody is about using the streets as a dumping place for things they want to get rid of. We already have a few scores—or hundreds—of laws and ordinances prohibiting that sort of incivility, but there is not much more than a pretense of enforcing them, and it is the rarest of events to hear of anybody's getting punished for violating them. If the laws and ordinances were reduced to half a dozen, all short and comprehensible, and if punishment for their violation were made sure, prompt, and severe, the educational effect would be enormous, and we would soon find the difficulty and the magnitude of the street-cleaning problem materially lessened.

New York bellows savagely at the cost of keeping its streets—dirty. Half as much spent in keeping them clean, that is, in not letting them get unclean, might, conceivably, give vastly more satisfactory results. And it would be so beautifully simple and sensible! Also, it would be a very essential part of the "preventive medicine" about which we have heard so much of late.

THE CONSPIRACY.

The News from Washington Moves a Correspondent to Sarcasm.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This news that comes from Washington of the "conspiracy" is the most terrible we have had yet. It is lèse majesté at the least, and it may be a grave question whether it does not come under the constitutional definition of treason. For a benign ruler, as we all know, is at once the executive, legislature, and judiciary—in other words, the whole Nation as well as the individual States—and until this shocking revelation came, no one would have supposed there was any man so base as to rebel against his authority and offer opposition to him.

Such a deed as this must indeed be a "conspiracy" to be hatched out only in the dark, for if it were conducted openly it would warrant calling out the army and navy for its suppression. And to think of its wickedness! To think of revolt against the creator of the Republican Party, who out of pure gentle benevolence has let all these Senators and Representatives enter its ranks—the only man in political life who never engages in political tricks; who has lived up so faithfully to that ideal of civil service reform, the only man in this broad land who never made a deal, and after he had made one never broke it; the only man who is so truthful that he knows all other men to be liars.

Even Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln met only with ineffective opposition, and it seems almost inconceivable that against this President of ours, so much greater than all the others, the hideous impiety of opposition should exist, however secretly. E. J. S.

Disagrees on Hazing Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Wanton cruelty and probably even murder were disclosed by the investigations of the hazing at Annapolis and West Point. After twenty years of reading THE NEW YORK TIMES with benefit and satisfaction, your indorsement and defense of this almost universally abhorred practice jars me. Young Lee and the Faculty of the University of South Carolina were right. B.

Says Colfax Presided at War Congress.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Are you not mistaken when you say that Galusha A. Grow was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives in the special session of Congress called by President Lincoln for July 4, 1861? If my recollection is not at fault, Schuyler Colfax served as Speaker during that Congress. F. F.

The End of Municipal Ownership.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The funeral of Mr. Municipal Ownership and his entire family took place yesterday in Chicago. Perhaps some of the New York members are still alive. If so, give them another editorial knock.

GAS AND RAILROAD STOCKHOLDER.

New York, April 5, 1907.

WHY SHE DID IT.

As a child I was instructed that Dame
Nature was my Ma—
(Up to date I've not deducted who, per se, was my Papa,)
But as that point does not matter, never did, and never can,
I will guide this rhythmic clatter back to where I first began.

My Mama was very clever, not a doubt
upon that score,
But, alas! why was I ever made with two hands and not four?
Should my form of arms and fingers show such woeful, awful lack While the present fashion lingers and waists button down the back?

Should my girth be so inflated and my chin so formed in twos
That my breath is near abated when I struggle with my shoes?
Should my Ma have built my trestle minus
pivot, spring, or screw,
So that eye and neck must wrestle when I seek a backward view?

Did Ma think two eyes a plenty, crossed or staring straight ahead,
When she could have given twenty, placed to see four ways instead?
Did she think one tongue set wagging was enough for womankind,
When a score at steady nagging scarcely could relieve my mind?

Nature may have been my Mother, I'm not qualified to say,
But she surely made no other animal in such a way.
Possibly the old Dame's notion was to form us just and right,
But I rise to make the motion that she did it out of spite.

LURANA W. SHELDON.

NO LIQUOR LICENSE FOR WOMEN'S CLUB

Madison Square Church Puts Ban on Serving Drinks at the Colony.

MISS MARBURY REPLIES

Little Drinking Anyway, but If Members Want They Can Keep a Private Stock in Lockers.

When a TIMES reporter applied at the separate entrance for males—a side door—at the new Colony Club yesterday in the hope of asking Miss Elizabeth Marbury, Chairman of the Board of Governors, about the refusal of the officers of the Madison Square Baptist Church, across the street, to give their consent to the new woman's organization asking for a liquor license, the bellboy blushed.

"What's the matter?" asked the reporter.

"She's in the swimmin' pool, Sir," quoth the bellboy, "an' you can't see her now."

"It's a tempest in a teapot," said Miss Marbury last night. "We have never asked for any acquiescence on the part of the church across the street. Some of the men who look out for the business affairs of the club may have sounded the officers of the church, but we are not hankering for a liquor license. We can have our individual bottles if we desire to."

"Lockers?" asked the reporter.

"Yes," she replied.

"Are there many of them?"

"Quite a number, I might say," said Miss Marbury, "but I have seen little drinking in the club. Some man up State who makes a certain soft drink is winning a fortune from the club members. You ought to see how they drink that stuff. Why, the members wouldn't drink to any extent, anybow. Women are too vain to do that. They want to remain slender, and liquor produces fat. They prefer the swimming pool and the gymnasium. I put in some time myself in the pool to-day."

Miss Marbury denied emphatically again that the clubwomen had made any overtures or had started any movement to get a liquor license.

A copy of the tea card of the club showed its simple list of drinks as follows: "Lemon squash, orange phosphate, &c." Miss Marbury declared that there was nothing deceptive about the etc., unless it could be taken to heart by the members who had lockers. But at the bottom of the card it said, "Cigarettes and Cigars."

There was no attempt made by the Chairman of the Board of Governors to defend the members from the charge of smoking. Miss Marbury laughed and said:

"Why, if the reverend gentleman could see 'cigarettes and cigars' on this card he would undoubtedly declare us eternally damned."

"Anyhow," said Miss Marbury, getting back to the liquor end of the proposition, "even if we didn't have lockers, there's a place around the corner. Any member who wanted to send out and get a drink could do so. I suppose the wine merchant would sell it."

There was the other side of the story waiting on the other side of the street. Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper's congregation is one of the most influential in the city. The Parish Messenger gives such names as Joseph Millbank, financier; James C. Colgate, banker; F. M. Hoffstadt, President of the Pressed Steel Car Company of America, and R. H. Higgins, Jr., of Harvey Fisk & Co., as Trustees.

"Yes," said Dr. Tupper yesterday, "application was made that we withdraw opposition to the club being granted a liquor license. We are within 200 feet of the club, and the law compels the club to have the consent of the church before it can get a license. I turned the application over to the Board of Deacons, and they decided that it should not be granted. No Baptist church has ever granted such a request, and certainly ours will not. We turned the application over to the Rev. Hervey Wood of the National Temperance Society. It would hardly be considered likely that he would look with favor on such an application."

"Miss Marbury says no application was made," remarked the reporter.

"There was," replied Dr. Tupper, "and in writing, and a reply in writing was sent to the Secretary of the club.

The members of the Board of Deacons of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church are W. L. Sage, Charles B. Campbell, Charles E. Hunt, Charles B. Loxley, Dr. George B. Heimer, Dr. F. F. Ward, and Robert Rogers. The turning down of the petition was unanimous. It is not explained why the matter was called to the attention of the Rev. Mr. Wood, and the conclusion was drawn yesterday that in event of the club trying to secure special legislation at Albany the fight against such legislation would be conducted by the National Temperance Society, of which Mr. Wood is the Field Secretary. He is also a member of the church.

"I might say right here," said Dr. Tupper, "that there is no power on earth that could make a Baptist Church have any alliance at all with liquor drinking in any form.

"The lamentable thing in this whole matter is that any one would have taken it for granted that a church of the standing of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church would have in any way any relation with the sale of wines or liquors. As far as our church is concerned, I want to be understood as saying with firmness that nothing will move our church from the position it has taken in this matter.

"As one of our influential men said the other day, if we were to yield in this matter we might as well put over our doors: 'For Sale.'"

Dr. Wood was equally emphatic, and was quoted yesterday as saying that he had already received a letter from a rich man attacking him for his stand in the matter.

"I am not afraid, however," he said, "and intend to continue my fight against the sale of liquor."

Dr. Tupper made an effort last night to find the clerk of the Board of Deacons so that he could give out the correspondence proving that the Colony Club did make application, but the clerk did not appear at the prayer meeting, and it was impossible to get the documents.

That the altercation will cause a tempest among those members who stick to tea and those who stick to their lockers in the Colony Club there is little doubt. A good part of the membership is for keeping out liquor altogether, while there is the liberal element which wants a wine card on the table. The wine room designed for the club has never been used. It has been turned into a dressing room for the men servants.

BRIDGE CRUSH RELIEF PLAN.

Mr. Poulsen's Scheme to be Tried by Commissioner Stevenson.

What has been termed the Poulsen plan for relieving the Brooklyn Bridge crush was revived yesterday at the meeting of the Board of Estimate, and after a long debate between a delegation from Brooklyn and Bridge Commissioner Stevenson it was decided to try the plan in operation at the Coney Island terminal of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit elevated lines, where a set of tracks exactly resembling the track lay-out at the Manhattan terminal of the bridge, will be put in place. The trial will be made at the expense of Mr. Poulsen, and will be supervised by Chief Engineer Lewis of the board.

The matter came up when Mr. Stevenson brought forward for final approval the plan for erecting a temporary bridge terminal. This was opposed by the Brooklynites, and some heated arguments followed. It was suggested that the Poulsen plan be tried some night, and that the inventor act as motorman and take all the chances. Mr. Poulsen refused. Mr. Stevenson said he was ready to advertise for bids for construction of his temporary terminal, which will cost $100,000, at once. Finally it was agreed that Mr. Stevenson should go ahead and advertise, but that the contract should not be awarded until the trial of the Poulsen plan had been held. The plan consists of an arrangement of switches, which, it is asserted, will increase the capacity of the terminal.

AGREES WITH KNOWN FACTS.

The Eagle's Comment on the Story of an Odell-Hearst Deal in 1905.

The Brooklyn Eagle commented thus editorially yesterday on the story in THE TIMES as to a deal that failed in 1905 between B. B. Odell, Jr., and William Randolph Hearst over the Mayoralty nomination:

AN ODELLISM.

THE NEW YORK TIMES printe this morning a story from "a man who was close to the inside of things in the 1905 Mayoralty campaign," to the effect that Mr. Odell almost came to terms with Mr. Hearst to have the latter withdraw and name a Republican candidate whom he would support; the difficulty arising later out of too large a demand of cash contributions from Mr. Hearst. The story, if true, would of course show that the Harriman interests and the Hearst interests, at that time, were in touch, each with the other.

True or not true, the story dovetails perfectly with the known facts of the campaign. Politicians know that many Republican candidates for the Board of Aldermen and for the Assembly owed their election that year to Hearst. Politicians have guessed that legislative action favoring a recount of the Mayoralty vote in the interest of Hearst, if the latter should think he had been counted out, was promised in advance by Odell in return for the aid to G. O. P. Aldermanic and Assembly candidates. The Higgins-Wadsworth revolt put Odell out of the control of the Legislature, as that Odell could not have kept his promise if he had wanted to. But there were indications that Harriman and Odell had weakened in this matter, and it is a fact that no strenuous effort for a recount, either by special law or by legislative committee, was made by what was left of the Odell following at Albany.

McCURDYS LOSE TO MUTUAL.

Suits to Recover Large Sums Held to be Properly Drawn.

Decisions were handed down by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday in five suits brought by the Mutual Life Insurance Company against Richard A. McCurdy and his associates in the management of the company. The suits were brought to recover moneys alleged to have been improperly expended and converted to the use of the defendants. Motions were made by the defendants for orders directing that the complaints be made more definite and certain. These motions were denied by Justice Bischoff. The Appellate Division affirmed the decision in all but one of the cases.

The first case decided was that against Richard A. McCurdy to recover $3,870,341.66, which it was alleged was wrongfully expended under McCurdy's direction. There was another action against him for an accounting.

The third suit was for $1,002,841.66, against Richard A. McCurdy and Robert H. McCurdy. It was alleged that this sum was wrongfully abstracted from the company's funds by the two defendants.

Another suit was against Charles H. Raymond, Louis A. Thebaud, and Richard A. McCurdy, to recover $1,250,000, on the ground of fraud.

The last suit was brought against Robert Granniss, a Trustee, to recover $917,500. It was in this case that the motion to make the complaint more definite and certain was denied by Justice Bischoff. The Justices of the Appellate Division declare that the motion in this case should be granted.

STAND BY SPELLING REFORM.

Members of Simplified Board Decide to Push the Cause.

The Simplified Spelling Board adjourned yesterday and the members went their several ways determined to fight more strenuously than ever for the cause of orthographic betterment. There was a short public session at the Waldorf-Astoria in the early morning, at which Prof. W. Le Conte Stevens of Washington and Lee University read a paper which evoked much discussion.

Charles E. Sprague told the board he had found that the women stenographers were more adverse to using the 300 shorter spellings than the men, but he did not tell why. He said that if "the ladies of fashion" would take up the reform it would give it a big impetus, out to date they always used the longest words possible, and even spelled out the dates on their stationery and silverware. He declared that one-third of the advertisements in the newspapers and magazines spelled catalogue without the "ue."

At the executive session William Archer, the English dramatic critic and author, read a paper on the simplification of spelling, making several suggestions from his observations in England and discussing the methods by which the support of England and all her possessions might be won over to the cause.

Prof. Lounsbury of Yale, President of the board, said that he had found that the British were very slow to take a new idea into their heads, but it would not surprise him to see Great Britain put through some sort of spelling reform before America did.

The Executive Committee did not elect a Chairman before it adjourned. It was said that it might hold a meeting next Wednesday and do so.

$372.50 FOR A STAMP.

A Total of $5,000 Realized at Collectors' Club Sale.

The rare Brattleboro Postmaster's provisional five-cent stamp of 1845, which was described in THE TIMES of last Sunday, fetched $372.50 at the sale held last night in the Collectors' Club in West Twenty-sixth Street, by John A. Kleeman. A four-cent United States stamp, issue of 1901, the centre inverted, brought $54. A British Board of Education one-shilling (used) stamp, Queen's head, sold for $23.50, and a five-pence King's head, used specimen, brought $31. A Lagos, 1904, ten-shilling stamp fetched $40. A three-cent United States, unused, issue of August, 1861, fetched $22.60. A one-dollar British Columbia, unused, issue of 1868, brought $26.25. A one-franc of France, issue of 1849, a fine specimen fetched $25.50.

The first part of the sale, consisting entirely of stamps issued since 1900, brought a total of $2,523, showing how brisk the demand is for even recently issued stamps. The grand total was $5,000.

TO AVOID TAX FRAUDS.

Swearing Off by Affidavit Abolished—Objectors Must Appear.

As a result of the investigation begun in the Bureau for the Collection of the Arrears of Personal Taxes by Corporation Counsel Ellison, initiated with the removal of James P. Keenan as head of the bureau, notice has been given by Mr. Ellison that hereafter no affidavits will be received from people wishing to have their old assessments reduced or remitted, and foreign corporations will not be allowed to "swear off."

By stopping these two things Mr. Ellison hopes to end the business of the lawyer tax manipulators. Hereafter it will be necessary for the taxpayer to appear in person and submit to an examination. With regard to the foreign corporations, Mr. Ellison, finding that the law gives the city little or no chance of collecting the arrears, intends from time to time to give to the newspapers lists of the corporations which do the bulk of their business in this city, but which consistently refuse to pay taxes on personal property. In the course of time the Corporation Counsel believes the corporations will be shamed into paying up, or else legislation will be obtainable giving the city an opportunity to recover.

Mr. Keenan wrote Mr. Ellison yesterday, recalling that his request for a vacation was for one or two days in extent only, and that it was due to the fact that there seemed to be no work for him to do. He reported for duty yesterday as usual. Mr. Pierce, who was placed in Mr. Keenan's position, is thoroughly investigating each affidavit filed in the office for the remission of personal taxes and the expectation is that he will find many that need explaining.

Mr. Ellison suggests that after the Receiver of Taxes has exhausted all means of collection the cases be referred to his office, where suit will be commenced.

HIGH PRICES AGAIN AT WHITE AUCTION

$27,398 Obtained at Second Day's Sale of Dead Architect's Effects.

SOCIETY OUT IN FORCE

David Belasco Prominent Among the Bidders—Venetian Chest Goes to the Metropolitan Museum.

The second afternoon of the Stanford White sale was again a social event yesterday. Many prominent people were present, their automobiles and carriages filling the street outside the house while the sale was in progress. Again the prices were high and the bidding active. The total returns of the day were $27,398.50.

There was a less elaborate display of millinery yesterday, by no means as large a crowd, and a larger proportion of men. Nor did the bidders come as early as on the first day. The doors of the rooms, where the sale opened, were closed until the last minute to give the latecomers a good chance for seats, but there was plenty of room.

Keeping track of the sale was an intellectual problem, and before it had closed the problem became something of a physical one. The articles were catalogued by rooms and sold according to character and size, the numbers skipping from page to page in a manner that was disconcerting. The smaller articles and such chairs and small desks as could be conveniently moved were sold in the music room, and when these had been disposed of the crowd followed the auctioneer from room to room like a flock of sheep.

They started from the art gallery at the top of the house, wandered to the bedroom and library floor, down again to the drawing room, and ended on the entrance floor in the hall and reception rooms. The large number of men present, excitement over the bids, and Mr. Kirby in the centre, made the place look at times like an uptown branch of the Stock Exchange.

Belasco an Active Bidder.

Mr. Belasco was again present, and when his heart was set on anything, he bid his opponents down in a quiet, Napoleonic way that was delightful to witness. Only one price stopped him. This was in the bidding for an elaborate Celestial globe of the sixteenth century, an immense affair, showing constellations and figures painted in colors, mounted on a standard making it over six feet high.

The price was getting well up into the hundreds. Mr. Belasco had bid down half a dozen would-be purchasers, and another had come in whose bids he was quietly raising with continued nods of the head, when some one whispered to him that W. R. Hearst was his opponent. This was in the big, raftered art gallery. Mr. Belasco turned around and smiled; Mr. Hearst smiled back again, made the bid $500, and Mr. Belasco gave up. But he had already made enough purchases to stage a new play.

Mr. Damesbury gave the touch of comedy to the afternoon's sale. Mr. Damesbury had apparently a desire for musical instruments, of which a number were being sold as he came in. A harp, an Apache Indian tambourine, a lute, or a guitar, it was apparently all one to him, but unfortunately he always put in his bid just a moment after the auctioneer's pencil had dropped and in a fashion that greatly interested the other bidders. Finally he dropped in on time for an "early German harp," which was knocked down to him for $35, and a few minutes later he obtained a Russian sledge seat for $50.

"Thank fortune," he exclaimed with feeling, "I've got something," and tucking his tall hat under his arm and shutting his eyes he went calmly to sleep.

Prices went to over $1,000 for the rugs. Howard Greenley paid $1,200 for an antique Afghan rug; a big Khorassan rug, something over 17 by 17 feet square, brought $1,025, and there was one bid of $1,000 for a Hispano-Moresque rug of the fifteenth century, 17 feet by 10. Mrs. Cooper Hewitt paid $710 for a Louis XIV. four-fold screen, with Flemish tapestry panels of fruit and floral design.

Chairs went, many of them very high, $200 and $300 apiece, and two throne armchairs of the Italian Renaissance period brought $470 each. A pair of andirons of antique wrought iron sold for $230. Each was formed of only a short upright bar of iron surmounted by a brass ball top. A pair of brass Colonial andirons, of size for an ordinary fireplace and a style that one may see anywhere, brought $50.

Chinese Bedstead Went Cheap.

One piece which was really low was a large antique Chinese bedstead of teakwood. This was made after the order of the Colonial four-post bedstead with a canopy top, but the pieces around the top and four corner supports were of carved teakwood strips in place of posts. With this went the mattress and springs, and all brought $110.

A late seventeenth century Venetian chest, with ivory intaglios, went to the Metropolitan Art Museum for $350. The Princeton Club, which is to occupy the building, bought eight beautiful carved oak dining chairs, Henry II. style, for $225.

Rubber plants of the variety which has made Brooklyn famous, brought varied prices yesterday. A collection of good-sized rubber plants—small trees—in a square wooden tub in the conservatory-like window of the drawing room brought $22.50, and another lot in a round wooden tub $30. A man who had prevented one woman from bidding on these said to her: "Why, you can buy a forest for $25."

Immediately afterward a tall palm tree in the hall could hardly find bidders, but finally sold for $10, and two other big rubber plants for $10 and $6, respectively.

Following are a number of the people present, some of whom were purchasers: Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. James Brown, Miss Mary Field, Mrs. Daniel Bacon, Miss Moran, Miss Jones, Mrs. A. T. Van Nest, Mrs. H. A. Alexander, Miss Lewis, Miss Elsie De Wolf, Mrs. S. M. Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brokaw, Mrs. J. W. Alexander, S. B. T. Trowbridge, W. Hinckle Smith, C. Grant La Farge, Donn Barber, Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Vermilye, Mrs. J. Howard Ford, Mrs. Grenville Emmet, Mrs. William Barret, Mrs. W. E. Hoag, Mrs. F. L. Eldridge, Mrs. H. S. Villard, Mrs. Franklin Bartlett, I. N. P. Stokes, Melville Upton, A. H. Rutherford, G. W. Curtis, and G. G. Ernst.

DUTY ON CEILINGS PAID.

Unknown Buyer of Rarities Settles with the Government.

PROVIDENCE, April 5.—Twelve cases of antique painted ceilings which were seized by customs officials while in transit through this city in December last have been claimed. A settlement was effected through United States District Attorney Charles A. Wilson. The ceilings were delivered this afternoon, and will be shipped to New York to-night. The price agreed upon was $2,700.

It is not known here to whom they are to be delivered.

City Provides Hammocks for Babies.

The Bayonne (N. J.) Park Commission, at a meeting last night, voted to provide hammocks beneath trees for babies this Summer in the new City Park facing Newark Bay, from Sixteenth to Nineteenth Street. A spacious playground is to be provided to contain two baseball diamonds and two tennis courts.

BROKAW COTILLION DANCED AT SHERRY'S

Novel Favors a Feature of One of the Season's Largest Society Gatherings.

MANY WEDDINGS TO-DAY

Miss Carter to Marry Lewis Spencer Morris—Mrs. Gulliver's Musicale — Some Social Notes.

One of the largest cotillions of the Easter season was given in the small ballroom of Sherry's last night by George Tuttle Brokaw, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac V. Brokaw. Many persons well known in Newport and Narragansett Pier society were present, and even Tuxedo and Philadelphia were represented at the dance. The ballroom was decorated with Spring flowers.

The favors consisted of aigrettes and cigarettes, Japanese cherry parasols and bamboo canes, hats and electric lanterns, rose bags and bridge scores, and brocade blotters and animal penwipers. A feature of the evening was a large paper tree with umbrellalike top, which was hung with floral favors, consisting of wands and tinsels, illuminated with colored electric lights.

Formal dancing was enjoyed in the early hours of the evening, and a supper was served at midnight. There were thirty round tables, with eight guests at each table. After supper the cotillion was danced, Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw leading.

Mrs. Isaac V. Brokaw, mother of the host, received.

LAST FRIDAY ASSEMBLY.

Eighth Season of the Dances Ended at Delmonico's.

The last of the Friday evening dances took place last night in the ballroom of Delmonico's, and was largely attended. The ballroom was artistically decorated for the occasion with many Japanese lanterns, which gave a picturesque effect to the assembly. The dance concluded the eighth season of the assemblies, which have been managed by Mrs. J. G. Wentz.

The series have proved popular. It was thought that last night's dance would terminate the Friday evening events, but it is likely that several complimentary dances will be arranged for next season. The patronesses of the assemblies who received are Mrs. J. G. Wentz, Mrs. Richard B. Leake, Mrs. Wendell C. Phillips, Mrs. James B. Curtis, Mrs. John H. Henshaw, Mrs. George W. Van Vlack, Mrs. Theodore Wood, Mrs. C. Nestelle Bovee, Mrs. Benjamin Blossom, Mrs. Travers Carmen, and Mrs. William K. Mittendorf.

There was dancing until 2:30 o'clock this morning.

MANY WEDDINGS TO-DAY.

Miss Coster to Wed Mr. Morris—Home Ceremony for Miss Struthers.

There will be an unusual number of fashionable weddings to-day. That of Miss Emily Pell Coster and Lewis Spencer Morris will take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles Coster, at 4 o'clock, and relatives only will witness it. A small reception will follow.

The wedding of Miss Wenonah Wetmore, daughter of Mrs. Markoe, and Arthur L. Devens of Boston will take place in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Square, at 3:30 o'clock. It will be followed by a small reception at the home of Dr. James W. Markoe and Mrs. Markoe, 12 West Fifty-fifth Street.

The marriage of Miss Louise B. Lockwood, a daughter of Mrs. Le Grand Lockwood, and Francis B. Thurber, Jr., will take place in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, and this will be followed by a reception at the Lockwood home, 441 Park Avenue.

Mrs. Grace T. Parker, daughter of Mrs. Frank Hartley, and Dr. Leander Shearer will be married at 4:30 o'clock in Trinity Chapel, in West Twenty-fifth Street, and a reception at the home of Dr. Frank Hartley, 61 West Forty-ninth Street, will follow.

The wedding of Miss Marie Wallen Struthers and Lieut. George E. Ball, U. S. A., will be a home wedding, and will take place at the home of Mrs. Struthers, 341 Madison Avenue. The reception will be for intimate friends only. Still another marriage will be that of Miss Emma Brace, daughter of Mrs. Charles Loring Brace, and Henry H. Donaldson in the chantry of Grace Church.

MISS FISH TO WED IN JUNE.

Ceremony to Take Place in St. Bartholomew's Church.

The wedding of Miss Marion Fish and Albert Z. Gray, son of Judge John Clinton Gray, will be celebrated in St. Bartholomew's Church at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, June 12. Miss Fish will have her cousin, Miss Janet Fish, as her maid of honer, and there will be no bridesmaids.

The best man and ushere have not yet been elected. A reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, 25 East Seventy-eighth Street, will follow.

Mr. Gray has already leased a furnished house on Long Island, and he and his bride will spend the coming Autumn and Winter there, as both are fond of hunting and outdoor sports. The engagement of Miss Fish and Mr. Gray was announced in THE TIMES on March 16.

White-Arnold Wedding.

Miss Emily J. Arnold, daughter of Mrs. Glover C. Arnold of 114 East Sixty-fifth Street, was married on Tuesday to Glenn William White of this city. The ceremony took place in the chantry of the Church of the Transfiguration, the Rev. Dr. Houghton officiating. Miss Mary Selena Arnold, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses Annie Arnold, Marie Ives, Isabel Allen, Alice Mead, and Mabel Cleveland. Allen H. Nelson was best man.

The ushers were the Rev. Clarence Clark Sylvester and the Rev. Robert Trenbach. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride, at which only the family and intimate friends were invited.

Mrs. Gulliver's Musicale.

There was a musicale on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Gulliver in East Fifty-sixth. The Misses Curtis, Graham, McCulloh, and Sterling and Mrs. Coe sang. Among those present were Mrs. Holbrook Curtis, Mme. Bressler-Gianoli, Mrs. John Lamson, Mrs. Elliott Schenck, and the Misses Preston, Marvin, Marti, Sands, and Hoffman. Mrs. Kate Baxter accompanied the singers.

Social Notes.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The Sixty Couples Cotillion, one of the most important social organizations in Washington, gave its last function for this season last evening in Rauscher's Ball Rooms. The Marine Band played for the dancing, and the cotillion began at midnight, Mrs. Charles W. Campbell and Andrew Y. Bradley leading.

The wedding of Miss Rose Charlton Wellman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wellman, and Leroy Chamberlin, will take place in the Wellman home to-morrow afternoon. The wedding will be a very small and private one, and the bride and bridegroom will leave immediately afterward for their future home in Chicago. Miss Wellman is a former student of the George Washington University and the University of Wisconsin, in Madison, Wis. The Rev. Roger Tyler, rector of Christ Church, Hamilton, Va., will perform the ceremony. Only the parents and sisters of the bride and the mother and sisters and brothers of the bridegroom will be present owing to the rather serious illness of Col. Chamberlin, who will not be able to be present.

Capt. and Mrs. W. H. Southerland entertained a dinner company of young people this evening.

Capt. and Mrs. Ryan, the former the Military Attaché of the British Embassy, have returned to Washington after an interesting fishing trip in the South. They were the guests of Col. Thompson at his famous place, The Everglades, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wallace Mein, who were married in Washington yesterday, will sail to-morrow from New York for the first stage of their journey to their future home in Johannesburg, South Africa.

MISS BINGHAM WINS HER AUDIENCE

Tells Hearers from the Stage Illness, Not Fright, Kept Her from Acting.

WILL FINISH HER RUN

Actress Says She Doesn't Fear Injunction Proceedings Threatened by the Authors of the "Lilac Room."

Amelia Bingham made a remarkable speech from the stage of Weber's Theatre last night after the third act of "The Lilac Room," the play which she produced on Wednesday night and which was so severely criticised that the shock made her ill and prevented her from appearing on Thursday night. The house last night was small, but rumors that Miss Bingham would make a speech had been current in Broadway, and much interest was manifested.

After the applause, which was not very great or prolonged, had subsided Miss Bingham appeared in the centre of the stage and with a gesture as of defiance threw a small paper which she held in her hand into the nearest chair. She paused for a moment, surveying the audience. Then, as it were, she plunged in headforemost.

"I want to thank my friends for coming here to-night," said Miss Bingham. "I am sure they are my friends or they wouldn't have come. They haven't heard anything much in praise of the play, myself, or the production.

"The reason that I didn't appear last night was not that I did not have the courage to come."

Miss Bingham, with indignation in her eye, vigorously challenged any suggestion that she had deserted or had intended to desert the ship. "I did not play last night because I was sick and the doctor said I must not leave my bed," she continued. "I have been playing in Texas and the other Southern States where the temperature has been 98 in the shade, and I suppose the change in climate had something to do with it. Besides, when I came to New York I brought some New Orleans malaria with me. That was the reason why I failed to appear last night—not because I didn't dare to. This is the first time I ever missed a performance in all my career, and I am ashamed of it—heartily ashamed. I had a chill. I would have come anyhow if my teeth hadn't chattered so I couldn't talk.

"When I took this play I thought I had a good property. I have no right to complain, for out of six plays I have selected five money makers. No one can tell what a play will be—or Charles Frohman wouldn't have refused 'The Lion and the Mouse,' would he?

"I played this play for six months on tour to profitable business. But I admit that most of the stops were one-night stands, and that the house was sold out in advance. If you want to learn the truth about a piece you must come home to find it out. If I have a bad piece of property I am glad that my friends on the New York papers have had the kindness to tell me that I am wasting my time."

Miss Bingham ceased for a moment, and the audience, recognizing her earnestness and fairness, applauded vigorously.

"They have said that the play is bad, that I am bad, and that the production is bad," continued the actress. "In addition to all this, I have to-night received a telegram from the authors saying that they are going to get an injunction. They say that I have added lines. Well, I have added lines—and it is a blessed good thing I did, too. If you don't believe that come to my house, and see the original manuscript. If there is any injunction lying around loose nothing would please me better than to have them come and serve it on me.

"I have the theatre for three weeks and I am going to play the engagement. I am going to be true to Mr. Weber and my family of twenty behind the scenes. I hope the public will have enough American curiosity to want to know just how bad it all is. That is the way they can help us pay for the electric sign outside and the salaries inside."

Miss Bingham's speech completely won the hearts of the audience, which clapped loud and long. The impression in her favor was also enhanced by the fact that, in the earlier part of the speech, two women in the orchestra rose and, with audibly impolite comments, left the theatre. The manager said that one of these women was a sister of Beulah Dix, coauthor of the play with Evelyn Greenleaf Sutherland.

The action on the part of the authors, to which Miss Bingham referred, was explained last night by a statement from the offices of Miss Marbury, the play agent. This statement said that the authors had notified Miss Amelia Bingham of the cancellation of the contract under which she produced the play by reason of the violation of important clauses in the contract. "The authors took this course of action," says the notice, "particularly as the producers had materially changed lines and situations in the play without the consent of Mrs. Sutherland and Miss Dix, and, in fact, absolutely against their wishes and instructions."

The Friars Entertain Novelli.

Signor Ermete Novelli, the Italian actor, and Henry Miller, the Broadway star, were the guests of the Friars at a dinner at the Café des Beaux Arts last night. Wells Hawkes presided, and Signor Novelli made a speech in Italian. Mr. Miller spoke in English. Both speeches were applauded.

FOOD.

SURE

Fresh Air and Postum a Health Combination Hard to Beat.

"Four years ago," writes a Vermont lady, "I was a victim of indigestion. Everything I ate distressed me—gave me nausea and formed gas in my stomach, which was very annoying.

"I had palpitation so bad I could not lie on my left side, and began to think my heart must be affected. I had used coffee for 25 years, and thought it would be impossible to give it up, as I usually had nothing for breakfast but a roll and a cup of coffee.

"My indigestion grew worse, in spite of doctoring, and I felt obliged to try something else. I drank chocolate and cocoa, but soon tired of them.

"The doctor had ordered my husband to stop drinking coffee on account of heart trouble, so he was using Postum and wanted me to try that. I took one cup of it as our servant prepared it, and thought it was wretched stuff.

"I was getting desperate when the cook left me and I had to make Postum for my husband. Then it was that I studied the directions on the package and wondered if the girl had been boiling it long enough.

"I cooked it fully 20 minutes and was surprised to find it most palatable. I found that rich cream improved it as much as it did coffee. I also learned that Postum tasted better, and it was easier to prepare it the night before.

"I put two heaping tablespoonfuls into a square of cheese cloth, tied it tightly, dropped it into a clean coffee pot, poured over it three cupfuls of cold water, and let it stand covered until morning.

"Then it was boiled thirty minutes, and we had two large cups of a delicious drink, after cream and sugar had been added. It has a rich delicious flavor of its own, and we have used nothing else for four years.

"Postum and Fresh Air have cured us of dyspepsia and seeming heart trouble, and we have taken a new lease of life." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"A NIGHT OFF" IN ITALIAN.

Capital Performance of the Farce by Signor Novelli and His Company.

Moser and Schonthau's famous farce, which Augustin Daly's company used to act under the title of "A Night Off," served for an uproarious evening at the Lyric last night, where it was produced by the Italian company, with Signor Novelli in the rôle of the barn-stormer, known to the English stage as Marcus Brutus Snap, but in this case changed in name to Tromboni.

There are few funnier farces than this, and the Italian company played it with fine spirit and go, Signor Novelli himself being indescribably amusing in the rôle which Henry Leclerc used to play so well at Daly's. His description of how the parrot broke up the show was only one of a number of side-splitting features in a most enjoyable characterization. James Lewis's old part of the Professor was played excellently by Signor Piamonti, and the two younger men of the piece, identified here with the name of John Drew and Otis Skinner, were well done by Signors Pescatore and Betrone.

In Ada Rehan's old part Signorina Rossi was most vivacious and engaging.

Signoras Giannini, Leghezza, and Fantoni were others who helped the farce to success.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE BENEFIT

Bisson's "Chateau Historique" Produced at Hudson Theatre.

The Cercle Dramatique de l'Alliance Française gave a benefit performance at the Hudson Theatre yesterday afternoon for the Friendly Aid Settlement. Heretofore the productions have been presented at the Carnegie Lyceum. Beginning next season, a regular series of subscription performances is to be offered, and the plays first presented in New York will be repeated in Boston, Philadelphia, and one or two of the other cities within easy traveling distance.

The audience yesterday afternoon was in the main a French audience. The play was a recent Paris success, "Château Historique," by A. Bisson and J. Berr de Turique. It is a comedy in three acts and, like many ingeniously contrived French pieces, without change of scene.

The comedy tells the story of a family which inhabits a "Château Historique," formerly the home of Jean Jacques Rousseau and recently occupied by the famous poet and novelist, Paul Coudray. The leading characters are the father, his two daughters, the husband of the elder, Marguerite; their brother, and a friend of the husband already mentioned. The women of the family, with the exception of the younger sister, have lost their heads over the verses of M. Coudray. The husband, who is violently practical, is also violently jealous at this infatuation of his wife for a man whom she has never even seen, though she has been at some expense to collect some of his letters, three of his calling cards, and a photograph. The husband persuades his friend, Claude, to pretend that he is the poet and to disgust the family by assuming worse than poetic manners. The difficulty is that Claude is susceptible, and it is hard for him to keep his bargain.

Claude falls in love with the younger sister, and this leads to innumerable complications of a humorous nature.

The production would have done credit to a professional company. Not only were the parts well played, but the players were well cast and admirably made up. The character work of H. C. Olinger as the old father and Nelly Duys as the maiden "tante" was much applauded. Georges Monod appeared as Claude, and the two sisters were charmingly done by Juliette Cazeaud and Marie L. Girault. Rene Wildenstein was the practical husband.

Keeps Up American Playgoers' Row.

Leonard Landes, ex-Treasurer of the American Playgoers, has sent to the members of the society a statement contrasting the results obtained during his tenure of office with those obtained by the present management. He says that, though he left nearly $400 in the Treasury when he resigned on Dec. 5, the society is now in debt. He asserts that under his guidance the cost of an average meeting was $50 or $55, and that the present rate is about $141.

Society Aid for Actors' Fund Fair.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish has taken the chairmanship of the floral booth of the Actors' Fund Fair. Among the women who are to serve with her on the committee are Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. Sidney Dillon Ripley, Mrs. Harry Peters, Mrs. Glen Collins, Miss Mollie Hare, Miss Gwendolin Burden, Miss Ada de Acosta, Miss Janet Fish, Miss Marian Fish, and Miss Rosamond Street.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

The next meeting of the American Playgoers will be held on Sunday evening at the Hotel Astor.

The souvenir programme of the third annual Benefit of the Actors' Society of America at the Hudson Theatre on the afternoon of April 9 will contain drawings by Theodore Friebus, Archie Gunn, Elizabeth Curtis, Hy. Mayer, and J. Ferguson.

Madison Corey, manager of "The Sultan of Sulu" and "Peggy from Paris" companies, sails this morning for London, whence he will go to Paris and make an automobile tour of France and Germany. He expects to meet Henry W. Savage in Berlin and return to this country about June 15.

A third mass meeting of the women workers for the Actors' Fund Fair has been called for 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning at the Majestic Theatre to consider details of importance.

A special matinee performance of "The Reckoning" was given at the Berkeley Lyceum yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the Bide-a-Wee home for animals. The result was a financial success. The money will go toward establishing a new home.

BARNUM & BAILEY PROFITS.

Directors Report Them Small, but Expect 1907 to Do Better.

The circus as a money-maker promises to do better this year than in the past, according to a circular issued to the shareholders by the Directors of the Barnum & Bailey Circus Company, which is an English corporation. Though the company paid dividends of 10 per cent., 6 per cent., and 7½ per cent., respectively, for the three years previous to Oct. 28, 1905, an examination of the books for the three years from 1903 to 1906 made by expert accountants at the instance of the new Directors who went into office after the death of J. A. Bailey, revealed the fact that these disbursements were to a large extent made out of the accumulated surplus profits.

The reports of the accountants show that the net profits since 1902, including interest on bank deposits, transfer fees, rental of Buffalo Bill equipments, and receipts from all sources amounted to only $216,100, while the total dividends paid were approximately $313,335. The deficit supplied out of surplus was thus nearly $100,000.

One result of the accountants' work is the revelation that a mistake of over $73,000 was made in computing the profits for 1906, which were reported at $82,500, when actually they were less than $10,000.

The gross receipts for 1906, as originally reported, amounted to $1,507,740, against $1,324,120 in 1905, but a heavy increase in expenses reduced the net profit to $106,470, against $420,215 in the previous year.

The accountants have cut the gross receipts of 1906 to $1,498,440, at the same time increasing expenses from $1,401,270 to $1,489,970. For the preceding year the correction of the accounts reduces the profit from $420,215 to $106,755.

Hamilton Glee Concert To-night.

The Hamilton College Glee and Banjo Club, thirty-four strong, will give a concert at the Waldorf-Astoria this evening at 8:30 o'clock. This is the first attempt on the part of Hamilton musicians to invade the New York field. The college has a large body of alumni in and about the city, and a big attendance is expected at the concert.

SINGER BESIEGED IN HOTEL ROOMS

Bessie Abott, Suing Conried, Has Exciting Day at the Belleclaire.

TRY TO SUBPOENA HER?

False Names Given in Attempt to See Her—Tells of Trouble with Metropolitan Director.

Bessie Abott, the young soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House, who has decided, if the courts will let her, to part company with Heinrich Conried, had several exciting experiences in her apartments at the Hotel Belleclaire yesterday. According to the singer, emissaries she knew not of whom attempted to gain admittance to her room by giving the names of employes of the opera house.

One man sent up the name of William Small. Now, "Willie" is well known to all the members of the opera company, and when a lark-haired man of 40 appeared in Miss Abott's room she screamed.

"Who are you?" she cried.

"I am Mr. Mapleson's ambassador," said the stranger.

"Tell him to write, but do not come near me. Why did you use the wrong name?" cried the soprano, and then the door was slammed.

Later, according to the clerk of the hotel, the police were sent for to guard the singer. Another version of the affair was that a youth who had gained admittance to the singer's room had a subpoena which he tried to serve. Miss Abbott, who is ill, spent most of the day in bed.

"There is scarcely anything I can say," Miss Abott told a TIMES reporter, "except that Mr. Conried has not kept his promises and I am suing him for damages. Every year he meets me with a smile and promises me all sorts of things. This year I asked him to put some of this polite conversation into writing and he wouldn't. So I am suing him.

"I haven't seen Mr. Hammerstein, and I had not planned to go to the Manhattan. In fact, I don't know what I shall do next year. Do see my lawyer, Mr. Hartridge. He knows much more about this than I can tell you. Besides, I have promised both my physician and my lawyer not to talk."

GIANOLI HEARS CALVE.

Carmen Sung for the Seventeenth Time at the Manhattan.

Mme. Bressler-Gianoli watched Mme. Calvé in "Carmen" from a stage box at the Manhattan Opera House last night. It was the seventeenth performance of the Bizet opera at this theatre. Emma Trentini is still too ill to appear, and Mme. Gilibert sang the rôle of Frasquita, but Mme. Giaconia returned to her part.

Miss Zeppilli sang the part of Micaela again very charmingly, and Charles Dalmorès was the Don José. Mr. Séveilhac was the Escamillo, and Mr. Campanini conducted. The audience filled the house.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Large Audience Pleased by First of Two Extra Performances.

The Philharmonic Society, Wassily Safonoff conductor, gave the first of two extra concerts yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. The stage was banked with Spring flowers, and the large audience turned the concert into a gala occasion.

Mr. Safonoff had prepared a programme which included Tschaikowski's "Symphony Pathétique," Rubinstein's E flat major piano concerto, and the overture to "Tannhäuser." The first number was the symphony, which has rarely had a better reading in New York. The pathos of the first movement, the grace of the second, the intensity of the third, and the tragedy of the fourth were all brought out by this batonless conductor. The third movement especially was played with an abandon, and several novel effects, including a sudden fortissimo drum beat, which made it throb with a new interest. The hopelessness depicted in the final adagio became crushing under this Russian's waving fingers, and as the last notes died away the audience was so affected that there was silence for some time before the applause broke out.

Josef Lhévinne was the soloist of the occasion, playing Rubinstein's fifth piano concerto, a work which he had performed in New York with the Russian Symphony Society under Mr. Safonoff in January, 1906. It is tremendously difficult, very brilliant, but not particularly grateful, and not of the greatest musical moment. It gives little scope for Mr. Lhévinne to display those qualities which are his.

The concert ended with the "Tannhäuser" overture. The same programme will be repeated to-night.

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA ROW.

Manager Wilson Resigns After Quarrel with Conductor Paur.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 5.—It is announced to-day that Manager George H. Wilson of the Pittsburg Orchestra has resigned because he could not get along with Conductor Emil Paur. There are rumors of a general upheaval in spite of the fact that the orchestra is to take a prominent part in the dedication exercises at the Carnegie Institute next week.

Mr. Wilson admits that he has resigned, and it is authoritatively reported that Gustave Schlotterbeck of New York will be his successor. Mr. Wilson's friends declare that the desire of Mr. Paur to shine as a pianist and at the same time advertise a certain make of piano caused the rupture between them.

Three years ago Mr. Wilson had a quarrel with Victor Herbert, and managed to force the latter out of the position of conductor by going to Vienna and bringing Mr. Paur here as leader. Mr. Paur formerly received $10,000 a year. This year the Directors of the orchestra raised his salary to $12,000, and also made other concessions which pushed Mr. Wilson into the background.

CORNETIST COULDN'T PLAY.

But He Sued Hammerstein for Three Minutes' Work—He Lost.

Oscar Hammerstein, accompanied by Nathan Vidaver, his attorney, and Signor Campanini, appeared in the City Court yesterday before Judge Green as defendants in a suit brought by an alleged cornetist named Weary, who wanted a year's salary for a three minutes' performance at one rehearsal. Mr. Weary did not appear and the case was dismissed.

"The man came to a rehearsal," said Mr. Hammerstein yesterday, "and Mr. Campanini found he wouldn't do. He couldn't read the music and he couldn't play it. So we didn't keep him, and now he wants a year's wages."

Hammerstein Fulton Statue Benefit.

Members of the Robert Fulton Monument Association announced yesterday that Oscar Hammerstein will devote one night in the early Fall to a benefit for the association at his Manhattan Opera House, at which all of his operatic stars will appear. The association has accepted the offer, and the date for the event will be announced later.

"MASKS AND FACES" REVIVED.

With Ben Greet in an Amusing Performance of Triplet.

Mr. Ben Greet and his company appeared at the Garden yesterday afternoon in Tom Taylor and Charles Reade's familiar old comedy, "Masks and Faces." One says familiar rather by force of habit, for, as a matter of fact, the piece is none too well known to the newer generation of playgoers, though its main incidents, served up in various disguises, have formed the basis of more than one of the so-called romantic comedies with which they are familiar.

"Masks and Faces" is chiefly useful for the opportunities that are provided in the rôle of dashing Peg Woffington, and of those opportunities a long line of distinguished players have availed themselves since the days of the beautiful Mrs. Stirling and the old London Haymarket. In this country the piece was first acted at Burton's, with Miss Charlotte Mitchell as Peg, a rôle subsequently acted by Miss Davenport, Miss Weston, and many others.

One would hardly call Miss Agnes Scott an ideal Margaret Woffington, and few of the characters are played for much in this revival, but the general effect is agreeable and entertaining. Mr. Greet himself is excellently dry, humorous, and pathetic, when needs be, in the rôle of the actor-playwright-versifier Triplet.

The play is to be repeated to-night, and is well worth seeing, if only for old associations. And Mr. Greet's excellent personal performance provides additional incentive.

MANY BEQUESTS TO CHARITY.

Hospitals and Other Institutions Remembered by W. C. Egleston.

The will of William C. Egleston of 19 East Fifty-sixth Street, who died on March 25, was filed in the office of the Surrogate yesterday. One hundred thousand dollars is left to St. Luke's Hospital to endow free beds, and these beds are to be known as the William C. and Ella Egleston beds. Twenty thousand dollars is given to the sisterhood of St. Mary's Society, in the City of New York, for the use of St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children, in memory of Mr. Egleston's two children who are dead, Louise and Adelaide.

The New York Institution for the Blind is to receive $15,000, and the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb a like sum. To Yale University Mr. Egleston bequeaths $100,000 to be known as the William C. Egleston Fund, the income of which is to be devoted to the purchase of standard works and rare editions for the general library of the university.

Twenty-five thousand dollars is left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art for the purchase of works of art. The rest of the estate is left to relatives.

RUFUS W. FROST DEAD.

Widely Known Hotel Manager and Preacher Succumbs to Pneumonia.

The Rev. Rufus W. Frost, for the last fourteen years manager of the Broadway Central Hotel, and one of the most widely known and best liked hotel men in the United States, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 73 Washington Place, of bronchial pneumonia. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

He was born in Granby, Canada, 54 years ago. He became a manufacturer of leather, and later an expert accountant. Tilly Haines, the old hotel man, who died six years ago, selected Mr. Frost as manager of the Broadway Central Hotel fourteen years ago, because of his characteristics. When Haines died Daniel C. Webb, the next owner, retained Mr. Frost. Haines declared he would have to close up shop if Frost left him, and Webb said last night Frost could never be replaced by another man.

Having always had religious tendencies, Mr. Frost associated himself with the Rev. Dr. Huntington, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, and after completing a long term of study for the ministry, was ordained one year ago in Trinity Church. He was pastor of a mission in the Bronx and had met with signal success.

All day to-morrow the body will lie in state in Grace Church, and on Monday the remains will be taken to Winthrop, Mass., for burial.

FORAKER MAY DROP PRIMARY SCHEME

Swelling Taft Sentiment in Ohio Is Believed to Have Scared Him.

CLEVELAND HATES SENATOR

Intense Bitterness All Through the Western Reserve Because of His Anti-Roosevelt Stand.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, April 5.—Cleveland is for Taft. It is very much to be doubted if the Foraker followers will make any very strong effort to stem the tide, for it would be a waste of time, energy, and money.

Still, Senator Dick, who is to be in Akron next week and to begin the fight for the State at the same time that Senator Foraker begins it in Cincinnati, has asked Maurice Mascke, State Central Committeeman for the Twenty-first District, to come to Akron and talk over the political situation with him. Mascke will go, of course. What Dick expects to gain is not clear, for Mascke is for Taft and could not be talked over by any amount of palaver. If that is the best the Dick-Foraker forces can do in the way of beginning a fight in Cuyahoga County their plight is pitiable. They threaten, however, to bring the Taft-Foraker issue into the municipal campaign here next Fall and try to have Foraker men nominated.

The result of any such attempt cannot be doubtful. The talk of doing it is plainly a counsel of desperation. The people are for Taft solidly. The politicians may or may not favor the Secretary of War, but there is one irresistible force which drives them to his support, and that is the necessity of pleasing the people in the coming municipal election. Cuyahoga County is Republican, normally, and yet the Democrats are in control of it.

All the county offices, with one exception, are filled by Democrats. Tom L. Johnson has been elected Mayor three times, and will be nominated for a fourth term this Fall. His strength with the people is tremendous. He is without doubt the most popular man that ever sat in the Mayor's chair.

This Democratic complexion of a Republican county and city is vastly galling to the Republicans. They will make a great effort to bring the county and city back where they ought to be. The city election is to be held this Fall, and the county election next year. It is quite impossible to restore either city or county to the Republican column if Foraker men are the candidates. Foraker is disliked here and Burton is popular. The uphill job of turning the Democrats out would be transferred into an upmountain job if Foraker henchmen were nominated.

Politicians for Taft.

Therefore the politicians are as strongly for Taft as are the rank and file. The rank and file are for Taft because he is Roosevelt's candidate. The politicians are for him because they cannot win the local elections with Foraker candidates. The reasons are vastly different and the result identical. Two years ago Foraker came here to make a speech and got such a discourteous reception that he left it unspoken, quitted the hall, and vowed he would never make a speech in Cleveland again. Cleveland manifested neither surprise nor regret.

This is ex-Gov. Herrick's town. Herrick is out West now, and has not declared himself, except to say that he is against Foraker. He has no cause to love Taft. for Taft's famous Akron speech was credited with a good share in Herrick's defeat. However, Herrick no longer has any influence worth mentioning. The real political factor here is Burton. So far as there can be said to be any Republican organization at all here it is Burton's. The Republican organization is demoralized, and presents a fair parallel to the Democratic organizations in the up-State counties of New York. Since David B. Hill quit the leadership there the Democratic organizations in those counties have been mostly paper ones. The same is true in a lesser degree of the Republican organization here since Mark Hanna's death. It is not the repeated victories of Tom Johnson that are responsible as might be supposed. It is the withdrawal of Hanna's hand from the lever. Like Hill, he left no successor.

Burton is not the sort of man who would be picked out as an organization leader, and but for the demoralized condition of the machine he would not be so recognized. He is a "better element" sort of man; scholarly, cultured, a writer of historical works, and while he is a hard fighter, that is almost the only characteristic which he shares with the average organization leader. He is too cold, and perhaps also too self-centred and intolerant of opposition to be a typical party chieftain. There is no doubt of his strength among the people. At the last election the Democrats, under Tom Johnson's dictation, made no nomination against him. It is reported that Burton's opposition to Johnson is only half-hearted and for form's sake, and that the two really understand each other very well. Cleveland is with Burton in this fight, as it was with him in his fight at the Dayton Convention.

The Hatred of Foraker.

The bitterness of the feeling against Foraker is one of the most surprising things to a visitor in this State, and it is nowhere more striking than in this city. The Western Reserve fairly hates him. It is not mere political opposition. It partakes rather of the unusual intensity of feeling which was called out on both sides in New York in the Hearst campaign last year. Foraker in the Nation is a different man from Foraker in his own State. In the Nation he looms large, and here he is whittled down to the size of Dick. The same phenomenon was observed when David B. Hill was in the Senate. To men from other States, who saw Hill in Washington, he was a wise and statesmanlike figure. In New York little was known of his statesmanship and a great deal was known of his machine, and he was looked upon there as a peanut politician.

It seems to be a good deal that way with Foraker, although for different reasons. The cordial dislike for him and the outspoken bitterness of the language used concerning him by Republicans is a thing which it would be difficult to make the folk in Washington believe. A good deal of it, evidently, is due to resentment over the feeling that Foraker bunkoed the party last year. The party is for Roosevelt. Burton warned the party that Foraker was against the President. Foraker made the party believe that Burton knew not whereof he spoke, and got his own ticket nominated. Everybody knows now that Foraker is against Roosevelt and was against him then, and that a Roosevelt State was led into the false appearance of being against the President. It rankles.

Word comes from Akron that Dick is going to lose his own county and city. He is an Akron man. His county, according to the information current here, will be for Taft. It does not make any great difference whether the scheme for a vote at the primaries is carried out or whether the delegates will be elected in the old-fashioned way. That is true of all the Taft counties.

May Drop Primary Plan.

The belief is growing here that Foraker's fine scheme for a direct vote on Presidential candidates at the primaries will never be carried out; that Foraker himself is afraid of it, and that the tip has gone out among his lieutenants to throw cold water on the scheme. At any rate, that is what they are doing. However, the party generally is not responsive to this primary scheme. There has been no echo from the hewers of wood and drawers of water. The ordinary party mechanic is very anxious to elect his own city officers, and he can see dangers thereto if the election is complicated with extraneous matter. The party henchman argues that while a bitter internecine party fight at the polls will be a good thing for the Democratic candidates for the local offices, its advantages from a Republican standpoint are not so easy to figure out.

The fact is that, primary or no primary, this fight is going to be fought out in Ohio every minute of the time from now until next Summer. It does not make any great difference whether some elaborate scheme for ascertaining the party sentiment is carried out or not; the sentiment of the party will be ascertained, all right. It is going to figure in every election, every primary, every caucus, every official gathering of Republicans of any kind.

The calm assumption of the Taft men that they are sure to win is a thing rather surprising to an observer. In the rest of the country it is well known that the organization is controlled by Foraker and Dick, and it is consequently assumed that the Taft people are working under a heavy handicap, and that the orders are against them. One comes to Ohio expecting to find the Taft men with their shoulders braced for a hnrculean struggle and with a never-say-die tone to their talk. Instead, he finds them wearing an air of imperturbable assurance. They know that the people are for Taft, and they scoff at the idea that the machine can hold that sentiment down. Not only that, but they deny that Foraker can hold the machine. He can do it only through Dick, and the accessions of machine men to the Taft column in spite of Dick is of daily occurrence.

Country Press for Taft.

A big item in the fight is the attitude of the country press, which is a power in Ohio. The country editors are for Taft. In the calculations of the politicians the attitude of the country editor is a thing more anxiously inquired into than the attitude of his brethren in the city, for the reason that his influence upon his subscribers is considered to be greater. Everybody is looking for big developments next week. Foraker, unless all reports reaching here are false, is going to throw the throttle wide open the minute he strikes Ohio. His speech at Canton on Wednesday is expected to start the fur flying.

"We have got Foraker licked," said a Taft man to-day, "unless he has got something up his sleeve. His speech at Canton will demonstrate whether he has or not. Consequently the real line-up won't begin until he makes that speech. That's what everybody is waiting for."

Yale 'Varsity Crew's First Race.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 5.—Yale oarsmen had their first race of the season to-day, when the two eights were picked to race each other daily till the 'Varsity leaves for New London. The squad was cut down to two crews, who took a two-mile spin after sundown to-night. The 'Varsity showed in the lead and had clear water at the mile. The second crew came up rapidly and the 'Varsity led by less than a foot at the end. Graham, 2, and Dunkle, bow, of the 'Varsity, were dropped to the second crew. Capt. Ide of the 'Varsity said to-night that there would be no more changes for several weeks. The two crews will row as follows:

'Varsity—Stroke, Boulton; 7, Ide; 6, Howe; 5, Taft; 4, Hoppin; 3, Rice; 2, Griswold; bow, Auchincloss.

Second Crew—Stroke, Mayer; 7, Miller; 6, Godley; 5, Peyton; 4, Bromar; 3, Babcock; 2, Graham; bow, Dunkle.

"Middies" and Georgetown Row To-day

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 5.—The Naval Academy and Georgetown will start the intercollegiate rowing season to-morrow with a two-mile race on the Severn River. The Georgetown crew, under Coach Murray A. Russell, arrived in Annapolis this morning and went over the course in the afternoon. Conditions of wind and water were satisfactory. The Navy crew is something over ten pounds heavier on the average than the visitors. The illness of McKee of the Navy crew, the substitution of Montgomery, the placing of Baggin in Kinkaid's place at 2, and other changes have shaken up the Navy crew at the last moment.

Changes In Cornell's Crews.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 5.—Although it is still early in the season, Coach Courtney has made a shake-up in the 'Varsity crews. Goodier and Gracy were put into the first boat to-day in place of Bayer and Bedows, leaving Brinton as the only new man. Stowell has replaced Newman at bow, the latter going to 7. Dods was sent in to stroke. Three 'Varsity, two four-oared, three freshman crews, and one mixed crew went out on the lake this afternoon.

Yale Gunners Beaten by Boston A. A.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 5.—In the annual Yale-Boston Athletic Association Gun Club shoot here to-day Boston won by a score of 314 to 296. Dr. Gleason of Boston made high score, 46 out of 50. Owing to a high wind the scores were poor. Summary:

Yale—Manierre, 31; Thompson, 37; Shene, 35; Gosnell, 37; Pursley, 40; King, 39; Logan, 35; Trudeau, 42. Total, 296.

Boston A. A.—Adams, 41; Clark, 39; Owen, 38; Powell, 41; Howell, 42. Hulleck, 34; Dr. Gleason, 40; Titcomb, 33. Total, 314.

Kentucky Association Elects Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 5.—J. N. Camden, Jr., of Versailles was made President of the Kentucky Association here to-day, with W. R. Letcher of Cincinnati Secretary and General Manager, H. P. Headley Vice President, and Younger Alexander Treasurer. It was decided to hold the first race meeting from April 27 to May 4, the dates granted by the State Racing Committee. M. J. Winn, whose Louisville Association held the majority of the stock, was made one of the Directors of the association.

SMATHERS DENIES ATTEMPT TO BRIBE

Owner of Major Delmar Says He Did Not Win Memphis Gold Cup by Fraud.

BILLINGS ON THE STAND

Admits He Furnished Money to Pay Expenses of Case—Evidence All In.

All the evidence in the Memphis Gold Cup case is in, and the closing addresses of the counsel will begin at 10 o'clock Monday morning. The case, which has occupied the entire week before Justice Greenbaum and a jury in the Supreme Court, reached its climax yesterday, when C. K. G. Billings and Elmer E. Smathers appeared as witnesses. Mr. Billings is the owner of Lou Dillon, whose defeat in the race for the Gold Cup, it is alleged, Smathers conspired, and offered $5,000 to make her lose, while Mr. Smathers was the owner of Major Delmar, which defeated Lou Dillon in the memorable contest.

Mr. Billings denied absolutely that he was in any way responsible for the action, but admitted that he had furnished Murray Howe, Secretary of the Memphis Trotting Association, with money to help defray the expenses of the trial. He also acknowledged owning two-thirds of the stock of the Memphis Trotting Association. His description of the first heat, in which Lou Dillon exhibited signs of distress, differed little from that of the other witnesses for the complainant. He said that he noticed the mare acting in a peculiar manner, both before and during the contest, and that after passing the half-mile post she suddenly dropped away and fell behind Major Delmar. He could ascribe no reason for the actions of Lou Dillon, which he had never noticed before when driving the mare. He denied that Dr. Tanner had advised him against buying Lou Dillon when he purchased her, and said he had limited Tanner's bidding on the mare to $10,000, and that he had personally taken up the bidding at that point.

Elmer E. Smathers said that he had sold his racing stable in July, 1905. He told George Spear that he was to be dismissed in June, 1905. Spear was discharged because he had the witness start a mare, Alice Barnes, in Memphis against Mr. Billings, when the mare was unfit to go to the post, so that Spear could bet against his (Smathers's) horse, the witness alleged. The latter part of the statement was ordered stricken out. Mr. Smathers said he did not discharge Spear because he was going out of the racing game.

In most emphatic language Mr. Smathers denied entering into a conspiracy to stop Lou Dillon in the race for the Memphis Gold Cup or that he had ever had any connection with Ed Sanders at any time. Nor did he ever have any conversation with Ed Sanders, as alleged, about the plot in the hearing of Millard Sanders. In describing the race he said that when they got off Mr. Billings tried to take the pole from him, and he cried to him to "Keep off." The horses went to the half-mile post head and head. At the half Mr Billings shook his whip at the mare when she faltered and slowed down. The route from the starting point to the half was a hard struggle, and negotiated at top speed. Then Major Delmar gradually drew away and went at top speed to the three-quarters pole, where, Mr. Smathers said, he slowed up to save his horse.

Dr. H. D. Gill, State Veterinarian and former President of the Road Drivers' Association, testified that the cause of Lou Dillon's collapse might have been due to a dozen natural causes, and it would be mere speculation for any one to attempt to ascribe any positive reason. "When a horse is a quitter he is a quitter, and will quit either in the first or last quarter, or at any time," said Dr. Gill.

Company B Gets Shooting Trophy.

Company B of the Seventy-first Regiment won the Banks shooting trophy last night in the final competition on the new armory range. Twenty men composed each team, the conditions being seven shots for each man at 200 yards and seven shots at 500 yards, no sighting shots. The scores were: Company B, 1,162; Company D, 1,132; Company C, 1,096; Company K, 1,081; Company F, 966; Company I, 916; Company E, 883; Company C, 856; Company H, 790; Company A, 765.

Race Horse Breaks His Neck.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 5.—Six horses fell in the fifth race at Oakland to-day, but none of the riders was much hurt. Tanana stumbled and broke his neck. The other horses fell over Tanana. At the track hospital it was found that C. Williams, riding Tanana, was severely shaken up.

BLUE RIBBON COLT.

Unexpected Foal at Durland's Horse Show Makes Big Hit.

The most unique award ever given in a horse show was the feature of the closing night of the Durland show last evening. It was awarded in a new class added to the programme, unexpected, to meet the occasion—for foals born during the show. The ribbon was awarded to a two-day-old bay colt exhibited by an unnamed patron of the show, and the award was received with enthusiastic applause and unqualified satisfaction.

The youngster made its appearance in arms, borne by a groom. It wore a new resplendent bridle to fit the occasion, and when stood in the centre of the tanbark arena its scrawny limbs were almost too weak to support it. But amid a chorus of exclamations of surprised pleasure the blue rosette was pinned to its halter as the judges announced that in honor of the occasion the colt had been christened "The Blue Ribband," and that its mother was doing well, but unable to be seen.

Ponies had quite an inning last night. Shown in harness, they pleased the crowd immensely, especially the little folks, being almost without exception driven by children. Master and Miss Carr, driving Little Cherub, were especially admired, but the judges did not agree with the popular sentiment that accorded them the blue, and gave the ribbon to Elsinore Farm's entry, Welsh Princese.

The jumpers divided attention with the ponies, for quite another reason. Two of the hunters bolted and there was a wild scurry of grooms at the gate as Westchester Farm's Navajo attempted to pass the closed door. Sidney Holloway, however, had the mount, and handled him beautifully, taking the six jumps splendidly in spite of his erratic behavior. S. Herbert Mapes's Virginia Shipsey threw her rider, but he escaped unhurt. The best performers were Sidney Holloway's five entrice and Clarence H. Robbin's Champion Rifle, on which Dick Donnelly had the mount.

Schoolboys Take Skating Honors.

Two public school roller skating championships were decided last night under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic League at the Clermont Skating Rink, Brooklyn. The quarter-mile event was won by Samuel Herman of the Townsend Harris High School, New York, in 0:54, beating R. Ruffin of the St. Mary's Nautical School. In the one-mile championship Herman held the lead up to the last lap, when he fell, and, although he made a grand spurt to regain his lead, he was only able to get third place, the race being won by G. Schneelk of the Far Rockaway High School. Summary:

Quarter-Mile Championship.—Won by Samuel Herman, Townsend Harris High School; R. Ruffin, St. Mary's, second; Milton Eisenberg, Erasmus High School, third. Time—0:54.

One-Mile Championship.—Won by G. Schneelk, Far Rockaway High School; R. Ruffin, St. Mary's, second; Samuel Herman, Townsend Harris High School, third. Time—3:58.

Five-Mile Race on Roller Skates.

A five-mile handicap race attracted a large number of contestants to the Lenox Roller Skating Rink, Lenox Avenue and 116th Street, last night. Daniel Kranz, who started from scratch, won by a good margin in the excellent time for a sixteen-lap track of 25:00. S. Tytler, with an allowance of 75 yards, was second, while Hiram Flaum and L. Mills, each starting from the 100-yard mark, were third and fourth respectively.

Turf and Field Club Meeting.

The Turf and Field Club met yesterday, with Perry Belmont presiding. Other members present were Gen. Brayton Ives, Francis R. Appleton, John R. Cowdin, E. C. Lamontagne, and F. K. Sturgis. New members of the club elected were Warner Leeds, William Brockie, Daniel Morrison Coffin, P. L. Foster, William D. Thornton, William H. Moore, and T. F. Sykes. The club membership is full and there is a waiting list.

Harvard Men Begin Squash Tourneys.

Two squash tournaments were begun yesterday at the Harvard Club, one for the championship of the club and one for handicap players. The matches were well contested in the main, most of them requiring three sets for decision. E. W. Leonard gave the best performance of any of the players.

FIVE FAVORITES LOST.

Bowling Bridge Only First Choice to Win at Benning.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Graziallo, Black Domino, Greeno, Ben Cole, and Workman, five heavily played favorites, all went down to defeat at Bening to-day, and the public got the worst drubbing it has received on any day this meeting. The solitary first choice to score was Bowling Bridge, and it is doubtful if many of the bettors won on him, for there were so many tips in the race that all the horsee had a following.

The defeat of Graziallo and Ben Cole, owned by Samuel Rose of Washington, was the hardest blow the talent has received in a long time. The Son of Rapallo was a starter in the opening event, and the tip on him was so strong that no one apparently seemed to care for any other horse in the race. But Graziallo ran badly, and did not even get in the money.

The winner turned up in Tickle, which ran unplaced yesterday. Raditke, who was in Graziallo's saddle, gave a weird exhibition of jockeyship, keeping his mount far out of the race until it was too late to get any part of the money, but even when he let Graziallo down the horse did not show any foot, and his performance was pounds below his showing in the Benning Spring Handicap. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Tickle, 100 pounds, (McDaniel,) 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Golf Ball, 110, (Englander,) 7 to 1 and 5 to 2, second; Faust, 90, (Goldstein,) 8 to 1, third. Time—1:23 1-5. Graziallo and Alparrachen also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For maiden two-year-olds; four and a half furlongs, old course. Blifil, 108, (Hennessy,) 12 to 1 and 6 to 1, won; Black Domino, 105, (McDaniel,) 8 to 1 and 6 to 5, second; Glorious Betsy, 105, (Radtke,) 4 to 1, third. Time—0:57 1-5. Charley Doherty, Marston, Mad Harry, Donald T., Wedding, Polaris, Long Ball, Mackon, Kitty Smith, and False Garter also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Wabash Queen, 85 pounds, (Goldstein,) 8 to 1 and 3 to 1, won; Quadriuc, 110, (Lee,) 2 to 1 and 4 to 5, second; Greeno, 105, (Radtke,) 9 to 5, third. Time—1:23. Niblick, Bettie Bouncer, Lord Badge, Listless, Society Bud, Edwin H., and Dairy Maid also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—For two-year-olds; four and a half furlongs; old course. Jubilee, 107 pounds, (Radtke,) 2 to 1 and 4 to 5, won; Ben Cole, 104, (J. Johnson,) even and 2 to 5, second; Goseon, 107, (Mountain,) 15 to 1, third. Time—0:56 2-5. Olios, Glenada, Serville, and Kate Carney also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—Selling; for four-year-olds and upward; six and a half furlongs; Columbia course. Bowling Bridge, 107 pounds, (J. Johnson,) 9 to 5 and 7 to 10, won; Venus, 100, (Englander,) 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Legerdemain, 110, (Wishard,) 4 to 1, third. Time—1:24 1-5. Old Guard, Marksman, Ski Runner, Blue Pirate, Sentry, Flexion, Headway, Bob Edgren, and Noblesse Oblige also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling; for three-year-olds and upward; one mile and forty yards; Columbia course. Buttons, 107 pounds, (McDaniel,) 2 to 1 and 2 to 5, won; Euripides, 101, (Lee,) 10 to 1 and 3 to 1, second; Workman, 110, (J. Johnson,) even, third. Time—1:45 4-5. Cobmosa, Delphie, and Sally K. also ran.

What Is a Prescription?

A prescription is a written order from a physician to a druggist for certain medicinal agents combined in a prescribed manner.

If a prescription is filled with pure drugs and chemicals in the right way it does its work. If not, results are indifferent.

In a case of sickness you don't want indifferent results, and the way to make sure that you will get just what you ought to have is to take your prescriptions to the Times Square drug store. This store has a reputation among physicians as a pharmacy of reliability.

"CANADIAN CLUB" WHISKY GUARANTEE

With the object of injuring the sale of "CANADIAN CLUB" WHISKY, certain persons are stating that it is not guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act.

SUCH A STATEMENT IS ESSENTIALLY MISLEADING, BECAUSE THE GUARANTEE REFERRED TO IS IN NO SENSE WHATEVER A GUARANTEE TO THE PUBLIC THAT THE GOODS ARE ACCORDING TO LAW.

THE ACT provides simply that DEALERS shall not be prosecuted for selling Unlawful Goods, if such goods are guaranteed by Residents of the United States from whom purchased, but that the Guarantors shall then be "amenable to the prosecutions, fines and other penalties" under the ACT.

IF THE GUARANTEE WERE A PROOF THAT THE GOODS ARE ACCORDING TO LAW, NO PERSON COULD POSSIBLY BE LIABLE TO PROSECUTION, FINES AND PENALTIES.

Not being residents of the United States, it is clearly out of our power to give this particular guarantee to Dealers; but we have already undertaken, and we hereby again undertake, to hold every dealer absolutely harmless in the sale of "CANADIAN CLUB."

The object of the FOOD AND DRUGS ACT is to suppress impurity and misrepresentation.

Inasmuch as "CANADIAN CLUB" is a pure whisky, labelled with absolute truthfulness, bearing the Canadian Government guarantee as to age, there is nothing about it to suppress.

SPECIAL CAUTION.

Some Dealers are calling what is only a MANUFACTURER'S GUARANTEE a GOVERNMENT GUARANTEE, which is itself a very serious misrepresentation and a violation of the Law.

PERSONS MAKING MALICIOUS MISSTATEMENTS REGARDING OUR WHISKY WILL BE RIGOROUSLY PROSECUTED. FRIENDS OF OUR BRAND WILL OBLIGE US GREATLY BY REPORTING ANYTHING OF THE KIND WHICH COMES TO THEIR NOTICE.

What Republican Editors Think of the President

THE NEW YORK TIMES will publish to-morrow a large number of letters from leaders of Republican opinion the country over which will make clear the estimate in which these editors now hold Mr. Roosevelt. The letters are most interesting and the opinions they reveal are remarkable.

These letters will constitute only one of the many notable features which The TIMES will offer to its readers to-morrow. Among the other special articles which are of distinct value for their timeliness and general interest are:

Andrew Carnegie's Plea For Peace.

With the International Congress in this city a week distant Mr. Carnegie makes a powerful argument for a better understanding among the nations and for the disappearance of armed conflicts from the earth.

The New Generation In Finance.

The retirement of James J. Hill in favor of his son well illustrates the development of the younger men who are to take high places. This article tells who these young men are and what may be expected of them.

The Influence of American Women in England.

International marriages are following each other rapidly these days, and this article tells of the prominent parts American women are playing in English life, with two members of "The Bouncers," a noted New York set of a generation ago, as striking examples.

Is Alcohol a Curse or a Blessing?

Eminent British physicians have just made a remarkable report on this subject, and their findings, coupled with the highly valuable opinions of New York physicians of authority, constitute an article of interest and distinct importance.

Mr. Hennessy on the Spring Rush to Europe.

In the absence of Mr. Dooley, his "Frind Hinnissy" arises to deliver himself of the thoughts that have been surging within him anent the annual rush of Americans to Europe. And Mr. Hennessy has something to say.

The Condition of Affairs in Russia.

The Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg, throws interesting light on present conditions in the Russian capital and empire, with the sidelights of the writers and caricaturists of the Russian press.

Laying Traps for the Railway Engineer.

this article tells of the "Surprise Tests" to which the Pennsylvania Railroad recently put the men in its locomotives and what the results were and also what the punishment was for those who failed.

The Pictorial Section

Will be fully up to the delightfully artistic standard to which the readers of The Times have long been accustomed—there will be many pages of rare attractiveness and the leading feature will be a full page photograph of the interior of St. Patrick's Cathedral last (Easter) Sunday morning showing the thousands at Pontifical High Mass—another page will present views of the interior of the charming house of Mr. Henry Seligman.

AUTOISTS COMMENT ON RACE DELAYS

No Official Action by Foreign Clubs on Vanderbilt Cup Contest.

MANY PROBLEMS TO SOLVE

Chairman Thompson Says Definite Announcement Will Be Made Next Week.

No official action has yet been taken by any of the foreign automobile clubs, it was learned yesterday, in reference to the coming Vanderbilt cup race. Jefferson De Mont Thompson, Chairman of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association, when asked if this failure on the part of the foreign motorists to express their desire that the event should be held in Amsrica again indicated any lack of interest in the race said that he did not believe that such an inference could be held for a minuts.

"From what I can gather," he added, "from the information I have received from racing men abroad, they are anxious to havs the event held here, and I have had assurances from some French manufacturers that they hope to enter cars. I believe that the lack in making an official request to the American Association is due to the fact that at present the French, German, and Italian autoists are completely occupied with their own big contests. The Italian race takes place this month, the German race in June, and the French Grand Prix on July 2, and after that I believe the prospects for a good international competition on the Long Island course will be much brighter."

This failure on the part of the foreign clubs to make some early preparations for the Vanderbilt cup race has led to rumors that the race itself was by no means certain to be held this year. No one in a position to speak attached any credence to these rumors yesterday.

"I cannot see where the idea emanated from," said Mr. Thompson. "Although I have not heard anything personally from Mr. Vanderbilt since his return from Europe, I propose to call a meeting of the board next week. I expect we will then make a formal announcement of the race, its probable date, and the time for the closing of entries. As the foreign clubs have taken no steps to hold the event themselves, they probably consider it unnecessary to send us any formal request. When we announce the event, therefore, the foreigners will undoubtedly fall in line and entries will be made in the usual way."

There is, however, a prevailing sentiment that unless a course greater than a sixteen-mile circuit is adopted for the race it may not find favor among the racing autoists abroad. The usual Long Island circuit of thirty miles was considered, especially by the Frenchmen, as quite short enough. All of the big events abroad will be over courses of much greater length, the German race being over a seventy-five to eighty mile circuit, and the Grand Prix about fifty miles. A short circuit, it is feared, may give the impression that the Vanderbilt Cup race will be somewhat in the nature of a track competition, and such contests have never been popular abroad.

FUEL TEST FOR AUTOS.

Will Use Alcohol, Gasoline, and Kerosene in Run To-day from Trenton.

Three Maxwell cars instead of one will start to-day on the fuel test run from Tranton to Atlantic City. The first intention was to use only one car with nicohol as fuel, but it was decided this week to hold a second comparative fuel test similar to the one during the Winter from this city to Boston. Conditions at this time will be much better for securing more favorable results. One car will use kerosene, one gasoline, and the other denatured alcohol. The object of the run will be to establish authoritative figures regarding the quantity, cost, and efficiency per ton mile of the respective fuels. An improvement has been made since the last run in the carbureter of the kerosene car whereby it will admit a mixture of gasoline with kerosene in definite quantities.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Secretary Frederick H. Elliott of the American Automobile Association will leava early next week on his second tour through the West for the purpose of assisting in the formation of a new State association. Ha will attend the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation at Pittsburg naxt Tuesday evening, when it is expected that unanimous approval will be given to join the National body. From Pittsburg he will go to Missouri, Kentucky, and Indiana, attending the meeting at Indianapolis on April 13 of automobile engineers to discuss the rules for the race of American touring cars on the Long Island motor parkway.

During the month of February 62 foraign cars were imported at a total valuation of $203,106, while during the eight months ending February 831 cars were brought in from Europe with a total valuation of $2,938,893. The figures received by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association show that during February 213 cers were exported at a valuation of $368,309, while for eight months the exports were 1,582 cars at a valuation of $2,471,859.

Proposals for the testing laboratory planned by the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association have been under consideration for some time, but the officials of the association wish to investigate thoroughly the requirements of such a laboratory before coming to a decision. Just as soon as the engineers of the various companies in tha association have decided upon the best plan of procedure a general call will be issued for a formal meeting to form tha society.

The Automobila Auction Company of America of 41 West Sixty-third Street will hold its first sala of automobiles on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Twenty machines have been entered for the sale. Only machines in good condition will be received. The cars will be on exhibition on the day before tha sala.

Georges Dupuy, manager of the American Gold Cup tour, has received information from his Paris agent, John C. Hoverman, that the Mitchell Motor Car Company has entered a car in the tour to start from Havre. Mr. Saussrhach, manager of the Paris branch of tha Mitchell Company, made the entry and ha may drive the car in the tour.

HOPE FOR COLUMBIA.

Chairman Bangs's Unexpected Commendation of Football Changes.

The first real ray of hope for Columbia football came yesterday from an unexpected source, when Francis T. Bangs, before the King's Crown, the student organization, declared that the changes in the playing rules of the game had developed a new sport that was totally different in its essential attributes from the old game that had proved objectionable and that it had been satisfactorily demonstrated by the past season that the new game as played then could be freed absolutely from the objections of unnecessary roughness and the other evils of "dirty play" that brought it formerly into disrepute.

The abuses of the playing field were, however, only a part of the objections to the sport that caused its abolition at Columbia, Mr. Bangs continued. If the other abuses can be eradicated, the game could be resumed with benefit. He advised the students to get into touch with the University Athletic Committee and see if means could not be devised whereby the undue exaggerations of the sport can be avoided. If assurance can be given, he declared, that the game could be conducted by the students under the satisfactory conditions promised by them, he thought the reinstatement of the game in the near future would be a possibility.

D. Le Roy Dresser, who is Chairman of the Alumni Committee, which has the movement for the reinstatement of this game in hand, will mest President Butler within a few days to present the petition of the alumni to him and the resolutions of the alumni association adopted at its meeting at the opening of Alexander Hamilton Hall. It is not expected that a decision will be speedily reached after the meeting, at least not until the whole matter has been thoroughly thrashed out in a formal hearing, which will demonstrate, the alumni representatives believe, the advisability of reaumlng the sport without further delsy at the opening of the season next Fall.

GIANTS COME BACK TO OPEN SEASON

Their 8,000-Mile Trip Has Placed Players in Excellent Condition.

RELEASE OF THREE MEN

Secretary Knowles Has No Official Knowledge That Donlin Will Desert Team.

If appearances are indications of good condition the Giants, who returned yesterday direct from Columbus, Ohio, are undoubtedly in prims shape for the championship season which hegins here at the Polo Grounds next Thursday. The aggregation cut its trip short by twenty-four hours, being scheduled to play at Wheeling, West Va., yesterday, but the prospects of unfavorable weather in the latter city induced Manager McGraw to bring his men home forthwith.

All the members of the team, with the exception of Devlin, Bowerman, Donlin, Shay, and Bresnahan, arrived at the Pennsylvania Railroad depot in Jersey City at 2:30 o'clock yesterday, and, headed by Manager McGraw, went to the Polo Grounds for a little practice. Secretary Knowles, who accompanied the team on its training tour, is enthusinstic over the shape the men are now in. He confirms the report that Hank Mathewson, brother of Christy Mathewson, and Burke, the outfielder secured from the New Haven Club last fall, will be dispensed with, as well as Mullin, but the conditions under which Mullin was secured will oompel him to go to the Baltimore Club of the Eastern League.

When Secretary Knowles was asked whether Mike Donlin had informed him that he intended to leave the team to go on the stage with his wife, he replied that such information had only been given him since his arrival in the city. "All I know about the matter," said Mr. Knowles, "is that Donlin, as well as Bowerman, Shay, Devlin, and Bresnahan, asked leave at Louisville to go to their homes or to other places that would enable them to report by Saturday, and if Donlin has left baseball for the stage he has my best wishes. Manager McGraw know anything about it.

To-day the Giants will open the season with Yale at the Polo Grounds and to-morrow they will go to Newark to play the Eastern League club of that city. The teams will be as follows:

New York.	Position.	Yale.
Mathewson	Pitchers.	Parsons
Ames		Cushing
McGinnity
Bresnahan	Catcher	T. Jones
McGann	First base	H. Jones
Corcoran	Second base	Camp
Danlen	Short stop	Kinney
Devlin	Third base	Church
Shannon	Left field	Clifford
Seymour	Centre field	Chapin
Browne	Right field	Madden

Umpire—"Kid" Carsey.

Secretary Knowles is enthusiastic over Los Angeles as a training ground for baseball players. "Of course, it is a good ways from home," he said, "and we suffered somewhat from weather conditions, but take it all in all the climate is so magnificent for the conditioning of players that it is very likely we will take the same trip again next year. If we do it will simply be to Los Angeles and back. This thing of moving from one place to another where the climatic conditions are so different is not conducive to the welfare of the men and it is proposed to remain in one place throughout the training trip."

In their perambulations throughout California and the South the Giants traveled about eight thousand miles. They left here on Sunday, Feb. 24, arrived at Chicago on the following day, and on the same night left for Los Angeles, which they reached on Friday, March 1. Two days afterward they won their first game from Los Angeles. Much stress was laid upon their visit to San Francisco, as great preparations had been made to receive the former world's champions. Rain, however, interfered with both games that were to have been played, and the Giants, it is reckoned, were out of pocket at least $3,500.

Secretary Knowles in speaking of the trouble in New Orleans during the series with the Athletics said that Manager Frank of the New Orleans Club showed his enmity to the Giants to a marked extent. There was no understanding, according to Secrstary Knowles, that Zimmer was engaged as umpire of the series, and but for his ignorance of the rules of the game the unfortunate trouble would not have occurred. Zimmer, it appears, proposed a special balk rule to Manager McGraw, which the latter objected to. When Zimmer put it into effect the New Yorks left the field.

The Giants play in Newark to-morrow, and on Thursday will open the championship season with rather imposing ceremonies, the Philadelphia team being their opponent.

McGUIRE'S MEN BAT LIVELY.

They Also Play Well in Field and Shut Out Richmond Team.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., April 5.—The second team of the New York Americans, under command of Jim McGuire, shut the Richmond State League team out this afternoon, the score being 16 to 0. Richmond made seven costly errors at critical stages. The visitors playcd steadily throughout, making only one error during the entire nine innings, tbe one being by Keefe, at short stop. The Americans batted quite freely, piling up a total of fifteen clean hits against four for Virginia, the latter being so scattered that none of the runners were enabled to complete the circuit of the bases. The score:

Brooklyn Stopped by Rain.

Special to The New York Times.

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 5.—The Brooklyn Nationals reached here this afternoon after an all-night run from Atlanta, but the game with Lynchburg was prevented by a steady rainfall throughout the afternoon. There are thirty-two persons, including four women, in charge of Manager Donovan in the party. The men are quartered at the best hotel of the city, and are in good shape. The game to-morrow will be played early in order to allow the visitors to take a late train home.

"Phillies" Again Victors.

PHILADELPHIA, April 5.—The Philadelphia Nationals to-day again defeated the local Americans in the annual Spring series, 7 to 2. The Nationals batted Vickers hard in the latter part of the game. The Americans played loosely in tha field. Score by innings:

Tie Game in Atlanta.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 5.—Rain stopped the game between Griffith's team of New York Americans and locals here to-day in the fifth inning, when each team had scored four runs. This was the next to the last game to be played at Piedmont this year by the New Yorkers. A big crowd was on hand, but the heavy shower broke up the match. Score by innings:

Terry McGovern Leaves Sanitarium.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 5.—Terry McGovern, the former feather-weight champion prizefighter, who was brought to a sanitarium here on Dec. 9 last, left the institution late to-day in company with his wife and Sam Harris, his former manager. Dr. A. J. Givens, who has looked after McGovern's health, stated that McGovern suffered from alcoholism when he was brought here and that he is in good health at the present time. He was unable to state whether or not he would ever be able to fight again.

SOLDIER ATHLETES IN ANNUAL GAMES

First Night of Military Athletic League Carnival in Thirteenth's Armory.

M. SHEPPARD'S FAST HALF

New League Records Established in Many of the Events—Hellman Won Race Easily.

With an entry list numbering nearly one thousand, the first night of the Military Athletic League indoor carnival was a pronounced success. Although the programme last night at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Jefferson and Sumner Avenues, Brooklyn, was confined in the main to trial and semi-final heats, all the events produced exciting sport and furnished several hours' keen enjoyment and entertainment for a good-sized crowd.

With the eliminating process completed, the real competition will take place tonight, when a programme of nearly a score of finals will be offered as an attraction, in which the champions in nearly every branch of sport in the metropolitan district of the Amateur Athletic Union will meet. A round dozen championships of the Military Athletic League has been reduced to the fastest men of the big entry list, and several new records are pretty certain to be established. Summaries:

BOY SKATERS REINSTATED.

A. A. U. Lifts Ban on All Offenders Excepting Clyde Martin.

Schoolboys with aspirations for skating honors, who had been disqualified by the Amateur Athletic Union, held a jubilation meeting yesterday. With the exception of Clyde Martin all of the offenders were reinstated. This was the result of a motion which authorized President Prettyman of the Principals' Association to apply for such action to the Metropolitan Association in regard to the boys of Polytechnic Preparatory School, Berkeley, and Lawrenceville.

The matter was duly considered by the Registration Committee, composed of T. J. Nevin, Chairman; J. T. Mahoney, and J. T. Dooling, and it was the feeling that the boys from Lawrenceville and Berkeley Schools had contested against an athlets disqualified by the Amataur Athletic Union through ignorance. The committee believed that in justice to all schoolboys, Clyde Martin could not be reinstated until such time as he appears personally before the committee. They desire to know if he went to Pittsburg at his own expense, or at the expense of his school, or at the expense of the Pittsburg Rink, and what expense money he received. They also desire to ask him if he knew that Morris Wood was a professional athlete. Furthermore, the committee feels that as Clyde Martin opsnly defied the Amateur Athletic Union, he cannot be reinstated until the committee pass on his individual case.

Following are the names of the schoolboys that have been reinstated:

Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute — Thayer, Shields, McAvity, Haight, Bailey, L. Martin, and L. Drake.

Lawrenceville High School—Marsh, Paterson, Richardson, Morrison, Coyle, and Laird.

Berkeley School—Furgarson, Plainfield, Bartow, Rieb, Dobson, Purdy, Nathan, and Wilson.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rise Again—Call Money Rates, 2 1-2@2 Per Cent.

BOND MARKET ALSO STRONG

Currency Movement Forecasts Show $11,500,000 Gain by Banks—Gold Resold in London.

Prices rose almost without interruption yesterday from the opening to the close of business, and the final gains in active shares ran from 2 to 4 points or more. In a majority of these issues prices have now advanced to a point where no less than half the loss suffered betwcen the high prices of the first of the year and the low level has been recovered. This movement toward recovery was started by investment buying, found support in the operation of speculators and in the easier money conditions brought about by Secretary Cortelyou's various measures, and in its present stage is sustained in very large measure by the covering of the extensive short interest built up over a period of several weeks. It is apparent from this hasty analysis of the technical position of the market that its further progress depends in very large part upon the size of the short interest outstanding and the willingness of speculators or investors to take stocks at the prices now reached. Yesterday's further rise was assisted by a number of developments, including the settlement of the labor difficulties upon Western railroads and the outlook for a favorable bank statement to-day. While the advance in wages, which has been agreed upon as a basis for the settlement of the questions at issue between the managements and their employes in the Western railroad dispute entails additional charges upon revenues, these will be made up very largely, if not wholly, by the somewhat higher rates now in effect upon most of the country's railroads. Advances in rates have been going forward in different parts of the United States steadily, and thus far at least have met with little opposition from shippers, who seem in most cases to recognize the justice of the railroads' contentions that increases in payrolls and in all materials have made such measures necessary. There was again an evident disposition on the part of the financial community to relegate the new developments in the controversy between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Harriman to a minor place, so far as it bore upon financial markets. The stock market wns strong at the close of the day, although slightly under the best prices, and the bond market continued to the last to display the advancing tendencies so notable and so significant. Bankers reported that the recent railroad note issues were participating in this revival of investment demand.

Preliminary estimates of the currency movement of the week were practically unanimous in their showing of a gain of some $11,500,000 in cash by the banks. This tallies very closely with the showing a week ago, and, as in that case, has come almost entirely from the disbursements of the Sub-Treasury. Unless the loan account shows unexpected expansion to-day's bank statement should record further substantial addition to surplus. Money rates were again pronouncedly easy, and reflection of this situation was once more found in the strength of demand sterling in the foreign exchange market. Rates here have risen 2 cents in the pound this week, a movement which permitted the sale in London yesterday of over $2,000,000 gold engaged in that city early in the week by a local banking house for importation. Rates are well away from the gold import point now, and volatilo Wall Street is already discussing the possibility of exports.

NEW WABASH NOTE ISSUE.

Report of Negotiations to Cover $6,160,000 of 5 Per Cents at Maturity.

The Wabash Railroad, it was said in banking circles yesterday, is negotiating for a new note issue to take the place of $6,160,000 of 5 per cent. notes, which mature on May 10. Tho report, however, that a new issue of notes had nlready been placed with one of the Wabash's bankers, William A. Read & Co., was denied hy that firm. A member of the firm said yesterday that it had had nothing whatever to do with any arrangements for an extension of the notes or for the flotation of a new note issue. It is considered probable that an effort will be made to extend the old notes, the road's bankers undertaking to pay off any of the notes whose holders may not accept the offer of extension.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 2@2½ per cent., with the last loan at 2½ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 2¼ per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

When stocks were breaking with much violence in the March slumps, brokers called up from their customers heavy margins. The usual margin of 10 per cent. was considered altogether insufficient, and 15, 20, and even 25 per cent. was exacted in a great many cases. Responses to these calls, as noted at the time, were very general. Now that the market has turned about, the customers who put up margin above the usual 10 per cent. limit are finding it possible to employ the surplus as margin for additional purchases of stock. The movement has been very general and has been a real influence in the market.

Bond brokers reported yesterday that the tone of the bond market off as well as on the Exchange has shown decided improvement in tone within the last few days. On the Stock Exchange yesterday, on a somewhat reduced volume of trading, there were advances in a number of issues. The convertible bonds, of course, shared substantially in the improvement recorded in stocks. Atchison convertibles rose from 100½ to 102½, Delaware & Hudson 4s from 101¾ to 102¼, and Consolidated Gas 6s from 128 to 131. United States Steel 5s made a further advance to 99, which is the high price of the year, compared with 98⅛ on March 26 last.

The story went the rounds yesterday that the manipulation of Missouri Pacific, after the management of the market for the stock had been taken from the brokerage house which had for years represented the Gouids, resulted in the accumulation of 30,000 shares of Missouri Pacific, the acquisition of which brought about no improvement whatever in the price of the stock. Then came the 30-point decline in Missouri Pacific, through all of which this stock was carried, although at the low prices it showed a loss approximating $1,000,000. Those who were discussing the story yesterday were inclined to think that the insiders, in this case at least, had had the worst of the bargain.

The question of what disbursement will be made on Bethlehem Steel preferred for the next quarter is entirely in the hands of Mr. Schwab, though confidence is expressed in well-informed quarters that three-fourths of 1 per cent., the same rate as paid in the two preceding quarters, will be agreed upon at the Directors' meeting, which is to be held a week from Tuesday.

Holders of Chicago Subway stock, which has made a substantial recovery on the curb recently from the low prices reached last month, are looking for an early announcement of the completion of the financial plan which contemplates the merger of the company with the Chicago Edison Company and involves the taking up of the bonds of the Illinois Tunnel Company.

Rumors of the imminence of a physical merger of the Republic Iron and Steel Company and the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, which for more than a year have been controlled by identical interests, are again renewed. Since the last time the merger story was current several things have occurred to make an exchange of stock of the two concerns more easily accomplished. The Republic Iron and Steel Company some months ago added to its land holdings an area estimated to contain 75,000,000 tons of ore which brings it more closely to the Tennessee Company's position in regard to ore supplies. In addition it has paid off all of the accumulated dividends on its preferred stock except 2 per cent., which it is confidently expected will be added to the dividend due in July. Both companies have been making extensive improvements which, it is calculated, will bring their combined production of pig iron up to 2,000,000 tons a year. The sales departments and executive offices of the two concerns were practically combined nearly a year ago. A physical merger of the properties would mean a large saving in operating expenses.

One rumored retrenchment, as a result of the high cost of labor, materials, and money, combined with the prospect of industrial reaction, proves to have been unfounded. Stories that the General Electric Company had determined to abandon temporarily its projected plant at Erie, Penn., are denied on good authority. It is said that, while work on the new plant will not be rushed, the company will take up the options if has obtained on a large tract of land at Erie and will start work some time this year on the new plant. While the growth of the General Electric's output during the last two years is recognized as phenomenal and the natural concomitant of the industrial boom, the normal growth of nearly 15 per cent. annually is ample justification for the new plant. The company now employs 30,000 men, a number which should be increased 50 per cent. within five years at the average rate of growth.

PLANS BIG IMPROVEMENTS.

The Kansas City Southern to Spend $2,000,000 in Reducing Grades.

The Kansas City Southern Railway intends shortly to undertake further important improvements. Horace Burt, formerly President of the Union Pacific, with eight or ten corps of engineers, has been working on plans for reducing the grades on the road to enable it to increase its train loads by at least 50 per cent.

In addition to the improvement work authorized last year, upon which about $1,000,000 remains to be expended, the Directors have authorized the expenditure this year of $2,504,000 on extensive improvements, including large increases in the company's facilities at Port Arthur and other places.

With the object of increasing its business, the present management has abandoned its former policy in the matter of traffic relations with the roads running into Kansas City from the North, and will now exchange traffic with all the lines running into Kansas City. It has already made traffic arrangements with several of the important lines. This arrangement will enable such lines as the St. Paul and the Burlington, which have no lines of their own to the Gulf, to compete to greater advantage with other roads which have Gulf lines.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 5.—Substantial advances marked the trading in all the local issues today. There was a good demand for investment, and Mount Vernon, Woodberry Cotton Duck 5s at an advance of 1¼ and United Railways 4s at ¾ higher were in the lead. A speculative movement in United Railways incomes sent them up 1 point, and the common stock was also 1 point stronger and very active. Mercantile Trust 5 and Merchants & Miners' Transportation 5 points. The close was strong and active. Shares, 1,983; bonds, $93,500.

UNITED COPPER JUMPS UP

Heinze Stock Gains 2¾ Points on Light Trading—Stocks Back from "Jersey Curb."

Curb trading was extremely dull yesterday outside of a few issues, notwithstanding the activity and strong tone on the Stock Exchange. Those stocks in which activity developed were buoyant, and the close showed a number of substantial gains. United Copper was one of the notable features of the upward movement. After an opening at 59¾ the price was put steadily up to 62½. Less than 2,000 transactions were reported. Nipissing was again active yesterday, and after the opening moved up fractionally from 13½ to 13⅞. The close was even with the opening at 13½. A number of the "cents per share" stocks, trading in which has been practically limited to the Jersey City Curb, appeared in the Broad Street market yesterday as a result of the abandonment of the Jersey City trading. One of the active coppers was Greene-Cananea, which closed ⅛ point up, at 16⅝, after transactions of 6,000 shares. Manhattan Transit was again active yesterday between 3⅞ and 4.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Irregular, with Downward Tendency—Closes 9 to 11 Points Down.

WEATHER IN COTTON STATES.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The Federal Weather Bureau issues the following forecast for the cotton states for Saturday and Sunday:

North Carolina—Rain and colder Saturday; Sunday fair, warmer in western portion; brisk to high southeast to east winds.

South Carolina—Rain Saturday; colder in western portion; Sunday fair; brisk southerly, shifting to westerly, winds.

Georgia—Rain Saturday; colder in Northern and Western portions; Sunday fair; brisk southerly, shifting to westerly, winds.

Eastern Florida—Rain and colder in northern, fair in southern, portion Saturday; Sunday fair; brisk southwesterly winds.

Western Florida, Alahama, and Mississippi—Fair and colder Saturday; Sunday, increasing cloudiness and warmer; fresh westerly winds.

Louisiana—Fair Saturday and Sunday; warmer in northern portion Sunday; fresh westerly winds.

Eastern Texas—Fair Saturday, except showers in northwest portion; Sunday, fair in southern, scattered showers in northern, portion; light, variable winds.

Western Texas—Showers in northern, fair in southern, portion Saturday; Sunday, fair.

Oklahoma, Indian Territory, and Arkansas—Fair and warmer Saturday; Sunday, showers.

Tennessee—Rain Saturday; colder in eastern portions; Sunday, fair and warmer.

The cotton market was moderately active again yesterday and ruled somewhat irregular, with the tendency downward, however, owing to bearish new crop news. The close was steady at a net decline of 9@11 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 140,000 bales.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2@6 points in response to lower cables and reports of rains over the Southwest.

Advices from Eastern helt stated that the acreage showed an increase in the least expected places.

Supt. King's weekly total crop movement figures follow: Port receipts 9,009,761 bales, against 6,833,839 last year; overland to mills and Canada 1,022,508, (25,775 deducted overland season, shipments St. Louis to Pacific,) against 785,221 last year; Southern mill takings 1,750,000, against 1,614,000 last year; stock at interior towns in excess of Sept. 1 846,792, against 517,816 last year; brought into sight thus far for season 12,197,061, against 9,550,876 last year.

The total crop movement is for 217 days this season, against 218 last year.

The rangs of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

The local market for spot cotton was steady, with prices unchanged at 11c for middling uplland and 11.25c for middling Gulf.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Savannah steady, unchanged, at 10¼c, sales 133 bales; Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 11c; sales 973 bales; Augusta steady, unchanged, at 11⅛c, sales 222 bales; Memphis steady, unchanged, at 10⅜c, sales 2,900 bales; Houston steady, unchanged, at 10 13-16c, sales 225 bales; Galveston, unchanged, at 10 13-16c, sales 216 bales; New Orleans firm, unchanged, at 10 9-16c, sales 1,600 bales.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—One of the strongest advances on crop damage news this season occurred yesterday. Opening prices were the lowest of the day in practically every case, and the general trend was steadily upward. Damage stories were more numerous than at any time since bug reports first came before the trade. Most of the private reports came in from Oklahoma and Southern Kansas. In addition to bugs they contained complaint regarding dry weather in Kansas and Nebraska. Foreign markets showed little response to strength on this side, and in Berlin closed 1@2½ marks nst lower. On the late curb May was last in the local market sold up to 85⅝c, or ⅛c above the regular close. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red, 82¾c, elevator, and 83¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89¾c, and No. 2 hard, Winter, 82½c, free on board, afloat, opening navigation.

CORN.—The corn market was higher, especially the late positions. The fact that smaller receipts were being talked of from Nebraska had considerable weight, with the fact that clearances have been running rather liberal of late, and that exporters have shown a greater interest in the cash market, although sales for the day did not exceed 6 loads. Liverpool closed ¼@½d higher, receipts at Chicago were less than expected, and nothing was shipped from the Argentine. No. 2 corn in New York closed at 56½c, elevator, and 52½c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 55c, and No. 2 yellow, 52½c, free on board, afloat.

THE FOREIGN EXCHANGES.

Developments of Yesterday in London, Paris, and Berlin.

LONDON, April 5.—Money was abundant and cheap in the market to-day, and discounts were easy.

A cheerful tone prevailed on the Stock Exchange, but the volume of business was limited, the approach of the settlement checking operations. Nevertheless, quotations advanced in nearly all sections. British securities benefited by dividend distributions.

Foreigners were dull, with the exception of Copper shares, which continued active. Rio Tinto marking a fresh advance. Mexican Rails enjoyed better support on dividend expectations. Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 closed at 103¾.

Americans opened above parity and remained quietly steady until the receipt of the New York opening prices, when they became active, Southern Pacific advancing 2 points in a few minutes. Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific were the features. Canadian Pacific was active, fluctuating widely. Grand Trunk was firm.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 10.65; Lisbon, 3.

Bar silver steady at 30 1-16d per ounce.

Money, 3@3¼ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, for short bills, 4½ per cent.; for three months' bills, 4½ per cent.

Americans, it is stated, resold to the Bank of England to-day a further $2,000,000 in gold, purchased April 2, the recent rise in the rate of exchange

HARRIMAN IS AFTER CHICAGO TERMINAL

Prospects of a Struggle with Hill-Morgan Interests at Coming Sale.

NEW MOVE MADE IN COURT

The Controlling Interests Seek to Cancel B. & O. Lease, but Harriman Objects.

What was regarded in Wall Street yesterday as a new phase of the opposition that has long existed between the Hill-Morgan interests and the Harriman forces was drawn to the Street's attention yesterday by the announcement from Chicago of the intervention of the Baltimore & Ohio in the Chicago Terminal Transfer foreclosure proceedings and of the filing of the Terminal Company's answer to the petition to the courts in behalf of the Baltimore & Ohio. What the latter road, in which E. H. Harriman now holds a dominant voice through the Union Pacific's holdings, is trying to accomplish is to be allowed to take up the entire bonded indebtedness of the Chicago Terminal Company, principal and interest, amounting to over $17,000,000, and later to proceed with the foreclosure, the property to be sold subject to the Baltimore & Ohio's lease of a portion of the terminal company's facilities.

Harriman Move Against Morgan.

This move on the part of the Baltimore & Ohio, if allowed by the court, would frustrate one of the important objects of the foreclosure proceedings instituted by the Morgan interests co-operating, it is generally understood, with the Hill interests. The Morgan interests a couple of years ago acquired a controlling interest in the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad, and now holds, it is said, a majority of the road's bonds as well as a majority of its stock. It was originally intended to reorganize the property without foreclosure, but, according to report, the Morgan interests found it impossible to induce the Baltimore & Ohio and other roads which lease the terminal company's facilities to consent to an advance in the price they were paying the Terminal Company and foreclosure proceedings were undertaken in order to cancel all existing leases, leaving the controlling interest in the property free to make new leases on more advantageous terms. If the Baltimore & Ohio's plan is carried out this will be prevented.

The Baltimore & Ohio is understood to by paying the Terminal Company $168,000 a year as rental under a contract entered into some years ago. It is claimed by the Terminal Company interests that the facilities the Baltimore & Ohio enjoys are now worth perhaps three times as much as the road is paying. The Baltimore & Ohio is as desirous of preventing the cancellation of the lease as the Morgan interests are to have it canceled.

In reply to the Baltimore & Ohio's request to be subrogated in the foreclosure proceedings the Chicago Terminal Company, in its answer filed in the United States Circuit Court at Chicago yesterday, holds that to allow the Baltimore & Ohio's petition would work an injustice to the Terminal Company, as it would tend to lessen competition at the sale. It is further held that the Terminal Company's property is worth at least twice as much as the upset price of $15,000,000 fixed by the court, which has already named May 3 as the date for the foreclosure sale.

Sharp Competition Expected.

The view of the Terminal Company that competition at the sale will be lessened if the Baltimore & Ohio is allowed to intervene, is not shared by the Chicago Terminal Transfer minority stockholders, who have recently taken steps to combine for the protection of their interests in connection with the foreclosure proceedings now under way. It is pointed out that if the Baltimore & Ohio is allowed to assume the debt and later sell the property subject to its lease, the Morgan interests, as the holders of a majority of the Terminal Company's securities, in order to protect themselves would be obliged to overbid the Baltimore & Ohio, which undoubtedly would not allow the property to sell for less than the $17,000,000 or more which it would have to advance in order to take up the bonds, with interest from the date of default, which occurred in 1905.

If the Baltimore & Ohio's petition should be refused by the courts it is the expectation of some of the minority holders of the Terminal Company's stock that the Baltimore & Ohio will compete at the coming foreclosure sale against the Morgan interests. It is thought possible that in order to obtain control of the property and retain its favorable leasehold the Baltimore & Ohio will bid a price much above the upset price fixed by the court.

BEAVER NATIONAL TO OPEN.

National City Bank and Empire Trust Co. to Represent It in Clearing House.

The Beaver National Bank, of which George M. Coffin, former Vice President of the Phenix National Bank and ex-Deputy Controller of the Currency, is President, is about to begin business in the Beaver Building, at Beaver and Pearl Streets. As the new institution cannot become a member of the Clearing House until it has been in existence for a year, the National City Bank and the Empire Trust Company will be its representatives in that body.

Mr. Coffin is well known as the author of several works on banking and currency. The other officers of the Beaver National Bank are S. H. Vandergrift and T. P. Walsh, Vice Presidents, and J. V. Loughlin, assistant cashier.

The Directors are Frank Bomm, George M. Coffin, John B. Fassett, Thomas A. H. Hay, Martin W. Littleton, George Mercer, Jr., Thomas E. Murphy, Augustus K. Sloan, S. H. Vandergrift, Earl Vogel, and T. P. Welsh.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Robert B. Armstrong, who resigned last week as President of the Casualty Company of America, sails to-day for six weeks' rest in Europe.

Lee B. Durstine, former Vice President of the North American Life Insurance Company of Newark, N. J., has been elected President to succeed John Boone. Mr. Boone will continue a Director of the company.

The Mercantile National Bank of this city is authorized to state that the drafts drawn by the Bank of New Zealand on the Corbin Banking Company will be paid by the agency of the Bank of British North America, 52 Wall Street.

This Nominating Committee is announced for the Board of Officers and Managers of the Cotton Exchange, to be chosen at the annual June election: Thomas M. Robinson, Thomas A. McIntyre, Thomas E. Hicks, Henry Hentz, Marcus J. Parrott, William E. Caldwell, and B. Liedenburg.

These were elected members of the Cotton Exchange yesterday: W. L. Clayton of Anderson, Clayton & Co. of Oklahoma, James S. Patterson of Memphis, Tenn.; Walter S. Thomson of George H. McFadden & Brother, Philadelphia, and Charles N. Fairchild of Charles M. Fairchild & Co., New York.

J. & W. Seligman & Co., who as fiscal agents received proposals for $1,000,000 4 per cent. gold loan bonds of Porto Rico under the Executive Council, made the awards of the bonds yesterday. Fisk & Robinson of this city and the First National Bank of Fort Wayne, Ind., received the largest allotments. The bonds, which are issued in denominations of $1,000 each, are redeemable at the rate of $50,000 a year, beginning Jan. 1, 1908. The United States Treasury Department will accept them as security for deposit on the same conditions as the Philippine bonds are accepted and for the same purposes.

GOLD RESOLD TO LONDON.

Lazard Freres Make a Profit on $2,250,000 Engaged on Tuesday.

Lazard Frères announced yesterday the resale in London of the $2,250,000 gold which they had engaged there on Tuesday for import to New York. Immediately following the announcement of the engagement of this gold there was a sharp advance in exchange rates, which made it more profitable for the bankers to sell the exchange accumulated for the purpose of bringing over this gold than it was to import the gold itself.

Because of the decline in interest rates here following large deposits of Government money with the National banks there was less need of the gold here, it was pointed out yesterday, than there is abroad, and the equilibrium between the markets would therefore be better maintained by leaving the gold on the other side than by bringing it here. From 4.8375 early in the week, demand sterling has risen to 4.8520, at which price it sold at the opening yesterday. It ended the day at about 4.8510.

$1,000,000 NOTES EXTENDED.

Canadian Improvement Company Renews Its Obligations to Ontario.

By agreement between the Government of the Province of Ontario and the Canadian Improvement Company, the Government's indorsement on the notes of the improvement company to the amount of $1,000,000 has been extended for six months from May 1, when the present notes mature. This arrangement has been made to facilitate the company's financing, as it was not desired to meet the notes at this time.

The notes were originally taken by a syndicate headed by Charles Orvis, who was instrumental in reorganizing the old Lake Superior Consolidated Company, which passed through extended financial vicissitudes. The rate of interest on the notes is 5 per cent. and the interest has been continued at this rate. A report current yesterday that the company had in connection with the extension of the notes paid a sum of money which in effect brought the interest rate up to 7 per cent., was denied by Mr. Orvis.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

The leading commercial weeklies comment as follows on general business conditions:

Trade responds to seasonable weather, distribution of Spring merchandise fully equaling sanguine expectations, and country merchants purchase liberally from wholesalers at leading centres. Reports from principal cities are uniformly favorable. Leading industries are fully occupied, and no strikes of more than local significance have materialized thus far. Railway earnings in three weeks of March were 10 per cent. larger than last year. Commercial failures in the first quarter were 3,136 in number and $32,075,501 in amount of liabilities, against 3,102 last year, when the amount involved was $33,761,107. Prices of commodities exhibited the usual seasonable decline in March, being $107,895, against $109,913 a month previous. Bank exchanges at New York were 5.4 per cent. smaller than in the same week last year, while at other leading cities there was an average loss of 7 per cent.

Bradstreet's says:

Despite some cross currents in demand, due mainly to the withdrawal of the Easter stimulus to trade and a succeeding spell of cold weather, the developments of the week have been mainly favorable. Chief, perhaps, of these is the final satisfactory settlement of the Western railway men's demands by arbitration. This is very important, because, despite strenuous efforts by railway managers and actual improvement proceeding therefrom, slow deliveries of merchandise are still restrictive of trade and collections. Reports from most leading industries are still of full order books and of backward deliveries. There is, however, slightly more manifest a disposition to move conservatively as regards distant positions, some easing of metal quotations, and a softening of asking prices for various products. Wheat crop reports have an appearance of irregularity, due to the reported spread of insect damage in the Southwest and advices of Winter killing in the Central West. Still, the reports from the great surplus States west of the Mississippi are very good, having been improved by rain.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Yesterday's estimates of the amount of cash gained by the banks this week on the movements to and from the interior and on the operations with the Sub-Treasury, varied from $11,500,000 to $12,500,000. As was the case last week, the larger portion of the gain was on account of the deposit of Government moneys in the National banks.

Discussing the movement in detail The Wall Street Journal says:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a gain in cash held by the banks of $11,962,700. They received from the interior $7,801,300 and sent to the interior $7,902,100. The loss to the interior was $90,800.

Receipts of new gold were $2,542,200. Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury, including payment for bonds and deposits of customs receipts, were $34,985,300. Payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, &c., were $25,464,000. The gain on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $9,521,300.

The total gain from new gold, $2,542,200, and on Sub-Treasury operations, $9,521,300, was $12,063,500. Deducting the loss to the interior of $90,800, the net gain was $11,972,700.

The large gain on Sub-Treasury operations proper was due chiefly to the deposit of receipts from custome and to the payment of 4 per cent. bonds of 1907.

More Greene Gold-Silver Stock.

An additional offering of 100,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Greene Gold-Silver Company at $8 per share is announced in a circular issued by the company. The offering is part of an issue of 300,000 shares of 8 per cent. cumulative stock authorized last year, of which 100,000 shares put out at $7.50 per share are said to have been all subscribed. The proceeds of the sale of new stock are to be used for increasing the reduction capacity of the company and for development work.

Littleton to Defend Ahearn.

Borough President Ahearn, it was learned yesterday, has engaged Martin W. Littleton as counsel to defend him at the public investigation of his department, which is to begin on Monday in the Mayor's office. The hearings will be held before the Commissioners of Accounts. Corporation Counsel Ellison will present the facts unearthed by William M. Ivins and John P. Mitchell, who have been delving into the affairs of the Borough President for several months.

MILBURN DEFENDS HARRIMAN'S DEALS

Says Inquiry Into Entire Subject of Community of Interests Would Be Beneficial.

HIS ARGUMENTS COMBATED

Attorneys for the Government Attack Southern Pacific and Alton Transactions at Hearing.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—After two days of argument the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day concluded its bearing in the investigation of the transactions of E. H. Harriman in Southern Pacific and Chicago & Alton securities and took the case under advisement. There were three addresses to-day—one by Attorney John G. Milburn in defense of Mr. Harriman's course and one each by Special Attorneys C. A. Severance and Frank C. Kellogg in criticism of it.

Mr. Milburn contended that the main purpose of the purchase of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific had been to gain a through line from Omaha to San Francisco, and declared that there had been no subterfuge about or hidden motive in the deal. It had been a bona-fide purchase, and could not be criticised as a business transaction from any point of view. Having no purpose of preventing competition, it did not fall within the meaning of the Sherman law. The negotiations for the Southern Pacific stock had been begun long before an effort was made to obtain Northern Pacific stock. "Any other theory is a mere dream," he declared.

"If it is a dream it is not the dream of this commission, but of Mr. Harriman," responded Commissioner Lane.

Mr. Milburn complained of the course of the commission in singling out the Harriman interests for investigation and said he should be pleased to have an inquiry into the entire subject of community of interests. He would have the Pennsylvania, the Vanderbilt, the Northern Pacific, the Rock Island, and the Great Northern systems inquired into, for all of these had grown up under the eyes of the commission, by the acquisition of stock and consolidation, and all control parallel and competing lines. He believed a general inquiry would result in showing the beneficial effects of large concerns.

"If," he said, "the politicians would only let the railroads alone for two or three years and let this commission exercise its present powers in calmness I believe that many of the problems would be worked out and solved properly."

"Mr. Harriman," remarked Commissioner Lane, "stated that but for the restraint of the laws he would take over the Santa Fé, and that he would get control of the Northern Pacific. Suppose he had carried out this plan and also controlled the Illinois Central, he would thus control all the lines running into Oregon and California. Does he not acknowledge that he was checked by the restraint of the law?"

"I don't think that too much stress should be laid on such a remark," Mr. Milburn replied. "Mr. Harriman was not speaking from a legal point of view, but was expressing an idea he had in his mind and which cannot be carried into practical operation except through Government ownership—from which God save us! His ambition was a mere dream."

Special Attorney C. A. Severance made the first address for the Government. He entered into an argument to show that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific were competing lines, inasmuch as both started at Oregon and once terminated at the Missouri and the other at the Mississippi River, and both had connecting lines into Chicago.

In this connection Mr. Severance spoke of the Union Pacific as controlling the Illinois Central and Mr. Lovett took exception to the remark. Mr. Severance adhered to his position, saying that it had been shown that the Union Pacific owned 25½ per cent. of the stock of the Illinois Central, and that under ordinary conditions this was sufficient to give a substantial control.

Mr. Kellogg devoted his attention to the Chicago & Alton Road and Mr. Harriman's connection with it. He said that the liabilities of that road had been increased to the extent of $80,000,000, "for which," he declared, "the syndicate did not give the company one dollar aside from a moderate equipment." All the improvements could have been made by a comparatively slight increase of the road's interest account. Mr. Kellogg said that he did not hold Mr. Harriman more responsible than Mr. Schiff or any other purchaser of the stock. "We are only interested in him in connection with the transaction," he said. "He is only an incident, and I will say that he has not shirked responsibility."

He averred that the Alton bonds had been sold to Harriman and his friends at 65 cents on the dollar, when they could have been made to bring par, and the proceeds of this sale had been used in paying dividends to the stockholders, the men who had bought the bonds. Deducting the dividends the bonds had really been obtained for about 49 cents on the dollar.

DEFENDS HIGH FLOUR DUTY.

Colombia Forced to Impose It, Says Consul General Sarria.

Gen. Carlos M. Sarria, Consul General of Colombia, gave out a statement yesterday concerning the action of his Government in raising the import duty on flour against which complaint has been made by some of the American shippers to South America. He explained that Colombia found it necessary for the encouragement and protection of her own growing wheat industry, which under the administration of President Rafael Reyes has become one of importance in the republic. Heretofore the flour had been imported almost exclusively from the United States, and this importation was killing the wheat industry in Colombia.

The Consul General said, however, that to counterbalance the advance in the duty on flour the Government of Colombia had reduced the tariff on other commodities imported solely from the United States, such as steel in bars or in rods, metal fabric, carbonic gas, suets or fats, packing sacks, plows, harrows, nitre, arsenic acid, cobalt, oxide of manganese, boric acid, nitrate of potash, antimony, and other chemical products.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Egyptian Part-Lace Handkerchiefs Pay Higher Duty—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Sub-Board No. 1, the United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a claim filed in behalf of G. Karamanookian, and M. Asbdjian & Co. of Alexandretta, Egypt, regarding the foreign market values to be attached to part-lace handkerchiefs. When the merchandise was before a single General Appraiser last November the advance of 5 per cent. over invoice values was sustained, and the sub-board now sees no reason for disturbing the Collector's decision to assess duty on a higher basis. The decision of the General Appraiser sustaining the Collector is affirmed.

In a decision by I. F. Fischer the board upholds the Government in demanding an advance of 1,000 marks each in the values of embroidery machines sent to this country by Adolph Saurer of Arbon, Switzerland. As a result the machines will be assessed on the basis of 7,380 marks each instead of 6,880 marks apiece as invoiced. The duty was at the rate of 45 per cent.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

FRANCESCO LAGONIGRO.—Francesco Lagonigro, grocer, at Post Chester, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $2,783 and nominal assets of $1,900, consisting of stock $400, and outstanding accounts $1,500, many of which are uncollectible.

THOMAS ELIJAH.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Thomas Elijah, doing business as T. Elijah & Co., wholesale dealer in dry goods and peddlers' supplies at 69 Washington Street, by these creditors: Bacon & Co., $279; Machinbach Importing Company, $279, and E. Hirschfeld, $130. It was alleged that he was insolvent, on March 15 removed stock of $2,000, and made preferential payments. He began business on Feb. 1, 1904.

DAVID BERNSTEIN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against David Bernstein, doing business as D. Bernstein Company, manufacturer of shirts at 390 Broadway, by these creditors: J. H. Lane & Co., $299; Wilmerding, Morris & Mitchell, $80, and Garner & Co., $250. It was alleged that he was insolvent and had made preferential payments. Judge Hough of the United States District Court appointed Charles L. Brookins receiver of the assets, bond $3,000. Liabilities are $50,000 and assets $10,000, consisting of stock, $8,000; accounts, $1,000, and fixtures, $1,000.

NAT STONE.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Nat Stone, wholesale dealer in jewelry, who had an office on Broadway, near Grand Street, by Michael Meyerowitz, doing business as Meyerowitz Brothers, creditors for $1,501. It was alleged that he was insolvent, made preferential payments of several thousand dollars, and transferred accounts to firms and banks. He began business in October, 1905. M. L. Armstein, his attorney, said that the liabilities were $8,000 and assets possibly $2,000, and he gave up business some weeks ago.

GEORGE A. VARNEY & CO.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against George A. Varney & Co., Corporation, builders, at 156 Fifth Avenue, with a branch office at White Plains, by these creditors: Barnet Manufacturing Company, $99; P. & F. Corbin, $123, and H. B. Foster Electric Company, $716. It was alleged that the corporation was insolvent, and had committed an act of bankruptcy in making an assignment on Jan. 31 to Paul M. Abrahams. The business was started on Jan. 1, 1904, and incorporated on March 12, 1906, with a capital stock of $75,000. Liabilities are reported to be $220,000, nominal assets $180,000, and actual assets $1,500.

At Whitestone Landing.

This new residence park surpasses in beauty of location and environments any suburban development in the vicinity of New York.

Not only is every city improvement here, but tangible evidence of a high-class residential colony. A number of artistic houses are now in course of construction—to be finished in May.

Prices of lots are not based on inflated valuations. We have not discounted transportation improvements You can still profit in the benefits which will accrue from the completion of the Belmont Tunnel next summer. By the time the P. R. R. electric rapid transit is in operation—two years hence—values will have trebled.

ORMONDE PARK

BUILDING LOTS,	$95 TO $400 FULL SIZE	$5 Down, $3 Monthly. 10% Discount for All Cash

(Located at City Line of New York City.) Frontage on the famous Merrick Road. Just escaping heavy taxes, but first to benefit by the enormous expenditures of the Pennsylvania and Long Island Railroad.

Third-rail system in operation—proof-positive there will be enormous demand for home sites at Ormonde Park, THE NEW BRONX, where the history of the Old Bronx will be repeated.

Investors need not go to obscure places, remote from the line of improvements. Here is a golden opportunity to purchase property where values will increase by leaps and bounds when the tunnel is finished.

This Company will build for their lot buyers artistic cottages of seven rooms or more. Concrete foundations, with cellars under all, for $2,000 and upward, and will accept small monthly payments as rentals.

Our cottage buyers will be glad to show their superior homes built by this Company.

Lots that were sold in the Bronx a few years ago for $1,000 now sell for $7,000. There is exactly the same opportunity at Ormonde Park, with this difference:—Increased valuations will come ten times as soon, because ten times the effort and money are being spent for your benefit at Ormonde Park.

Belle Terre Estates

Port Jefferson, Long Island

5 to 100 Acres Each

The two leading motives of the Belle Terre Estates Incorporated, have been: First, absolutely to guard the Estates on all sides from every detrimental influence. Nature has kindly aided by giving the Estates five miles of splendid shore front on three sides. Absolute ownership of which safeguards the beaches.

The land side is protected by a high artificial barrier with a single guarded entrance. From all that may be seen from this entrance one gets the impression of a vast baronial estate rather than of the half a hundred homes of a congenial country colony.

The second motive has been to make the Estates sufficient unto themselves by providing not only a central water and lighting plant, but every convenience and recreation as well. Golf links, tennis courts, yacht landing and forty miles of beautiful drives and bridle paths, all within the borders of the Estates.

A superbly appointed clubhouse, garage, livery and every possible adjunct of delightful country living.

Those to whom these motives appeal will be interested in the advance booklet which will be mailed on request.

Ten trains each way, with special "Belle Terre" car on fast express, one hour and twenty minutes from New York.

TO RAZE BUILDINGS OF OLD NEW YORK

City to Begin Demolishing Landmarks for Bridge Terminal on May 1.

MANY LOSE THEIR BUSINESS

800 Employes of Seventeen Saloons and Restaurants Must Seek Places Elsewhere.

Notices were issued by the Finance Department yesterday notifying the occupants of buildings on the streets bounded by Centre Street, Duane Street, and Park Row that the city intended soon to destroy the structures there for the new additions to be made to the Brooklyn Bridge terminal. The work of demolition will begin on May 1, and it is expected that the extension of the terminal will be finished by Jan. 1, 1908.

Among the buildings to be destroyed are seventeen occupied as saloons and restaurants, in which 300 persons are employed. For the most part their employers have been unable to find any new place to do business in the district extending from the Battery to Fourteenth Street.

When the work of demolition begins, only two buildings will be left standing, the Staats-Zeitung Building and Leggett's Hotel, and they are to go within a few months. Leggett's Hotel, built in the early forties, was one of New York's first hotels, and commanded a fashionable business at one time. New York as a city practically ended at Canal Street then, and East Broadway was the most fashionable thoroughfare.

There is a little cheap all-night restaurant on the east side of Park Row, almost opposite Leggett's, which is in the way of the bridge improvement, and will have to be destroyed. Its one window is made dingy with the steam from the cooking and the dust of the highway. It seats only twenty-four persons, but it has prospered. Printers and other night workers who have but a few minutes in which to get a bite after midnight crowd the place until the early morning, and they are replaced by the workers of the daylight hours. The proprietor of this place has sought vainly for another.

The Staats-Zeitung is the biggest and most important of the buildings in the district. When built it was the tallest and widest building in New York City constructed by a private concern, and its outlines were considered beautiful. For a long time it was one of the show places of the town. A new building for the newspaper soon is to be built.

TO LET THAW TRIAL GO ON TO A FINISH

Jerome Decides Not to Appeal from Decision That the Prisoner Is Sane.

PREPARING FINAL ADDRESS

Will Ask for Verdict of Murder in First Degree—Trial Will Be Resumed on Monday.

Finding that a writ of prohibition did not lie in the power of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court under the conditions now existing in the trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White, District Attorney Jerome has abandoned his effort to have the sanity of the prisoner further inquired into and will resume the trial on Monday morning.

Mr. Jerome, after careful study of the law, discovered that he could ask for a mandamus calling on Justice Fitzgerald to supply him with a copy of the minutes of the secret session of the commission, but after all it would be a matter for the discretion of the Appellate Division, and whether he obtained the mandamus or not no real headway would have been made. With the minutes he could have put up a stiff argument against the confirmation of the report of the commission declaring Thaw sane, but there was not one chance in a hundred that Justice Fitzgerald would refuse to confirm the report.

Mr. Jerome visited Justice Patterson in his chambers in the Appellate Division yesterday morning. He declined to discuss the matter pending, but it is positively known that he made no application of any sort.

In the office of the District Attorney assistants and clerks were busy packing three well-worn and large valises with the record of the Thaw trial, the exhibits, affidavits, &c. Early in the afternoon Mr. Jerome left his office, saying that he would not be back for the day.

"Send them to No. 3 Rutgers Street," ordered the District Attorney, as he pointed to the bulging leathern bags.

In this Rutgers Street tenement Mr. Jerome will spend the time between now and Monday preparing his summing up in the most celebrated murder case the world has seen in many years. The District Attorney has a little flat which is crowded more with books and things pleasing to an artistic eye than with the necessaries of domestic life. Rutgers Place, under his windows, is packed with humanity on warm nights, while thousands of children swarm over steps, in the middle of the highway, pack the public recreation ground near by, or tumble at play in the gutters. None of this disturbs the District Attorney. He works in the very heart of it, enjoying the feel of the crowd and not hearing the babel about him. Here will be prepared as important an address as ever was made by a prosecuting officer in a great criminal case. He will ask for a verdict of murder in the first degree.

On Monday Mr. Jerome will be ready. Mr. Delmas is already prepared for his summing up for Thaw. He has had abundant time during the sitting of the commission, when Mr. Hartridge did the work alone, for the defense. When the trial was brought to a halt for an examination into Thaw's mental condition, Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton, who had been called by the defense, was on the witness stand. He may be put in the witness chair Monday morning, but as he was cross-examined and attacked with considerable vigor by Mr. Hartridge, counsel of record for the defense, after he had precipitated the matter of the appointment of a commission, the probability is that Dr. Hamilton will be present for ornamental purposes solely.

Before the summing up of Mr. Delmas begins, however, Mr. Jerome will make a brief protest against the confirmation of the report, doing this with no hope of success, but for the satisfaction of his conscience, for he still believes that Thaw is a paranoiac, despite the fact that he will be compelled to go before the jury and argue for his death in the electric chair.

As far as is known no prosecuting officer has been in such a plight as Mr. Jerome now finds himself. The jury is supposed to know nothing of the proceedings attendant upon the appointment of the commission or before the commission when it held the open part of its session. But there have been headlines displayed in subway cars, headlines so wide and deep that a juror pursuing the even tenor of his business life would have had to go blindfolded to have avoided seeing them.

It being in the record of the court that Thaw is a sane man, Mr. Jerome will ask for a verdict of murder in the first degree, denying with all the power he can the brainstorm theory of Dr. Evans and his associates and sticking to his case, which merely narrated the fact that Thaw went up to White on Madison Square Roof Garden, stuck his revolver almost against his face, and shot him to death, asserting immediately thereafter that White had ruined his wife.

Should there be a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, and Thaw should face the electric chair, it is believed that Mr. Jerome would immediately ask that the sentence be life imprisonment instead of death. His friends and associates believe that.

In the event of a hung jury and a mistrial being declared, Thaw will linger in the Tombs for many months. There are about sixteen other murder cases to be tried in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court, and there is little likelihood of the Thaw case being reheard before late next Autumn. There would be, of course, an attempt to get bail for the prisoner. Should bail be granted, the career of Thaw at liberty would be a matter of almost as great interest as his career in the Tombs.

Thaw's wife visited him yesterday morning and remained with him as long as the prison regulations allowed. She was in bright mind as chipper and as smiling as ever, and Thaw was said to have been cheerful. The day before was their second wedding anniversary. It was said yesterday that Mrs. Thaw celebrated it in her apartments in the Hotel Lorraine, and that a number of her friends joined her in the celebration. One report was that a large party came over from Brooklyn in an automobile and that Mrs. Thaw's machine met them at the Bridge and whizzed them to the hotel.

WOULD LIMIT EXPERTS.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 5.—The developments of the Thaw trial resulted in the introduction of legislation to-day which aims to cover a certain phase over which there has been much contention. The idea is Majority Leader Moreland's.

The bill amends the Code of Criminal Procedure by inserting a new section, to be known as 392—A, and which provides as follows:

Testimony as to sanity or insanity of defendant. Upon the trial of a criminal action no testimony shall be received as to the sanity or insanity of the defendant except the testimony of persons who actually saw and observed the defendant at the time to which such testimony relates. This section shall not be construed to prevent the defendant from showing insanity in defendant's family where such insanity may be shown.

The proposed section would prevent expert testimony as to the state of the defendant's mind at the time of the alleged commission of the crime unless experts were actually present. Experts could testify only as to the sanity or insanity of the defendant as they found him at the time of such testimony.

DROWNS HERSELF IN BAY.

Mrs. Clara Bothfeld Ends Long Suffering from Nerves.

Weary of the long struggle against illness and a nervous disorder which made her nights sleepless Mrs. Clara M. Bothfeld, wife of Otto Bothfeld of 450 Ovington Avenue, Bay Ridge, committed suicide yesterday by throwing herself into the bay at the foot of Seventy-first Street. Early yesterday morning the body was seen floating inshore near that point by Gus Hintz of Narrows Avenue, who notified Policeman McMahon of the Fort Hamilton Station.

Mrs. Bothfeld was 48 years old, and had been a sufferer from a nervous disorder. She was subject to spells of despondency, and in January of last year attempted to end her life by shooting herself at her home. At that time it was said that her condition was the result of continual bridge whist playing, but this was indignantly denied by her family.

Mrs. Bothfeld continued to improve during 1906, and at the end of that year she was almost her old self. Ths family were hopeful, but a few weeks ago the disorder reappeared.

On Wednesday night she retired about 10:30 o'clock, after an evening spent with her husband and children. About 3 A. M. Mr. Bothfeld went into his wife's room and found the bed unoccupied. The back door was unlocked, and she had evidently left the house by that way. A search was made, and at daylight came the information that a body had been found in the Narrows. It was identified as that of Mrs. Bothfeld.

Mrs. Bothfeld is survived by her husband, who is a wealthy importer, and by three children. They are Mrs. A. D. Constant, and Harry and R. O. Bothfeld. A brother, Otto Heinigke, of 420 Ovington Avenue, also survives her.

THREATENS BINGHAM'S JOB.

Justice Morschauser Says He'll Lose It If Police Witnesses Don't Appear.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 5.—If certain policemen are ordered to be in the Supreme Court here next Monday and they fail to appear because of counter orders from Police Commissioner Bingham of New York City the Commissioner will "lose his job," according to Supreme Court Justice Morschauser.

A suit brought by Joseph Burfield against the New York City Railway Company for damages for injuries alleged to have been received in an accident is being tried in the Supreme Court here, and a number of New York policemen have been subpoenaed as witnesses. They have been here for two days waiting to testify. Justice Morschauser remarked in court that he would have to go away this afternoon, so that there was a prospect that the case would not be ended today. One of the policemen spoke up, saying:

"Commissioner Bingham said that if the case was not finished to-day we could not come here on Monday."

Justice Morschauser appeared to be astonished by this information. Then he said slowly:

"You tell Commissioner Bingham for me that if you are ordered to come here on Monday and do not return he will lose his job."

It was then the policeman's turn to look astonished, but nothing further was said.

BANK LOSES IN NOVEL SUIT.

Can't See Books of Decauville Co., Whose Money It Paid Out to Rival.

The Decauville Automobile Company of New York has just won the first step in a suit against the Metropolitan Bank of this city, which has been widely discussed in the automobile trade. Last year the Decauville Company deposited with the Metropolitan Bank the equivalent of 15,000f., with instructions to pay the money to its Paris agent, M. Brown.

After waiting for some time beyond the time when the money should have been received by him, M. Brown cabled to the New York company asking why it had not been sent to him. An investigation here resulted in the discovery that the Russian Bank had delivered the money to the Decauville Automobile Company in Paris, which has no connection with the New York company. By a strange coincidence, the two companies are involved in counter actions against each other. The Paris company, when the money was tendered, took it, thinking that it was an adjustment of the claims in their favor.

A demand on the Metropolitan Bank by the New York company met with a refusal to return the funds, and suit was entered against it. The bank asked for a court order to make the plaintiffs allow an investigation of their books. It was the argument on this point which was decided in the Decauville Company's favor, and probably will allow of a settlement of this case out of court.

FLAGG'S NEW GRAFT 'HAS MILLIONS IN IT'

Ex-Convict Starts a Highly Original Wall Street Investment Bureau.

YOU CAN'T LOSE, SAYS HE

It's Only Necessary to Put Perfect Confidence in Flagg to Get Rich Quick.

Jared Flagg is back again at the old stand with a brand-new scheme. There are "millions in it," of course, and he guarantees that his customers "can't lose" if they follow his instructions, put up money when he wants them to, and "sit tight" while the stock market is acting queerly.

The new scheme is a sort of second-best bet with Flagg. He wanted to start business as a "general bureau of information for young women of the theatrical profession," but he was denied a license for this by Commissioner Bogart on the ground that Flagg had served one month in the Tombs. Although his conviction was eleven years ago, the Commissioner had not forgotten. It was pointed out to the Commissioner, too, that the proposed theatrical agency was merely a scheme to supply young girls for disorderly houses, and was not unlike the offense for which Flagg was formerly convicted.

Flagg was not at all put out by his failure to obtain the license. He had other schemes up his sleeve. So he lost no time in getting together the necessary literature for his newest venture, that of "broker." He had several hundred pamphlets printed, labeled "Full Particulars," which only yesterday arrived at his offices on the third floor of the building at 76 Fifth Avenue. The "Full Particulars" explain Flagg's plan in detail. The circulars set forth that he will guarantee that any one can beat the stock market by buying stocks outright and by the multiple system can make profits as easily, as Flagg expresses it, "as picking greenbacks off the street." His plan is for customers to "buy a certain lot of stocks, and as often as the last lot purchased shows a profit of 1 per cent. or more, over and above commissions and transfer fee, take it. If subsequently it reacts and can be repurchased for the same amount of money at which it was originally bought, buy it, and repeat this operation of buying back on a 1 per cent. reaction, and selling on a 1 per cent. rise or better, over and above commissions and transfer fee, as often as possible. In other words, dispose of each lot bought, barring the original lot, or a lot bought at the original price, as soon as it shows a profit of 1 per cent. or better, over and above commissions and transfer fee.

"If after the original lot has been bought the price advances, or if it ultimately advances 2 per cent. above the original figure at which it was bought, buy an equal number of shares, and if it continues to advance, without reacting 1 per cent., continue to pyramid; that is, purchase one lot consisting of the same number of shares as the original lot every 2 points up. And protect against loss by moving up a stop-loss order to sell all on a reaction of 1 point below the price at which the last lot was bought.

"Do not, after the stop order has been executed, touch this stock again until it recedes to the figure at which the original lot was bought. Then proceed to manipulate as heretofore; use no discretion and simply follow instructions."

If this is at all hazy, Flagg is quite willing to explain more fully. His method of explaining is unique, as was shown yesterday when a young man from Philadelphia entered the office and declared himself to be a possible customer, and, after reading the "Full Particulars," confessed that he did not thoroughly understand the scheme.

"I tell you confidentially it is the same principle which made 'Al' Pettybone, the Los Angeles gambler, a millionaire," said Flagg. "Al, you know, made his money by multiplying his bets. He played the red or black cards, and when he lost he increased the bet next time. If he won the next time he took a rake-off and resumed the original-size bet. See? This is on the same principle. If you buy a stock and it goes down a point, buy another. If the second purchase goes up a point, sell it. Always buy when the stock drops a point, because it will surely rise again.

"Do you know that the average stock fluctuates from 700 to 1,100 points in a year? I can prove this by charts of stock fluctuations for the last thirty years."

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 5.—Foreclosure proceedings were begun here to-day against the Hackensack Meadows Company to get possession of a valuable tract of land held in trust for John B. Ferrier of New York City to secure a bond issue of $1,297,000.

The trust company asserts that there is still due on the mortgage $1,162,000, together with large arrears of interest. A majority of the bondholders have requested the trust company to foreclose.

Murphy Going to Brooklyn Dinner.

Brooklyn political circles were agitated last night by a rumor that Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, would visit that borough and make an after-dinner speech on the subject of Democratic politics. Part of the report was true. Daniel Moynahan, President of the Brooklyn Democratic Club, received a letter from Secretary Smith of Tammany Hall yesterday, saying that Mr. Murphy had accepted an invitation to attend the club's Jefferson dinner on April 16. The Tammany leader, however, has not been asked to speak. William Jennings Bryan is to be the star speaker at the banquet.

EDWIN MARKHAM.

BY ESTELLE DUCLO.

THY message hath gone forth upon the wind,
Bearing a protest to a craven world;
Thy words are javelins of Justice, hurled
To smite the fell oppressors of mankind:
Thou hast a challenge for the witting blind,
Who, seeing all, see naught—who leave unfurled
That flag of freed humanity, rich-purled
With symbols of great deeds, incarnadined.

On that white day, be it or near or far,
When men shall answer God with Brotherhood,
And Love shall be a fixed and shining Star,
Guiding them gently toward a great'ning Good;
When those are crowned who strove against life's wrongs,
Thou wilt be heart-enshrined for the brave songs!

WOMAN IN ALL AGES.

Her Status in Ancient Greece and Rome—The Progressive Intellectual Woman Not a Modern Development.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE.

WHENCE that absurd term "New Woman"? It is some years since Plato affirmed that women should receive the same training as men, and that the gifts of nature were equally diffused in both sexes. "One woman is a philosopher and one is an enemy to philosophy; one woman has spirit and another is without spirit. All the pursuits of men are the pursuits of women, and in all of them woman is only a lesser man." It is probable that Aspasia and others of the Hetaira class in Athens were responsible for this high opinion. Women of the widest culture and great charm, women who thought deeply, spoke wittily, loved the arts as well as divine philosophy, and in the case of Aspasia, at least, strove to arouse their sisters to a loftier conception of their destiny, their possibilities, hoping, perhaps, to prove that a woman could be at once the wife and the companion of a man.

"What strikes one most is a perplexed and baffled look which the whole face presents—as of some life-long anguish resulting from some contest which an immortal could wage successfully—not without a touch of exquisite sweetness, tenderness, and charity. Could it be the struggle in behalf of her sex?" So speaks Prof. Donaldson of the portrait bust of Aspasia.

We women of this age need desire no better fortune than to have a chronicler at once so gentle and so just—being a woman I must needs think him just—as these women of ancient Greece and Rome have found in the writer of this book. It has the buoyancy and freshness of a Spring day, a frank love of beauty, an invincible conviction that the generous and fine is the real and important side of human nature. Gracious and lovely forms move through the pages. We hear the laughter of young Nausicaa, the wise words of Aspasia and Portia; we see the golden sunshine of Mitylene gleam on the heads of Sappho and her maidens, those friends, those pupils the Lesbian so passionately loved. "I think Sappho was beautiful," says Dr. Donaldson. Therewith he draws a portrait of her which should convince the dullest doubter that beautiful she was in form and spirit, the exquisite mortal incarnation of her own immortal poems. She, too, loved her sex, endeavoring to raise it to greater freedom and understanding—"women in all ages who have dared to help forward the progress of their sex have been slandered and reviled," says our author, in partial refutation of the host of misrepresentations that have gathered about Sappho's lovely name. "She was no prude. Like the rest of her sex of that day she thought that it was woman's destiny to love, and that the woman who tried to resist the impulse of the god tried an impossible feat." But at the same time, Dr. Donaldson finds no line in her lyrics directly addressed to any man. The tales which linked her name with Phaon's or with men who had died before she was born or were born after her death were the inventions of the later comic writers; her own people honored her as no other woman was honored in Greece. A passionate, chaste, tender woman, filled with the ardent impulses of art and the pure power of devotion, she stands before us an example we might be happy to follow, though she passed through this world so many centuries ago.

The book gives one a clear picture of the various ideals in regard to women which prevailed through the Greek, Roman and early Christian times, and of how the women measured up to them. In Sparta the only thing a woman existed for was to bring forth strong and splendid sons. To do this she must be herself strong and splendid, and nothing that could make her so was neglected. Her bodily development was perfect, she was free and simple in her relations with men, she was chaste, fearless, proud. Cultivated she was not. Once she had borne her children she was at liberty to spend her time as she chose. Their training was in other hands. Here began the ruin of Sparta. There was a lot of women left after the mother had been accounted for, and it was this unaccounted for part that made mischief in time.

Athens had two classes of free women—the citizens or wives and the "Hetaire," or companions. Here a new ideal had come into being, that of intellectual intercourse between the sexes, though as yet it was not conceived possible that one woman could combine the two occupations of childbearer and friend. The wife was an isolated, ignorant creature, and she grew more and more hopelessly ineffectual; while the companions, though many among them were noble women, were yet desperately unprotected and at the mercy of whatever was low and base in man—"they had to fight a battle with dreadful odds against them; they succumbed, but which of us would have resisted"? So Athens passes.

The Roman matron is next in the spiral of existence. First, no more than a slave of her husband, who has over her the power of life and death, who can divorce her or be unfaithful to her as he pleases, she having no redress, no voice. But a Roman was not a Roman, were she but a woman, for nothing. Gradually she emancipated herself, slowly she rose to a place beside her husband, finally she stands with him, a fit mate for the master of the world. She might teach him how to live, she taught him also how to die. When Paetus hesitated to put himself to death at the command of the Emperor Claudius, his wife Aria plunged a dagger into her heart, drew it out and offered it to him with the words "Paetus, it does not pain."

The Romans made marriage a free contract between both parties, and Juvenal says: "If you are not going to love the woman who has been by a legal agreement betrothed to you, there seems to be no reason why you should marry her." I don't see how we could improve on that statement even at this day.

During the glorious years of the Roman supremacy her women show themselves virtuous, firm, jealous of their freedom and their dignity; they are loving wives, adequate companions, they manage their households with tact and propriety, nor were they thought unworthy of advising their husbands on questions of state and government. In the decadence Prof. Donaldson still finds much to say in their favor; he adduces proof to show that whatsoever of good remained was chiefly centred in them, and he thinks the stories of their depravity have been greatly exaggerated.

It is popularly supposed that the advent of Christianity worked a mighty change for the better in the status of women. Dr. Donaldson does not agree with this view. During the first three centuries of the Christian era he finds her position lower and the notions regarding her more degraded than previously. The growing strength of asceticism bore a large part in this result. The exclusion of women from any participation in teaching or serving Religion—unless it were as a martyr in the Roman Coliseum—worked to the same end. Woman's beauty came to be regarded as in itself sinful. The healthy Pagan attitude toward marriage and child-bearing was anathema to these newcomers in the world's arena. "Marriage even for the sake of children was a carnal indulgence, and such thinkers could not help thinking that the arrangements of the Creator were not wholly satisfactory. They did not dare to condemn marriage, but they held that it was much better not to marry at all—that the man or woman who did not marry was a nobler and more exalted being than the man or woman who did."

***

This St. Anthony fear of the female sex could have but one result. A contempt for women, a misprision of the family arose. A hectic feeling supervened. Children were a proof of weak self-indulgence, if not actual immorality. Woman became, in the words of Tertullian, "An Eve. The sentence of God on this sex of yours lives in this age—the guilt must of necessity live too. You are the Devil's gateway; you are the unsealer of the forbidden tree; you are the first deserter of the divine law; you are she who persuaded him whom the Devil was not valiant enough to attack. You destroyed so easily God's image. On account of your desert, that is death, even the Son of man had to die."

These are hard words and bespeak a hard condition. Poor woman had to begin all over again. Once more the weary path must be traversed, once more the shackles must be worn through, once more she must endeavor to make of her jailer and master her helper and friend. Nearly two thousand years have passed and she is well on her way again. This book with its succinct portrayal of what the Greek and Roman accomplished has great interest. They did not shun the eminine nor functions of womanhood. They were healthy and beautiful, they bore healthy and beautiful children, they filled their minds with the divine words of philosophy and poetry. It was as women they excelled, and they left a pattern behind which is still an inspiration. We have our own task of fulfillment, and no one can accomplish it for us, either by act of Parliament or gallantry. It was an ardent generosity and love of beauty that made Sappho and her Grecian sisters what they were. It was her nobility and courage that gave the Roman woman her freedom. Not by small means nor narrow hearts are great deeds achieved. This is said to be woman's age. May it, two thousand years hence, have as fine a story to tell, and find as sympathetic a teller, as this story of long dead women has found in Dr. Donaldson!

LUCAS MALET'S BOOK FOR THE FUTURE.

An American Poet Tells Why He Esteems "The Far Horizon" Above Other Recent Works of Fiction.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by MADISON CAWEIN.

To the prolific reader of the modern novel "The Far Horizon" must mark an epoch, both in point of distinction and of style. It is a rather curious and altogether agreeable pastime to compare its points of merit with the latest books of Mrs. Wharton and Fogazzaro, although Mrs. Wharton's slender little sheaf of a story, "Madame de Treymes," hardly ranks as anything more than a delightfully subtle character sketch. But in Fogazzaro's "Saint" we come somewhat nearer to the abiding bulk of the conventional novel; even to the lengthy religious controversy which seems to subordinate the love theme almost to the finest point of perspective. Both these books are significant without doubt, and are among the few good novels of the present day. But one puts down a story like "The Far Horizon" with a rather different feeling. It is a book for the future, and will grow in appreciation and popularity. A certain subjectiveness of style distinguishes it, a sort of reminiscent touch, which by some conjuror's trick becomes the most objective thing in the world, and as a result the characters actually live and move and have a very real existence.

The Lady of the Windswept Dust is all the more real for her allegorical name, and her comings and goings outside the conventional law. Our hero is described as a middle-aged gentleman of moderate fortune, who happens through force of circumstance to be a "paying guest" at an eminently respectable lodging house in one of the unfashionable parts of London. Not alluring, surely; nothing brilliant to enhance the picture; only one of those remarkable things which, in this instance, done in gray, in almost neutral tints, yet has the effect of strong opalescent color. A story subdued almost to the point of somhroness, but with a certain Oriental richness of effect. For out of this oppressive background grows gradually upon the consciousness a being altogether lovely and noble, a person of grandly simple soul, committed to greatness, who moves among his fellow-beings with a pathetic dignity and loftiness of outline. Always perfectly in their midst; one of them and yet not one of them. Surely Mrs. Harrison's art can go no further in subtle character painting. While the book as a whole impresses one as sad, Dominic Iglesias himself is not sad at all, but moves in his daily life with a fine serenity, which somehow heightens the general effect of pathos without spoiling the splendid sanity and poise of his character. He suffers terribly, it is true, having periods of agony and self-abasement, which are inevitable where one either thinks or feels. Freedom, loneliness, and old age are his burdensome guests. But it is noticeable and significant that he advances out of these periods always a step further on his way, healing himself of his hurts, as all great natures do, and adjusting himself to the conditions of his life with a very spiritual fineness.

One of the most beautiful and convincing chapters in the book is the one where Dominic, sad and wasting away with illness, comes, by a natural and reasonable process of thought, to give himself back to the Mother Church. This part of the story has nothing of the character of a religious controversy, such as we feel in Fogazzaro's "Saint," but is subordinated as a real and abiding part of a lonely man's life whose predilection for the Catholic Church was his, first of all, through the instinct of race, as he was by birth a Spaniard; and, secondly, by a very logical process of reasoning. Mrs. Harrison has here as elsewhere shown herself a master of technique. Where she has used a religious or philosophical idea, and the book is full of them, she has been careful to put them into the story and not to build her story around an abstract idea.

First of all she is telling a story, and everything is fuel which is rightfully used to keep the story going. Such little passages as the following, "The pathos of life as the multitude lives it, stupidly, without ideas, without any conscious nobility of purpose, yet with a certain blundering and clumsy heroism," she puts into the thoughts of very real people, and it seems natural for them to be said. One likes the portrait of Sir Abel Barking, which is well drawn, as is the little group of people who live just within sight of Dominic's lonely window, and who play such an important little part in his life. George Lovegrove is wholesome and lovable. His humility and his thrusting himself aside, so that he might not be in his friend's way, have a rare pathos. In point of faithfulness he was undoubtedly first, and it seems but fitting in the final chapter that he and the nun and the Lady of the Windswept Dust should share in some wise the last vigil.

The story, although it never abandons the loud environments of London, repeatedly impresses you as being vividly and unquestionably idyllic. There is the idyllic scene—a twentieth century Watteau, as it were—of the meeting of Dominic Iglesias and Poppy St. John, the Lady of the Windswept Dust. And again that impressive picture of the lone cedar in Trimmer's Green, "with its leafless trees and iron railings, livid, a grayness upon them as of fear." A cedar, symbolic, in a melancholy way, of this sad and solitary soul, this isolated man, outside whose windows it stretched its gaunt and sombre branches, tortured and weeping with the winds and rains of Autumn. And then, again, we have those happier touches, full of poetry, those harkings back to the little house in Holland Street, with its "bravely blossoming garden," a veritable oasis in the gray dust of Dominic's days, the one flowery spot in the desert of his years, fragrant and hushed and holy, holding the imagination, as it held his memory, with an appealing, an irresistible insistence, as a little child holds one's heart with the gentle innocence of its eyes.

Not since I read the forty-first chapter of "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel" has any chapter in a modern novel impressed me as did the closing one of "The Far Horizon." Here, as does in his best work the great novelist Meredith, Mrs. Harrison has achieved greatness. Fine and beautiful, it is also dramatic, in a quiet, unobtrusive way, and a fitting close, worthy of the notable whole. Leaving us, as it does, with an overwhelming sense of regret, we still feel that it has its raison d'être, that thus it would have actually happened in real life; so in the ice in the smile of undeviating fate are we brought face to face with the irony of the actual. Our regret, however, is tempered with satisfaction at the close that the end was such—fittingly such—that the life of this man, blameless and beautiful, and the life of this woman, weak and unfortunate, had been permitted at least to touch, though it was too late, to touch spiritually and no more, and through the purifying fire of that contact to rise above the body, the frailties of the flesh, the grosser physical passions.

WESTERN DESPERADOES.

THE STORY OF THE OUTLAW. A Study of the Western Desperado, with Historical Narratives of Famous Outlaws, &c. By Emerson Hough. Illustrated. Pp. x.-401. 12mo. Cloth. New York. The Outing Publishing Company. $1.50.

LAWLESSNESS upon our Western frontier has long been the theme of stories and dramas appealing to that love of adventure which is never invoked without finding a ready response; and this lawlessness is here recorded in a volume which concerns itself with fact and not fiction. Mr. Hough assures his readers that he has been at great pains to make his account entirely authentic, and his book certainly shows no trace of a tendency to exaggeration, but on the contrary is distinguished by a scrupulously careful moderation of statement. A considerable part of the information has been derived from the author's personal knowledge during twenty-five years of Western life. He claims that many of the facts given have not previously found their way into print, particularly in regard to the Lincoln County War of the Southwest and the Stevens County War of Kansas, both of which have been treated hitherto in a sensational and inadequate manner. Mr. Hough has scant respect for the police, and remarks that "the city which would select twenty Western peace officers of the old type and set them to work without restrictions as to the size of their imminent graveyards would free itself of criminals in three months' time, and would remain free so long as its methods remained in force."

"THE THINKING MACHINE."

JACQUES FUTRELLE'S "The Thinking Machine" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) is a reprint in book form of some serial yarns about the marvelous performances of Prof. Van Dusen. You may now read—or re-read—how Prof. Van Dusen accomplished an experimental jail delivery for himself under circumstances the most ingeniously prearranged for that purpose; how Prof. Van Dusen assisted his friend Hutchinson Hatch, a reporter, to discover the perpetrator of a dark crime in a fashionable Boston apartment house—this with no other clue than a bit of scarlet thread; how Prof. Van Dusen ascertained the identity of a man who had mislaid all consciousness of his personality, name, and nativity; how he solved the riddle of a bank burglary, and by sniffing the perfume on a handkerchief traced the crime to a particularly pretty and attractive young woman. The clues in this case—as in all the others—are so ingeniously arranged that the professor can't possibly miss 'em, but the peculiar fascination of the man hunt for all the descendants of the cave folk holds the reader to the trail as a bloodhound is held to the track of a runaway darky. The difference between Prof. Van Dusen and the ordinary man is the same as that between the ordinary man and the extraordinary woman. One by elaborate and minute analytical processes arrives at the conclusions which the other reaches by crosscuts not mathematically orthodox but perfectly adjusted to getting there.

The best story and the one which best illustrates the perverse ingenuity of the author who builds a mystery backward from an obvious solution into a something that is so fair an imitation of a blind maze that it may be mistaken at a casual glance for the real thing is furnished by the yarn called "The Great Auto Mystery." This yarn involves a beautiful blonde actress, a millionaire or two, a roadhouse, and a rather marrow-freezing experience with a corpse. There's another story about a lone house, hidden treasure, and a phosphorescent phantom—but the staginess of the phantom rather spoils it.

ENGLISH BELLS.

THE BELLS OF ENGLAND. By J. J. Raven, D. D. With sixty Illustrations. Pp. xv.-338. 8vo. Cloth. New York. E. P. Dutton & Co. $3.

THE author of this learned account of the bells of England says that he began his study of the subject in his boyhood and has continued it for sixty years. Now, in his old age, he publishes the result of his long labors in a volume highly creditable to his patient industry. At the close of his first chapter, upon the early history of bells, the author thus summarizes the contents of his book:

Of the following nineteen chapters, the next will be devoted to such remains as we have of the British period. The Saxon period will then receive notice, with reference to its towers and mention of bells by early chroniclers. This will bring us to the fourth chapter of the book, which will cover the days of the Norman Kings. The fifth chapter will embrace the thirteenth century, and in this we begin to see existing instances of ancient bells. Then melodious sequences, rings of bells, will appear, and development in shape will be recorded in the sixth chapter; and in the seventh the reader will be introduced to dedicatory and other inscriptions, initial crosses, foundry marks, and Lombardic lettering. By this time we shall be able in the eighth chapter to enter on the history of the earlier foundries, as at London, York, King's Lynn, &c. The ninth chapter will bring us to the days of black-letter inscriptions, with many a more or less faulty hexameter. Here gun-founding must have a passing word.

The great foundries of the Plantagenet period will occupy the three following chapters, divided locally, so as to take successively: (1) The Metropolis and the Southwest of England; (2) The Southeast, and (3) The North and Midlands. In the thirteenth chapter we shall notice itinerant founders, and mediæval foreign bells to be seen in England. This will be followed by the history of later foundries to the present day. The early history and subsequent development of change-ringing, with the consequent improvements in hanging, will require a chapter to themselves; and then I shall give an account of English signs, or bells of unusual size. The seventeenth chapter treats of chimes and carillons. Then the reader will find a change to less material subjects, for bell legends, bell poetry, bell law, will be found to occupy the eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth chapters.

Essays from G. W. E. Russell.

The many who enjoyed the charming book of essays, some ten years ago, entitled "Collections and Recollections," will welcome a new volume of the kind from George W. E. Russell. This is to be published immediately, under the title "Seeing and Hearing." There are fifty-three chapter heads, such as The Coronation, Doctors and Doctoring, Mourning, &c. The book, an 8vo., will sell at $2.50.

A DRAUGHT OF THE BLUE.

IT is hard to see what added interest is supposed by F. W. Bain to be obtained for his "A Draught of the Blue" (Putnam) by the claim that these two exquisite stories have been translated from an "original manuscript" written in the most indecipherable of characters or in the bewildering divisions of introduction, prologue, epilogue, preface, besides various pages devoted to cabalistic signs, verses, and pictures of which he has made use in presenting them to the eye. It would all seem to be a resort to a kind of hocus-pocus (innocent enough, doubtless) for interesting the wary reader, and it is certainly a particularly common device with those writers who exercise their imagination upon Eastern legends. Most such experiments, it must be owned, stand very much in need of exterior props of this or any other kind that the author's ingenuity may suggest, but "A Draught of the Blue" does not, and we confess to a distinct sense of irritation with the laboriously mysterious make-up of the book.

Aside from this, every word in it is an enchantment and a delight, and marks F. W. Bain, whether he be creator or translator, as one who can give most exquisite form to an exquisite thought and accomplish, as well, the miracle of disclosing the whole sum and substance of earthly love within the limits of two very short and simple little stories. Others have written bulky novels and yet fallen infinitely short of the soul revelation to be found in "A Draught of the Blue" and "An Essence of the Dusk." These particular lovers have Oriental names, and the extravagance of Oriental emotions colors their story, but, for the most part, the spirit of it all will appeal to men and women the wide world over and they will find, in greater or less degree, their own experiences recounted in the touching story of the King and his well-loved Alichumbita, in the tragedy of Aja and the King's daughter.

The first tale symbolizes with lyric intensity and beauty the ideal of all-absorbing love; the other as wonderfully pictures those darker phases when doubt and betrayal and heart-break enter in. There is nothing on the title page to give a clue as to the author's sex, but all through both stories there are trifles, light as air, that might suggest the possibility of a feminine hand in their making, a feminine mind back of their point of view. They breathe a delicacy and fragrance of sentiment that are as entrancing as they are foreign to the literature to which the author modestly claims to be indebted, and they are rendered in English that charms with its pure music. If one wishes to be transported to a land of veritable enchantment let him read "A Draught of the Blue."

"THE GARDEN OF THE SOUL."

IN the introduction contained in the first part of the "Hortulus Animæ: The Garden of the Soul." (New York: Lemcke & Beuchner. By subscription only and in sets. In 11 parts, each part $15 net,) the illuminated manuscript in the Imperial Royal Court Library at Vienna, which has been compared with the celebrated Breviarium Grimany, Dr. Friedrich Dörnhöffer, Keeper of the Print Room at the Imperial Royal Court Library, Vienna, presents the results of the latest investigations concerning the artists by whom the "Hortulus Animæ" was made, a discussion of similar manuscripts, and other information concerning the miniatures, &c., of value to those interested in art.

The "Hortulus Animæ" has been reproduced in fac simile from the first German edition of the original work, the latter now being extinct. The paper has been copied from the original edition in imitation vellum. The volume is a quarto in size, and is a page-by-page fac simile of the manuscript in the Imperial Library in Vienna. There are in all 514 pages in this manuscript, of which 100, containing miniatures, are colored; 857, the text, are in monotone, and the remaining 62 are blank. The reproduction will be exactly like it, and its printing is being supervised by Prof. Koloman Moser of the Industrial Art University at Vienna. The forthcoming work will be in eleven parts.

The original manuscript, which is one of the most beautiful examples of illuminated work in existence, was written and decorated with miniatures between 1517 and 1523 for the Archduchess Margaret of Austria, the daughter of Emperor Maximilian I. The miniatures are the work of Gerard Horebout, who designed the majority of miniatures in the Breviarium Grimany. These miniatures and the scenes forming the borders of the "kalendar" give a vivid idea of the social manners and costume of the period. The "Hortulus Animæ" is a Dutch and German "Livre d'Heures." The present copy, in German, was elaborated from the work by Sebastian Brandt, who, it has been proved, copied it from the book printed by Flach in 1510 at Strasburg.

THE FIRST YEAR OF

EVERYMAN'S LIBRARY

When the first One Hundred Volumes of Everyman's Library were announced a little over a year ago the general description of this new uniform edition of standard books was framed with caution as it was feared that the portion of the public which is well informed about books would not be able to reconcile the ambitious plans announced for Everyman's with the very moderate cost of the cloth bound edition.

A year has passed and Everyman's Library has gained for itself a wide circle of friends and purchasers who recognise that this Library affords A PERFECTLY SATISFACTORY FORM IN WHICH TO POSSESS THE GREAT BOOKS.

Everyman's has, in fact, more than fulfilled the promises made for it. The idea of having each volume prefaced with an introduction by some eminent writer especially fitted to speak with authority on that particular book has been followed out with great success. Among the authors who contributed introductory chapters to the second one hundred volumes were James Bryce, G. K. Chesterton, R. Brimley Johnson and others.

In the details of manufacture the original high excellence has, of course, been maintained. The care originally bestowed upon the selection of form, materials, typography and binding of Everyman's has been justified by the universal appreciation of the beauty and attractiveness of the volumes.

A review of the TWO HUNDRED TITLES NOW READY shows that Everyman's is indeed a "library" containing representative books from every department of literature. In fiction it offers Scott's Waverley Novels, 21 volumes, Jane Austen's Novels, 5 vols., Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales, 5 vols., with a long list of famous books, many of them being complete sets. In History are Macaulay's England, Grote's History of Greece, Motley's Dutch Republic, and many other standard histories in single volumes and sets. Every department shows clearly the intention to develop this edition so as to include in the thousand volumes it is ultimately purposed to issue, those books which have best withstood the test of time and are of permanent value to this generation.

SEND A ONE DOLLAR BILL for two books selected from the list below, or send a two dollar bill for four books (in cloth). From these specimen copies and the printed matter that will be sent with them you can form an idea of the uniform excellence and future scope of Everyman's Library. In selecting titles you need not avoid "breaking sets." Everyman's Library is sold one book at a time, or as many as you please.

NEW BOOKS OF THE SPRING SEASON.

An Annotated List of Recent and Forthcoming Publications in All Branches of Literature.

NATURALLY a list such as this, classified and each class arranged alphabetically according to the names of the authors, calls for brief comment. Naturally, too, a definitive list of books representing everything issued at this time of year between covers would tax too severely the columns of this paper and be of satisfaction merely in personal and special cases. It cannot be said, however, that the line has been drawn at the specialist, whether represented by a scientific, religious, or textbook writer. But in the inevitable work of reducing the list, the interests of the general public have been kept in view, and special attention has been paid to making the departments of Fiction, Travel, History, and Outdoor Books as complete as possible, and whenever necessary presented with additional information.

FICTION.

Well-Known Men Writers.

REED ANTHONY, COWMAN. By Andy Adams, author of "The Outlet," &c. 12mo. Cloth. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $1.50.

The hero of this story has adventures with pirates in his search for hidden treasure and many other excitements before he wins his sweetheart.

PARTNERS OF PROVIDENCE. By Charles D. Stewart, author of "The Fugitive Blacksmith." Over 100 illustrations by C. J. Taylor. 12mo. Cloth. New York: The Century Company. $1.50.

The Missouri River and its steamboats furnish the field on which Sam and his dog and a certain wanderer play.

PHANTOM WIRES. By Arthur Stringer, author of "The Wire Tappers," &c. Illustrated by Arthur W. Brown. 12mo. Decorated cloth. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

A continuation of the adventures of Jim and Frances Candler Durkin.

KATHERINE. By E. Temple Thurston, author of "The Apple of Eden." 12mo. Cloth. New York: Harper & Brothers.

The heroine of this story is a beautiful young woman who longs for a romance of her own. Through an accident, she has but two years to live. So she determines to get what she wants before the end. Her sudden return to health saves her from a tragedy.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE KANSAS. By Louis Tracy. 12mo. Cloth. Pp. 336. New York: Edward J. Clode. $1.50.

A sea story. The liner Kansas, crippled, drifts in the South Pacific, finally into a land-locked harbor, where she is attacked by man-eating savages. Amid soft southern seas, a Tracy romance blooms.

GROWTH. By Graham Travers, author of "The Way of Escape." 12mo. Cloth. New York: Henry Holt & Co. $1.50.

A story of the intellectual and spiritual development of an Edinburgh student, with glimpses of Florence and Rome at Easter time.

A CADDIE OF ST. ANDREW'S. By Gilbert Watson, author of "Three Rolling Stones in Japan." 12mo. Cloth. New York: Henry Holt & Co. $1.50.

The "caddie" was once a fisherman. His speech is humorous, and he has a passion for travel and adventure.

A SIMPLE SPELLING BEE. By Owen Wister, author of "Lady Baltimore," "The Virginian," &c. Seven illustrations. 12mo. Cloth. New York: The Macmillan Company. 50 cents.

The full-plate illustrations of this book are in admirable keeping with the high spirits of the little tale, the title of which invites speculation.

THE TURN OF THE BALANCE. By Brand Whitlock, author of "The Thirteenth District." Illustrated by Jay Hambidge. 12mo Cloth. Indianapolis: The Bobbs-Merrill Company. $1.50.

Mr. Whitlock herein arraigns the law as it is administered in America at the present time.

THE CASTLE OF DOUBT. By John H. Whitson, author of "The Rainbow Chasers," &c. 12mo. Decorated cloth. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

This story, dealing with dual personality, is in an entirely different vein from the others by the author.

An Uncommonly Interesting Biography

The Life and Letters of Edwin Lawrence Godkin

Edited by ROLLO OGDEN, Editor of The New York Evening Post.

Two volumes, crown 8vo, $4.00 net

The Life of E. L. Godkin

Born in Ireland 1831

Studied Law in London, 1851-1853

Special Correspondent of the Daily News in Crimea, 1853-1855

American Correspondent of the Daily News, 1856-1865

Editor of The Nation 1865-1881

Editor of the Evening Post 1881-1899, Editor in Chief after 1883

Died in Devon, 1902

The book is a fascinating exhibit of a man whose knowledge was thorough; whose command of expression was brilliant; whose relations with public men were close; and whose influence, owing to his remarkable personality, was wide and powerful.

MR. JAMES BRYCE has remarked upon two other elements in the strength of his exceptional influence:

"One was the universal belief in his disinterestedness and sincerity. . . . The other was his humor. An austere moralist who is brimful of fun is rare in any country."

PROF. WILLIAM JAMES wrote:

"To my generation, his was certainly the towering influence in all thought concerning public affairs, and indirectly his influence has certainly been more pervasive than that of any other writer of the generation."

MR. HENRY HOLT wrote to him:

"At least one man feels that you have taught him—and not merely him, but the whole country, more than has any other man in it."

THE DIAL says:

"If on every educated American's most accessible shelves 'Godkin's Life' could have its fitting place alongside Curtis's 'Addresses and Orations', the 'Letters of James Russell Lowell,' the 'Life of William Lloyd Garrison', by his sons, and Bryce's 'American Commonwealth', there would be little ground for pessimism as to the future of Democracy in America."

B. L. Putnam Weale's
The Truce in the East and Its Aftermath

By the author of "The Re-Shaping of the Far East," etc.

Cloth, 8vo, with illustrations and map, $3.50 net.

Mr. WEALE'S book on the conditions in Manchuria just before the Russo-Japanese War is, according to the London Daily News, "so far superior to all other books on the Russian rule in Manchuria that it may be considered really the only one." He has lost none of his power of thoroughly interesting the reader, while supplying information of the greatest importance to students of Far Eastern politics. His lively, picturesque narrative discusses the new position of Japan, its promise and its menace, the present and future of China, and the ways in which the great Powers have been affected by the results of the war.

Mr. E. Parmalee Prentice's Federal Power Over Carriers and Corporations

"It is carefully written, scholarly, thoughtful, and at this period has a wonderful air of timeliness . . . to the student of good government, to the lawyer, and to the statesman it should prove invaluable."—Herald.

Gen. Henry L. Abbot's book on The Panama Canal

A new, thoroughly revised edition entirely reset. A full account of the history of the Canal; a discussion of the engineering difficulties; full details of the American operations brought to date; recent illustrations, etc.

Cloth, $2.00 net (postage 15c.)

Mr. Franklin Pierce's The Tariff and the Trusts

"One of the very best books that has been published upon either subject . . . it is right up to date, dealing with the actual situation, as it presents itself now. I do not think any man in the United States, who wants to understand the tariff and trusts question, will do himself justice unless he reads this book."

Congressman JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS.

Rev. R. J. Campbell's The New Theology

Of great interest to the would-be religious man who finds himself out of tune with the churches; an interesting presentation of the gospel of "the humanity of God and the divinity of man." (Cloth, 12mo, $1.50 net Postage 10c.)

NEW FICTION

Mr. John Oxenham's The Long Road

"It is a thrilling and absorbing story. Through all the tragedy . . . there is a rarely sweet accompaniment of tender tones, of love and heroism, and intermittent, never quite lost hope. It is a touching and beautiful story."—Evening News, Buffalo.

"A good book, enthralling and touching."—N. Y. Tribune.

Cloth, with frontispiece, $1.50

Mr. Jack London's Before Adam

"One wonders where to begin to tell how beautiful it is—how vitally interesting."—Denver Post. Cloth, illustrated in colors, $1.50.

Mr. Owen Wister's "deliciously amusing" new book How Doth the Simple Spelling Bee

"Mr. Wister has found the true function of the Simplified Spelling fad—it is to make us merry."—Pittsburgh Gazette Times. Cloth, illustrated, 50 cents

NEW OUTDOOR BOOKS

Mabel O. Wright's Birdcraft SEVENTH EDITION.

"Its excellencies have already won the commendation of all naturalists. . . . Such fineness of truth, such accuracy of drawing, could only be the work of genius."—Inter Ocean. With full page plates by Fuerles, cloth, $2.00

Mr. Bolton Hall's Three Acres and Liberty

A practical, verified showing of what can be done by the intelligent use of a very small piece of land; a gospel to men unequal to the strain and confinement of commercial or industrial life.

DRINK. By Hall Caine, author of "The Christian," "The Prodigal Son," "The Deemster," "The Manxman," &c. 12mo. Paper covers. New York: D. Appleton & Co. 10 cents.

This little story is based on the curative value of hypnotism. Drink is shown to be a hypnotist, while the feeling of hope, it is proved, in turn hypnotizes the desire for liquor.

McCLURE'S SPRING BOOKS

Sparkling romance by the authors of "Lady Betty Across the Water," etc.

C. N. & A. M. Williamson's The Princess Virginia

¶ This fascinating romance of royal love and court life, of Destiny's ruling in the loves of a rebellious Princess and an Emperor, will enthrall the thousands of the authors' admirers. There is none who would not applaud the charming Princess Virginia, when, defying the Powers, she resolves to marry the man of her choice though her decision cost her a crown. The denouement makes a tale of vivid surprises coupled with dainty sentiment and dazzling adventure. Splendidly illustrated by Leon Guipon. $1.50.

Henry Milner Rideout's The Siamese Cat

¶ The purchase of a cat at a Siamese bazaar begins a series of the most fantastic adventures and a delightful love affair. There is about the tale all the abiding charm that goes with a quick succession of climax and rattling incident.
Illustrated by Will Grefe. $1.25.

O. Henry's The Trimmed Lamp

¶ More Stories of The Four Million. A new book by this inimitable story-teller has come to be regarded as a literary event. These stories of New York, dealing with aspects of life among all classes in the great city, are rich in human understanding, humorous and real. With frontispiece. $1.00.

The genuine, authentic successor to "Pigs Is Pigs"

Ellis Parker Butler's The Great American Pie Company

¶ Millions of Americans who chortled over "Pigs Is Pigs" are going to accord its deserving little successor the same rousing reception. Eph. Deacon's and Phineas Doolittle's plan for cornering the supply of the luscious American product by gaining control of the flour output, the cooperage industry, the lard market, the orchards and the railroads, is as exeruciatingly funny as Mike Flannery's famous predicament.
Illustrated by Frederick Dorr Steele. 50c.

A. Conan Doyle's The Croxley Master

¶ This famous story has been chosen to inaugurate a new series of books describing the sports of times past and present. This is a veritable classic of sporting life, famous as perhaps the best story of the prize-ring in fiction.
Frontispiece in Colors. 50c.

Ida M. Tarbell's He Knew Lincoln

¶ A new conception of this grand character, by Lincoln's greatest biographer.
¶ "I have been sitting here in my office blubbering for half an hour, and you are responsible—you and Billy Brown. The pathos of the story is irresistible."
From a letter to Miss Tarbell.
Colored Frontispiece and Illustrations. Postpaid, 55c; net, 50c.

New novel by the author of "The River," "Children of the Mist," etc.

Eden Phillpotts' The Whirlwind

¶ A rugged, powerful tale of the Dartmoor country—a simple, genuine romance enacted close to nature by real and appealing men and women. "The story is the strongest that Mr. Phillpotts has yet had to tell." N. Y. Sun. "Mr. Phillpotts has never written a novel better in construction or more sincere." N. Y. Tribune.
Cloth. $1.50.

Florence Wilkinson's The Silent Door

¶ A beautiful story. It is full of the rare understanding of the heart of a child, exquisitely sympathetic and true.
¶ "A lovely book is this,—full of fresh charm and individuality."
Louisville Courier-Journal. Cloth. $1.50.

Mrs. Wilson Woodrow's The Bird of Time

¶ "Strung together like the sparkling jewels of a necklace," these chapters on women and their interests invite perusal and provoke thought.
¶ "A more delightful series of papers can scarcely be imagined."
Louisville Courier-Journal. Cloth. Postpaid, $1.10; net, $1.00.

McCLURE'S SPRING BOOKS

An enthralling new romance by the author of "The Viper of Milan"

Marjorie Bowen's The Master of Stair

¶ The splendid virility and power of "The Viper of Milan" dominates this tremendous romantic drama, laid in the period when the entire clan of the McDonalds was annihilated by the Campbells at the massacre of Glencoe. In Sir John Dalrymple, Master of Stair and father of Nancy Stair, the author depicts the figure of a man of iron. Love, which played so small a part in the "Viper," here forms a leading motive. Cloth. $1.50.

Keble Howard's The Smiths

¶ The simple annals of a suburban family, taking the reader through two generations. They charm in their unaffectedness and diffuse a warm and mellow glow of sympathy, so true are they to the experience of the average suburbanite. Mr. Howard is an English humorist of the rarest quality. Cloth. $1.50

Ashton Hilliers' Fanshawe of the Fifth

¶ Solid entertainment is to be had from every page of this novel of early Nineteenth Century English life and manners. Discriminating readers will seize upon it with delight. It recalls vividly "Heory Esmond" and Fielding.

¶ "A novel among novels." Newark Call. Cloth. $1.50

An idyllic romance by the author of "Tillie, a Mennonite Maid," etc.

Helen R. Martin's His Courtship

¶ Deliciously quaint, charming in its simplicity and natural humor, is this tale of Professor Kinross's capitulation to the witcheries of sweet, delicate Eunice, and his wooing of the unworldly little pastoral maid. Eunice is a product of heredity and Pennsylvania "Dutch" tradition, a fascinatingly complex character. Illustrations by Alice Barber Stephens. $1.50

Jane Wardle's The Artistic Temperament

¶ This story of London art life is meeting with the same astonishing success in London which greeted "The Viper of Milan" last year. It seems already to be the "find" of the season. Cloth. $1.50

G. Lowes Dickinson's From King to King

¶ In a dozen dramatic dialogues in prose and verse, the author of "A Modern Symposium," "The Meaning of Good," etc., reveals, with wonderful insight, the inward spiritual significance of The Great Rebellion.

Cloth. Postpaid, $1.10; net, $1.00.

Burton J. Hendrick's The Story of Life Insurance

¶ In response to a great demand, Mr. Hendrick's articles published in McClure's Magazine are now issued in book form. This is the most successful effort ever made to render life insurance plain to the average reader.

Illustrated. Postpaid, $1.32; net, $1.20

Martin Hume's Through Portugal

¶ In which are chronicled the experiences and observations of an extended trip through that remote country, little visited by the tourist, Portugal. Major Hume is an admirable guide.

Fully illustrated. Postpaid, $2.15; net, $2.00.

The Temple Molière

¶ New volumes: LES FEMMES SAVANTES; LES JALOUSIES DE BARBOUILLE. Edited, with Preface, Notes and Glossary, by Professor Frederick Spencer. With photogravure frontispiece.

Square 16mo, cloth, each, net, 45c. Leather, each, net, 65c.

Ford Madox Hueffer's England and the English

¶ Mr. Hueffer has interpreted in this book, as far as possible, the intimate inner life of the land and of the race; has endeavored to convey some living, vital conception of the Anglo-Saxon character.

NEW CHRONICLES OF REBECCA

"A nicer, jollier girl never danced through the pages of fiction."
—The Interior, Chicago.

First Edition 50,000

"Of all the children of Mrs. Wiggin's brain the most laughable and the most lovable is Rebecca."
—Life, New York.

Mrs. Wiggin's new story will be one of the most welcome books of the year. Rebecca is a favorite in the hearts of thousands. She has become almost a national character, as she certainly embodies a national type. Native wit and the wholesome charm of untrammeled American girlhood brighten every page. Rebecca's old friends figure largely in these new episodes of her life in Riverboro,—Abijah, Mrs. Cobb, Emma Jane, and the others. It is a story glowing with humor, full of human kindness and winning realism.

Illustrated by F. C. Yohn. 12mo, $1.25. (Ready April 17)

The World's Warrant — By Norah Davis

The originality in plot, the freshness of the background—present-day Alabama—the real attraction of the chief participants in the strange love story, and, above all, the strength and boldness in style, give The World's Warrant a fascination which is felt page by page until the close of the novel.

With Frontispiece in color by F. C. Yohn. Crown 8vo, $1.50. (Ready April 27)

What Happened to Barbara — By Olive Thorne Miller

A charming story of the experiences of an American girl at school and at home, introducing some quaint characters.

A New Series of Biographies of Leading Americans

JOHNSTON'S LEADING AMERICAN SOLDIERS

Biographies of Washington, Greene, Taylor, Scott, Andrew Jackson, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, McClellan, Meade, Lee, "Stonewall" Jackson, J. E. Johnston.

By R. M. Johnston, author of "Napoleon." With 13 portraits, 1 vol. Probable price $1.75 net. (Ready April 13th.)

Soldiers presented as soldiers; their principal battles are treated in considerable detail, which makes the book, as a whole, a composite military history from the interesting viewpoint of the dominant personalities. The presentation of tactics is remarkably lucid. Anecdotes that indicate personality as effectively as historical performances are frequent.

Volumes to follow soon:—"Scientists," edited by David Starr Jordan—"Historians" (W. P. Trent)—"Lawyers" (Henry C. Merwin)—"Poets" (Curtis Hidden Page)—"Essayists" (W. M. Payne).

The Brooklyn Citizen says:

"A delightful treat. She excels in pure fun, dry humor and exquisite drawing Sarah Orne Jewett, Alice Brown and Mary E. Wilkins. In repression and suppression, two of the rarest, as they are the highest, qualities of the 'born' story teller, she is a past master. The very quietness of her humor is in itself artistic humor of the finest kind. The marvel is that she is so uniformly good. . . . The story is bound to take high, probably the highest, rank in its especial class."

MR. OPPENHEIM'S NOVELS

Dumas classified books under two heads—the entertaining and the other kind. "At the head of the entertaining writers," says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, "stands E. Phillips Oppenheim."

"His last novel is always his best," the Cleveland Leader has said. His most recently published book,

The Malefactor

one of the Six Best Selling Novels.

"Mr. Oppenheim's novels have another rare merit" points out the Louisville Courier-Journal, "one always wishes more." If you have already read "The Malefactor" ask your bookseller for one of the following:

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

The Septuagenary of the Poet Who Published "The Queen Mother and Rosamond" Forty-six Years Ago.

Of all the eminent septuagenarians with whose septuagenaries the press has of late been busy, not one is so incompatible with the notion of old age as Algernon Charles Swinburne, not even Thomas Bailey Aldrich, whose personal impression was always that of a man much below his actual years, and who has so sudden and melancholy a way so strikingly confirmed the Psalmist's estimate of the limit of human life by expiring after being just in time to inhale the fragrance of the tribute that was offered to him by his fellow-craftsmen on his seventieth and last birthday. Certainly not Mr. Howells, about whom in his youth there was a sedateness and circumspection beyond his years, so that at no period has he made the impression of immaturity. Physically, according to the camera, Mr. Swinburne makes more the impression of old age than either, with his bald head and his furrowed face. But in his work he has all along seemed to retain the impulsive vigor of irreflective adolescence. Mr. Aldrich once wrote the "Story of a Bad Boy," which certainly was not autobiographical, but of which the title might fairly be supposed to refer to the British poet.

Mr. Swinburne's juvenility was indeed characterized by the mischievousness which makes the conventional "bad boy," who constitutes the terror of the conventional citizen and scandal of the old maid. One may say that his literary pranks had always been marked by malicious mischief, if we use the adjective in the French sense. Like the fat boy in "Pickwick," he desired to "make your flesh creep" with his early poems. In his early defense of them, he might, like Byron, have explained that he was young and angry when he wrote about his critics and was bent upon displaying his wrath and his wit. But for the most daring of his early attempts to "paralyze the bourgeois" he has in his old age professed his sincere impenitence. They were originally written for the purpose of shocking Balliol in particular, and perhaps Oxford in general. Oxford is by no means the most shockable of British communities. It comes nearer to being the least so. But legend retains that Swinburne, with the frankest of his Hellenic temerities, succeeded in shocking it. These temerities antedated his first public appearance with "The Queen Mother and Rosamond" in 1861. It was a drama which the world ignored, and would, doubtless, willingly have let die if the poet's productivity had ceased at that point. It was not until 1865 that he made his real first appearance with "Atalanta in Calydon," of which prompt notice was taken by all persons sensitive to English poetry to whose notice it was brought. It was not till the following year that the early temerities, together with some later temerities, appeared in the "Poems and Ballads," which assuredly attained their object if their object was to make the British public sit up. The post records of them in the "Dedication," dated 1865, that some of them were seven years old, thus dating back to 1858:

Some scattered in seven-year traces
As they fell from the boy that was then,
Long left among idle green places,
Or gathered but now among mae.

So that, really, the poetical performance of the present septuagenarian covers almost or quite half a century. But during that period he has never ceased to be a boy, and, in the sense of a willingness to shock, has never ceased to be a "bad boy," an "awfu' bairn," as "enfant terrible." Quite true, he has also enjoyed the enviable and perpetual youth who is made, according to Kipling, by the disciple of the "True Romance":

Who holds by thee hath Heaven in fee
To gild his dross thereby,
And knowledge sure that he endure
A child until he die.

Within these forty-five years Swinburne's verse has been abundantly criticised. There seems no just occasion in his seventieth birthday to add another to these criticisms. All the world has agreed that he is a supreme master, the supreme master in English, of the technic of verse, the verbal and the prosodiacal technic. All the world, too, is agreed that the intellectual and emotional "content," as the music critics say, of the technic is of less importance than the technic itself; that a theme worthy of the unfailingly sumptuous setting occurs to the poet only rarely, while his unequaled technical apparatus he has always with him; that, like Browning, and for very different reasons, he is likely to survive by a dozen lyrics. But it may be in order to put in a small plea for the poet's prose, which all his critics seem to agree to villipend. True enough, as prose, it violates every one of the accepted canons of writing, while his verse fulfills them all. His volubility and his sonority, no longer restrained by musical bounds, seem to find no end. Vox et praeterea nihil, seems a fair thing to say. But it is not a fair thing to say. Granted that the elaborate verbal apparatus which he accumulated to annihilate the spiteful Robert Buchanan withal has less potency toward that end than the simple assertion of the untutored Edmund Yates: "I bought him bread for his stomach and sulphur for his back." Granted that his rages had better like Juvenal's "make verses" than make Swinburnian prose. Yet one who takes the whole body of the prose and considers it has it borne in upon him that, unlike the even more facile verse, it almost or quite always has its intellectual and critical value; that there is almost or quite always something in it. And while unmeasured denunciation seems to the casual reader the character of such of it as is not characterized by unmeasured laudation, yet the laudation, however extravagantly expressed, is almost always truly appreciative at bottom. The writer has an almost unfailing sensitiveness to excellence, and to excellence in a great variety of kinds. Above all, and in spite of the Thersitean strain in which he berates his enemies, the thing which mainly allures him to write critical prose is that he himself has called "the noble pleasure of praising." Taking the body of the prose, one may fairly say that its most distinguishing characteristic is generous and intelligent, or perhaps one had better say intuitive, appreciation. And that is much to say of any critical writer. There are few critical writers of whom it is so true as of the touchy and irascible Swinburne.

MR. PUTNAM'S "CENSORSHIP."

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM has just read the last proofs of the second volume of his important work, "The Censorship of the Church of Rome and its Influence Upon the Production and the Distribution of Literature." The volume will come from press before the end of the month.

The contents of this second volume are as follows: (1) "Theological Controversies in France, Germany, England, and the Netherlands"; (2) "The Treatment of the Scriptures Under Censorship"; (3) "The Monastic Orders and Censorship"; (4) "Roman Indexes"; (5) "General Prohibitions and the Continuation of Class I."; (6) "Issues Between Church and State"; (7) "Examples of Condemned Literature"; (8 "The Censorship of the State and Censorship by Protestants"; (9) "The Book Trade of Europe as Affected by Censorship"; (10) "The Censorship of the State"; (11) "The Literary Policy of the Modern Church"; (12) "The Authority and the Results of the Censorship of the Church."

A criticism of the first volume of this work by John Ireland is significant as coming from the Roman Church, and shows that, as Mr. Putnam has not indulged in diatribes, there is no objection from the intelligent Catholic point of view. The Archbishop says: "It is a work of remarkable erudition. So far as I have perused its pages I find it one of rare large-mindedness and historic impartiality. The subject is one into which few writers have had the courage to delve."

Ten Years of Zionism.

A synthesis of the Zionist movement is contained in a pamphlet published by the Zionist Central Bureau, Cologne. The author has condensed into forty pages a summary of critical opinion in regard to this movement, its forerunners and its development since the first congress was organized by the late Theodor Herzl.

ROOSEVELT GOSSIP.

MR. GEORGE WILLIAM DOUGLASS'S "anecdotal biography" called "The Many-Sided Roosevelt" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) is a disappointing book chiefly because of the obvious and even obtrusive one-sidedness of the work of the author. "If this book has any excuse," he declares at the outset, "it lies in a desire to preserve a portrait of the real man, the man whom his contemporaries know, and to show him as he behaves every day. It may be charged," he adds, "that it is a flattering portrait, as little notice has been taken of the criticism of partisan opponents or of the unpleasant tales told by them. These have been deliberately omitted, for it was not my purpose to perpetuate animosities." When one reaches the close of the book, one realizes that the compiler has omitted everything not favorable to his hero; he has apparently gone on the assumption that no nnpartisan criticism is possible, and that the life of Mr. Roosevelt has been one long series of successful efforts to realize the highest ideals, unshadowed by anything except the resentment and envy of the bad men whose unworthy ambitions he has consistently foiled. He considerately notifies his readers: "It is only fair to say that Mr. Roosevelt himself is in no way responsible for what appears, save as he has done the things which observers have noted." It is not easy to imagine Mr. Roosevelt making himself responsible in the remotest degree for an account of himself so lacking in discrimination and perspective.

It must be said, however, that Mr. Douglass goes far to disarm criticism by his more than childlike naïveté. Because he has included a considerable number of anecdotes of "the President's unconventional way of doing things," he seems to believe that he has done all that could be asked toward producing "a record of the true man." He even plumes himself on his thoroughness and impartiality; he imagines that he has pretty effectually checked a perceptible tendency to "idealize" Mr. Roosevelt. It must be said also that Mr. Douglass states that he has "been at considerable pains to verify the tales that have been told" and has "had correspondance or personal interviews with those acquainted with the facts in nearly every case." The pains thus taken have their reward; so far as we are able to judge, no errors of consequence have crept into the book. The portrait of Mr. Roosevelt is as nearly accurate and trustworthy as an entirely flattering one can be. Needless to say, it would have been more convincing and more informing had it been conceived and carried out in a less flattering temper.

THE FURNESS VARIORUM.

A REMARK on this page last week that Dr. Horace Howard Furness's son was assisting him in his editorial labors on the Variorum Shakespeare seems to have been misinterpreted. Of course Dr. Furness is in excellent health and working as energetically as ever. But it never seemed likely that so great an undertaking could be completed in one lifetime, and now that Dr. Furness's son has taken up some part of the work the doubt is removed. Dr. Furness himself has devoted all his time lately to "Antony and Cleopatra," his edition of which will soon be published. Mr. Horace Howard Furness, Jr., on the other hand, has been employed on "Richard III.," which will be the next volume of the Variorum to be brought out by the Lippincotts.

A STUDY IN FEMININITY.

COMPARISON between husband and wife is inevitable when both write novels. Therefore perhaps the first thought of the reader of "Katherine," (Harper) by E. Temple Thurston, is bound to be of its superlative dissimilarity to "The Masquerader," by which Mrs. Thurston so quickly gained recognition in both England and America. In manner, in method, in point of view, in purpose, it would be impossible for two novels to be more unlike. Mrs. Thurston's chief aim was to tell a story, and she has the story-telling instinct. But the telling of an interesting tale about men and women and life is the least of the things with which Mr. Thurston has concerned himself. Where she is strong in the invention of incident and the weaving of it together into a plot, he is very weak. But he has a feeling for the value in fiction of character and of temperament and an ability in expressing them by description, analysis, dialogue, and incident that are far beyond her powers. And also he excels her very much in intellectual quality and in distinction of style.

Miss Katherine Crichton, very much his heroine, to whom all the other characters are tributary, makes her début in the prelude, as an infant with personality and red hair, by means of a portrait which make both her and the artist famous. Then the story leaps to her marriage, as a brilliant, beautiful, fascinating young woman, with hair toned down and personality toned up, to an earnest, plodding, socialistically inclined member of Parliament. Certain feminine characteristics, with which she is richly endowed, urge her rapidly along the path of marital unhappiness, and finally almost lead her into the irreparable mistake. But a combination of circumstances enables her to see things more truly and the book ends with the promise of happiness for its chief characters.

Barring the fact that he has not succeeded in making his heroine's charm convincing—indeed, she often seems rather an unpleasant sort of person—he has painted a striking portrait and has done it with remarkable insight into feminine character. For its keynote is that age-old desire of woman, which harks back to the days of the cave and the forest, to be captured, taken by storm, carried off by force in the main event of her life, but modified by the attitude of the modern, independent woman, who refuses to be captured and resents the attempt unless she is entirely willing. The trouble with Katherine was that she did not know about this feminine instinct until after she married. Then she wanted to be the whole tribe of Sabine women in one and wanted her husband to dash ardently on to the conquest. But he, very busy and very much absorbed in his work, had no idea that quiet adoration does not spell conquest. And presently along came the inevitable third, with nothing to do but make skillful sieges and assaults and conquering forays upon feminine hearts. This character is, by itself, very true to life and very well done, but nevertheless, something of an artistic mistake. For the author makes Katherine a woman of considerable mental endowments, and when he represents Capt. Boyd as so poor a stick he lessens the convincingness of her temporary fascination. And in the denouement he drops to commonplace. For Katherine does not discover that her husband is the one she really loves until there is nothing else for her to do. If he wanted to keep his reader's respect for his high-spirited heroine he ought to have contrived to give her a larger margin of choice.

But the most striking and most interesting thing about Mr. Thurston's book is the manner in which it is written. It is never a fair thing to accuse an author of imitation of another simply because of resemblance in their work. It is much more likely that any such resemblance is due to similarity in native mental characteristics and habits of thought. Doubtless this is true in the present case. For Mr. Thurston's manner is very like the manner of George Meredith. His method in going at the story, his attitude toward his characters, his treatment of situations, the way in which he reveals and develops his people, his incidents, his ideas are all Meredithian. So also are many tricks of manner. He has the same way of rushing off at right angles from his subject, describing in detail something entirely different, and presently holding this up to your persuaded view as an illustrative symbol which clinches the thing he was talking about in the first place. And he has the same gleeful way of hiding his meaning in cryptic sentences which must be read wrong end to and bottom side up before you are sure of their meaning. But with Meredith, when you have tracked one of these elusive wildings to its hidden lair, there is no telling what you will find. It may be a unicorn or an ornithorhyncus or a snark. But it is sure to be something worth while. But with Thurston your stalking may end in the discovery of a cottontail rabbit or even of a domesticated cat. But notwithstanding the overwork of the cryptic sentence the book is strikingly rich in intellectual quality.

THE PRESIDENT OF YALE UNIVERSITY.

A New Volume of Addresses by Dr. Hadley—"The Development of Public Spirit."*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by EDWARD CARY.

THE friends of Dr. Hadley of Yale University and of higher education in the United States will welcome this modest little volume of rather brief addresses—sixteen of them filling only a couple of hundred pages. They are for the most part "talks to students" and "deal with questions which a man must answer when he makes choice of a career." They disclose, therefore, in a manner at once incidental and intimate, the spirit in which Dr. Hadley meets the thousands of young men who every year, in constantly changing phalanx, pass under the influence of the university of which he is the head and official guide. It is because of their disclosure of this spirit and because of the extreme elevation and devotion of the spirit disclosed that the volume will receive a considerable and a cordial welcome.

One note which characterizes the book is a certain youthfulness. It is more than the sympathy of an experienced man with young men in close relation to him; it is a distinct touch of the vigor, the hopefulness, and, here and there, slightly, a touch of the cheerful dogmatism of youth. Dr. Hadley has not lost the habit of the students who delight to call themselves "men" before they have ceased to be boys. Sober enough he is, in all conscience, and exacting with himself, but it would seem that the continuity of college life has not been broken and the President retains a vital portion of the sentiment he began to feel as a freshman. It may be that the sentiment was not uniform in the college in his day or even in his class; but it was felt probably by a lot of strong young fellows, of whom he was one, and by him it is still felt. "There are among our students," he says in the address on "The Development of Public Spirit," "two sharply distinguished groups: the men who go to college for what they can get out of it and the men who go to college for what they can put into it." Doubtless young Hadley, thanks to original and inherited tendencies, belonged to the latter group and he still belongs to it. The association may have made him a bit priggish in his early days; it has just the opposite effect now. If then he may have appeared to think a little above the heads of his fellows, now he has the air of being nearer to the boy than most men of his profession and his standing in that profession. It is no small advantage.

Here is an expressive passage in which Dr. Hadley indicates the working of the spirit of college life, and, incidentally, his own attitude toward it: "It is perhaps the greatest merit of the typical American college that it exercises a powerful influence against selfishness, whether physical or intellectual, and in favor of the development of a community life. It does not do homage to the man who is aiming to make a record for himself, whether in athletics or in studies. The majority of those who attend our universities are ready to enter into the spirit of the place, and they demand that their fellows shall do the same thing. Man is a political animal, and the boys entering into a group of this kind at an impressionable age become part of a close community whose public sentiment and code of ethics take powerful hold upon them. This code may be good or it may be bad. Usually, amid the imperfect materials of human character with which we have to work, it is a mixture of the two. And yet it has this result: That the boy, at a most impressionable age, forms a conception of a public conscience and a code of honor which carries him outside of himself; a code which leads him not by physical compulsion but by the influence of public sentiment, to do things in which considerations of personal convenience and personal advancement are purely secondary. The college is, in short, a living instance of the possibility of developing men out of the lower and into the higher ideals of life."

This passage is a satisfactory sample—to use a familiar phrase—of the tone of Dr. Hadley's discourses and papers in this volume. Throughout there is a marked, almost a curious, blending of the practical and the ideal; indeed, the key to the work is the effort to make practical the ideal. This is especially to be marked in certain passages relating to the problem of "trusts." "This has been called an age of trusts," says President Hadley. "The phrase is applicable in a sense much profounder than that in which it is generally used." "The growth of large industries and of large fortunes allows their managers to do good or evil without adequate restraint from law, because all law which is intended to stop the evil stops the good even more surely. This inadequacy of legal control, and the necessity which goes with it for unselfish action on the part of those in charge, are what constitute the very essence of a trust, private or public."

A like situation presents itself with reference to political expansion, if one may thus designate the mighty process of the last nine years, which has come so suddenly into our National experience that we really have no name for it an which all are agreed. We cannot govern our own Oriental possessions from Washington. We must trust our chosen agents to do their task honorably, faithfully, unselfishly. Can we hope for a public spirit strong enough and high enough to secure this result. President Hadley does not hesitate to give an affirmative answer. "We are indeed patriotically bound to give this answer" or own ourselves "disbelievers in the future of American democracy." "All the evidence goes to show that Americans have the necessary basis of moral character. Our standard of personal morality is on the whole probably higher than that of any other nation. * * * If we can subordinate our individual convenience to the needs of others there is no reason why we cannot do the same thing in our corporate and our public capacities, as soon as the necessity is brought home to us." Logically it may, of course, be replied to Dr. Hadley that "disbelief in the future of American democracy" is not in itself an error and that confidence in that future is not necessarily sound in the ratio that it is patriotic. But it remains true that the future of our democracy depends on an enlightened public spirit and that such work as President Hadley is doing, year in and year out, in countless and varied ways and always with remarkable steadfastness, makes for such public spirit.

JAPAN'S RELIGION.

The Rev. Dr. George William Knox's New Book on the Development of Buddhism and Shintoism.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

K. K. KAWAKAMI.

EVERY student of religion knows that there are in Japan three religions—Shintoism, Buddhism, and Confucianism. "Shinto," says Dr. Griffis, "furnishes theology, Confucianism anthropology, and Buddhism soteriology." Or, as Mr. Kishimoto, a Japanese scholar of theology, puts it, "Shinto furnishes the object, Confucianism offers the rules of life, while Buddhism supplies the way of salvation." Is it, then, proper that this book before us is entitled "The Development of Religion in Japan"? Rather should it not be entitled "The Religions of Japan"? According to Prof. Knox, however, religion is in our feelings, or, more precisely, in our emotions. Viewed objectively, "it is the response of man's nature to certain stimuli, and, subjectively, it is a state of emotion." Using the term religion in this sense, the author aims to present the continuity and the development of the religious feelings of the Japanese.

"In Europe," says the famous historian Seeley, "it was by alliance with the Church that the Germanic nationality first achieved durable political creation; thus did Clovis create and Pepin restore the Frankish Empire." So in Japan, too, Shinto was a potent factor in the unification of conquered tribes. From this, however, it must not be inferred that the definite formation of this creed dates back to the very beginning of the Mikado's empire. On the contrary, it was only after Japan had come under the influence of Chinese civilization that the nation made conscious efforts to know "the origin of deities and the establishment of men." Thus the Kojiki and the Nihongi, which set forth essential nature of Shinto, were compiled early in the eighth century in order that Japan shall, in accordance with Chinese precedents, have a cosmology, a national history, and an account of the fashion in which the imperial house obtained its power. The vital doctrine of Shinto is Mikadoism, deifying the ancestors of the Emperor, and regarding the place where they started their conquering career as a sacred place. Its whole content may be summed up in this phrase, "Fear the gods and obey the Emperor." True, the doctrine has undergone modifications; but its essential nature has remained unaltered. Simple as is the creed, it nevertheless played an important part in the development of the national character of the Japanese. To it, perhaps, are due the patriotism of the Japanese and their loyalty to the Emperor. And as such Shinto will survive "in the affections of the people, their trust in the national powers and destiny, and their confidence that there is a something more than their present strength and wisdom which directs and aids and on which they may rely."

Between Shinto and Buddhism the gulf is wide. Yet to the versatile Japanese the transition from the one to the other, or rather the harmonious combination of the two, was not difficult. After earlier ineffectual attempts, the Buddhist priests were finally welcomed in Japan in the middle of the sixth century, and by the second decade of the next century Buddhism became the established religion. With the newcomer Shinto was no match, either in dialectics or in miracles. Besides, the Buddhist priests declared the native deities to be nothing but the incarnations of Buddha, thus turning the Shinto gods into an instrumentality with which to convert the simple-hearted people to the Hindo religion. With the spread of Buddhism, together with its concomitant Chinese civilization, Japan entered a new life. "Old things passed away, and the leaders of the people turned eagerly to the treasures of the continental enlightenment." Here the assimilating power of the nation is strongly in evidence, for "the acceptance of Chinese civilization wholesale did not check the natural talents of the Japanese," as it did in the case of Korea. On the contrary, "it aroused, guided, developed, and perfected them." Transition from the primitive religion of Japan to Buddhism is illustrative of the change from natural to supernatural religion. Shinto is the religion of the world which now is: Buddhism is the religion of the supernatural, of the world behind the world. The latter is the worship of the absolute, knowing neither the soul nor God, neither heaven nor hell. How comes it that such a religion as this has claimed numberless multitudes as its votaries? It is because "Buddhism has met the needs of men by conforming to man's mind, and by a perfectly natural process reinstating what its founder denied. Buddhism in the beginning attempted to be entirely of nature, but karma and the inherited belief in transmigration rendered its denial of the soul and of God of no effect, since material was given for the construction of the world behind the world, the supernature."

In studying the development of Confucianism in Japan we again observe the peculiar genius of the Japanese in adapting alien teachings to their own environment. Confucianism bases all upon the family, regarding filial piety as the foremost virtue. In Japan, however, the patriarchal system of society had scarcely come into full being when this Chinese ethical system made its advent. Hence filial obedience has in Japan never held first place. The State itself could not accept the Chinese theory, for the Mikado ruled not by virtue, but by the sword, which has no justification in Confucianism. Nor could peace be the ideal, as the tradition was too opposed to such an ideal; and out of the singular combination of Confucianism Buddhism and Shinto was evolved bushido, the way of the warrior, which Prof. Nitobe, an eminent Japanese expositor of this ethical system, fitly terms the "soul of Japan." In the Confucian system woman is venerated only as mother, and is subject to man, who rules over her. "In Japan this too took on a martial tinge in the representative family. The woman merged herself in family and in clan. She did not desire to survive its misfortunes, nor could she think of an individual destiny." Thus the Chinese system did not represent the Japanese in such thoroughgoing fashion as on the continent.

"Yet Confucianism profoundly influenced Japan. It was the only system of ethics with the field to itself, and it was taught to all. The family was slowly reorganized according to its provisions, with the Chinese laws of consanguinity in place of the ancient confusion. Nevertheless to the end the spirit was different and the result was noticeably distinct."

The contents of this book were first given out to the public as a course of lectures delivered under the auspices of the American Committee for Lectures on the History of Religions. As the object of the committee is to institute popular courses in the history of religion the author has attempted to set forth for the general public the results of his scientific study of the religions of Japan. The book was not intended to add to our knowledge of the facts by collecting hitherto unknown specimens of the religious beliefs and the practices of the Japanese, but it shows in an admirable manner how the religious feelings of the nation have been excited, and how in the course of the ages they have changed and progressed.

THE new novel, "Running Water," by A. E. W. Mason, who wrote "The Four Feathers," is a book that combines the masterful attraction of the mountains and the dramatic interest of an unusual complication of men and women. And there is a charm in the writing of it that few books of the day have. "Take an old man's wisdom, monsieur! When it is all over and you go home, take care that there is a lighted lamp in the room and the room not empty. Have some one to share your memories when life is nothing but memories."

It is a rare pleasure to come across a book so warm, so tender, so personal in its indefinable effect of human sympathy. "Easily the best novel of the year," is the opinion of more than one critic.

—o—

NEITHER we nor any other publisher often issue such a book as "Partners of Providence." It is a joy to publish it—whether it ever becomes a "best seller" or not. Miss Agnes Repplier—and there is no saner critic—called "The Fugitive Blacksmith," the author's previous book, "a masterpiece," and she declares that "Partners of Providence" is "away and away ahead of 'The Fugitive Blacksmith.'" She goes on to say: "What I like best in a story is change of scene and action. I like it to move along and carry me along with it, which 'Partners of Providence' certainly does. I offer my sincere congratulations to Mr. Stewart."

Mr. Sylvester Baxter writes to tell us that the book "deserves a place beside 'Life on the Mississippi.' The Missouri River part of the book is a fresh field in literature. * * * The story is so perfectly natural—delightfully true to life, deliciously funny. Sam Daly ranks with the best boy characters in American literature, closely akin to Tom Sawyer, Huckleberry Finn, and Tom Bailey. The book deserves a big success."

If you have never read "The Fugitive Blacksmith" read it and enjoy a new sensation in literature. And don't let anything keep you from reading "Partners of Providence." Mr. Charles J. Taylor furnishes more than a hundred pictures, with initials and tail pieces—it will remind you of an old timer.

—o—

LAST April we issued a little book entitled "The Lady of the Decoration," made up of letters from a young American kindergarten teacher in Japan—just about the cleverest letters that ever came across the Pacific Ocean, and with a love story running through them that keeps one sitting up to finish. The sale ran along quietly—we printed three editions; then in November it took a start, and in the month of December we printed three more editions; since then we have printed "The Lady of the Decoration" four times, and in still larger editions. It is a book that seems to sell itself. One reads and tells a friend about it, or buys a half dozen copies to give away, and so it goes on in an endless chain. If you have not read "The Lady of the Decoration" you will thank us for calling it to your attention.

—o—

LOOK out for a new book by the author of "When Patty Went to College," coming the latter part of April—"Jerry Junior" is its name, and a more amusing and entertaining love story has not appeared in many a day. The characters are young Americans in Italy—He disguises himself as a donkey driver to be near Her.

WE are trying to get people interested in the idea of giving a package of books instead of flowers to friends about to go abroad. Books are enjoyed for the entire voyage and passed around—flowers are soon thrown away. Try it. Put in the package some of the best new novels, and "Seeing France with Uncle John," Anne Warner's latest.

"How to Study Pictures," by Charles H. Caffin.

"A Transplanted Nursery," how a mother spent her holiday in Brittany with her three small boys.

"English Cathedrals," by Mrs. Van Rensselaer, with Pennell's pictures.

And there are others. You will find a page advertisement about them in the current Century.

NOW READY

The Italian Lakes

By W. D. McCrackan, author of "The Fair Land Tyrol," etc. Illustrated with 40 reproductions of photographs taken by the author. Decorated cover, $2.00.

"Mr. W. D. McCrackan's 'Italian Lakes' fills one with respect for the author, so many are the familiar and unfamiliar beautiful places of which he writes. The solitude of the lakes will be disturbed by many another traveler after this book is published."—The New York Times.

A New Illustrated Edition of

The Chronicles of Martin Hewitt

By Arthur Morrison, author of "The Red Triangle," etc. With six pictures. $1.50.

The success of Mr. Morrison's recent books has led to a demand for the reissue of "The Chronicles of Martin Hewitt." It will be remembered that Martin Hewitt is the detective in "The Red Triangle," of whom The New York Tribune said: "He is a better detective than Sherlock Holmes."

READY SHORTLY

Haunters of the Silences

By Charles G. D. Roberts, author of "Red Fox," "The Watchers of the Trail," etc., etc. With 54 full-page illustrations, of which 4 are in full color, and many minor decorations by Charles Livingston Bull. $2.00.

In his new book of animal life Professor Roberts deals largely with those animals rarely met with in books, whose lives are spent "In the Silences."

Tenants of the Trees

By Clarence Hawkes, author of "Shaggycoat," etc. With 8 full-page illustrations, of which 4 are reproduced in color, cover design and many decorations by Louis Rhead. $1.50.

Deals more particularly with birds and the smaller woodland animals, though it contains much charming and vital description of still life. Mr. Hawkes's nature biographies are welcomed for their simplicity and truth, and there is a delightful individual note in all his work.

The Flying Cloud

By Morley Roberts, author of "The Idlers," "The Promotion of the Admiral," etc. Colored frontispiece and especially attractive sea pictures. $1.50.

This is Mr. Roberts's first long sea tale; and he has surpassed any of his previous work in his wonderfully realistic descriptions of the ocean in all its moods, and of the ship herself personified by him. His men and women, really live under his masterly delineation, and we feel as we read that it is the knowledge born of the author's experience that thrills and fascinates us.

The Lady of the Blue Motor

By Sidney Paternoster, author of "The Motor Pirate," etc. With cover design and frontispiece in colors by Frohn. $1.50.

A unique romance, with an audacious heroine and a manly and gallant fellow motorist. Love, mystery, and adventure, in up-to-date surroundings and modern situations, fill its pages.

DR. HOLMES IN PERSPECTIVE.

A Study of His Many-Sided Personality as He Revealed it in Various Forms of Literature—Mr. George B. Ives's New Bibliography.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by H. W. BOYNTON.

ONE of the ironies of fame is that its quality is so often unaffected by its magnitude. The world is ludicrously simple-minded in these matters. Even posterity is wont to classify its hoarded names according to habit rather than reason. Certainly, in this day of the world the theorist would be laughed at who asserted that great humor stands lowest among the categories of greatness. Yet our attitude toward a certain class of writers seems to be based on some such feeling. Are we not ready to yield a kind of respect to the buckram of Gibbon and the bombast of Johnson which Fielding and Goldsmith altogether fail to elicit? And yet who really thinks "The Rise and Fall" a greater book than "Tom Jones," or prefers "Rasselas" to "The Vicar of Wakefield"? We do not really esteem a long face; and yet we are hypocritically disposed to give a higher place at the public table to the man who has half-bored several generations than to the man who has thoroughly delighted and helped them. We have not even the excuse of utility to plead, for we do not actually believe that historians and moralists are more useful than poets and humorists. The humorist, for that matter, if he deserves the name, is a moralist who cannot endure to go dully about his business. And we reward him for his pains and skill by condescending to him, slapping his memory on the back in kindly patronage. "Poor Goldsmith"; "dear, quaint Charles Lamb"; "genial, naughty Harry Fielding."

Pleasant, whimsical companionable Autocrat; right little, tight little Boston Brahmin, snugly ensconced in "the sunny street that held the sifted few," easily tempted forth in your well-known character of laureate among poets of occasion, always gay, always friendly, always approachable—why should we respect the memory of such as you? Is it not enough that we cherish it affectionately? Perhaps it is, so far as the Autocrat himself is concerned. We can hardly do injustice to the dead, but can easily do injustice to ourselves with respect to the dead. What I wish to suggest is that our fond and humoring way of recalling such a personality as that of Dr. Holmes is rather likely to blind us to the real character of his achievement. I for one think of him not only as the finest humorist America has produced, but as the only American writer, with the possible exception of Hawthorne, who has achieved a foremost rank in his own field.

Eminence in that field has been achieved no more commonly than in any others. Boccaccios are as rare as Dantes, Horaces quite as uncommon as Virgils. The family of Sydney Smiths may count its thousands, the race of Depews its ten thousands, but humorists of the order to which Holmes belongs would hardly, after all our centuries, outnumber a score. Above that group would stand a few great names—Rabelais, Cervantes, Shakespeare—hardly more. These are the thrones of humor; but I do not think it folly to claim one of the principalities for the Autocrat. As a writer of humorous (I do not mean funny) prose he was eminent, as a writer of occasional verse well nigh supreme.

His audience is apparently holding its own quite as well as Hawthorne's, and rather better than Emerson's. It is not to be doubted that many persons without the esoteric circle of the collector will be glad to have the present bibliography of his writings. This is a very careful piece of work, and while absolute completeness is not claimed for its data, one may be confident that nothing of great importance is likely to have been omitted. Numerous letters, some fugitive bits of verse, doubtless remain to be captured by future gleaners in the path of the Autocrat, since it seems to be inevitable that the literary trivialities and even sins of the literary great should be sooner or later recovered. Some day perhaps a new functionary will be added to our official literary personnel. The literary longshoreman is already busy at his task of salvage, letting no scrap of flotsam escape him which can be traced to a famous source. What the man of letters needs more is an official who can be trusted, before death has made the matter hopeless, to sink with bricks, or burn with flame, the paper flotillas of boyhood, the misshapen derelicts of maturity. I should think the dreariest part of the bibliographer's task would be the duty of rescuing and assorting every authentic fragment of residuary matter, however flat or dull, or decayed. So we find the present conscientious workman, Mr. Ives, saying, "Unfortunately, for the purposes of the bibliographer, at least, there is no possibility of identifying Dr. Holmes's earliest original works"; though in the next breath he quotes Holmes's own assertion that "no vestige of talent is found in any one of them." We take it that apart from his rôle of bibliographer, Mr. Ives does not regret the fact that no one has yet succeeded in unearthing the college "Annual," bound in green silk, which is understood to have contained those earliest effusions. The present task has not been performed in the spirit of meticulous yet critically undiscriminating diligence of which the bibliographer is sometimes guilty. By means of a series of classifications, the bulk and detail of Dr. Holmes's work have been made accessible from several points of approach. There are six lists concerned with Holmes's own work and four relating to matter written about him. Under the given title, "A Bibliography of Oliver Wendell Holmes," edited by George B. Ives, (Houghton, Mifflin,) is subjoined information as to the circumstances under which the poem or book was written and first published, with other relative items. Such a work is of course essentially a guide book; but in one of the lists compiled here—the ninety-odd pages supplying an "Alphabetical List of Single Titles" to the poems—possesses interest of another sort. The eye, in glancing over the volume, is caught at once by certain fragments of verse which, though they have been printed, are not to be found in the collected poems. Some of them are worthy of preservation among the best examples of Dr. Holmes's poetic art.

The quality of that art is perhaps less appealing, certainly less obvious, to this generation than that of his prose. I confess that most of his formal poetry seems to me mediocre stuff, certain to be forgotten before long, if indeed it is not forgotten already. Pope and Goldsmith and Campbell were the companions and models of his boyhood, and as long as he lived a serious occasion was always a signal for the harnessing of the heroic couplet. His "metrical essay" on poetry, read fifteen years after his graduation before the Phi Beta Kappa Society, is as papal as Pope. Its rigidity of measure, its invariable balance of phrase, its trimness of thought even, are Twickenham born and bred.

> Though round the Muse the robe of song is thrown,
> Think not the poet lives in verse alone.
> Long ere the chisel of the sculptor taught
> The lifeless stone to mock the living thought;
> Long ere the painter bade the canvas glow
> With every line the forms of beauty know;
> Long ere the Iris of the Muses threw
> On every leaf its own celestial hue,
> In fable's dress the breath of genius poured,
> And warmed the shapes that later times adored.

One may admire Pope as much as you please without being able to repress a smile at the spectacle of a modern stalking abroad in his tie-wig and braces. Fifty years later, whenever the Doctor aspires to be impressive, we are likely to find him assuming the same attire and gait. Nor do his brief lyrics of a grave cast contain much poetry of a high order. It is difficult to see on what grounds "The

Dr. Holmes in Perspective.

Last Leaf" made itself so widely acceptable. I confess that to me it seems little better than sentimental doggerel. Indeed, there is a strong vein of album sentimentalism in much of the Autocrat's verse. He admired Wordsworth and Shelley, but Tom Moore had far more influence over his own work. "The Chambered Nautilus" is the one masterpiece of his serious lyrical mood; but what a masterpiece!

But the moment humor touches his verse it takes wing. In a broad sense all the best of his poetry is occasional, inspired by incident or circumstance. This business of succeeding as an occasional poet may seem a small thing to crow over. What if a man has the knack of turning out neat verses apropos of a college dinner or a birthday party, the finding of a glove, or the theft of a rose? It is easy enough for any clever person with an ear for a jingle to "dash off" fairly decent things of the sort—things which an admiring domestic audience may be counted on to assure him "really ought to be printed." As a matter of fact, an infinitely small amount of this kind of work is worth printing. It is as if in an acre of tinsel filigree there lay here and there, indistinguishable at first glance, a foot or two of pure golden fabric. So much is preserved, in the end, out of all that glittering speciousness, and it is well worth preserving.

Several new, or little known, instances of Dr. Holmes's happiness in this vein are, I have said, to be found in the pages of this Bibliography. Here, to select an example quotable on account of its brevity, is his tribute to a lady who sent him an apple stolen from a tree which grew before a house wherein he had lived many years:

We owe, alas, to woman's sin
The woes with which we grapple—
To think that all our plagues came in
For one poor stolen apple!
And still we love the darling thief
Whose rosy fingers stole it—
Her weakness brought the world to grief,
Her smiles alone console it!
—I take the "stolen" fruit you gave leave—
(Forgive me, Maid and Madam,)
It makes me dream that you are Eve,
And wish that I were Adam!

The very short list of letters by Holmes hitherto published gives Mr. Ives occasion to emphasize the fact already noted by Mr. Morse in his biography of Holmes—that the Autocrat was a reluctant letter writer. Though he is known to have written thousands of letters to strangers who addressed him on all sorts of subjects and asked him for all sorts of things, from literary criticism to the everlasting autograph, he did not write to his friends freely and for pleasure. There might seem to be a pretty direct connection between these facts; time laboriously frittered away in answering the demands of idle or inconsiderate strangers was necessarily lost to his friends. He may well have come to loathe the look of letter paper. But it is quite possible that he might never have done much letter writing under any circumstances. The letter writer, the diarist, and the discursive essayist, are all doing practically the same thing. What Walpole put into his letters, and Pepys into his diary, the Autocrat puts into his breakfast-table discourses. Would one not imagine Montaigne writing delightful letters? We only know that the few we have are stiff and uninteresting. Some men can only write letters to their own souls, some men only to a certain vague abstraction called the public. There is no doubt that Holmes could write delightful letters; there are a few charming examples on record, and there must be not a few more in existence. But it is quite clear that, for one reason or other, it was a means of expression which did not especially appeal to him. By all accounts, he talked better in a company than tête-à-tête. As for the flavor of that talk, all the world relishes it and will, one must suppose, continue to relish it. He had the quaint old foibles—Pope's habit of quibbling in verse, Lamb's complaint of punning in prose; they will seem less exceptionable, less quaint, as they cease to be the foibles of a contemporary. His virtues are of the sort which wrests immortality from what seems most trivial and passing. Are we tired of hearing about Montaigne's favorite dishes, or Pepys's opinion of mermaids, or Elia's twinges of conscience in the matter of tobacco? Then we may well be tired of our own great humorist's table-talk; till then we may allow ourselves a little pride in our possession, and even abstain from treating it as a plaything. H. W. B.

Andover, Mass., April, 1907.

THE EAST IN THE WEST.

IN the articles of novelty, audacity, and ingenuity of plot this story of Gerald Maxwell, entitled "The Miracle Worker." (John W. Luce & Co.) so far surpasses the average of the fiction which strains after these things that it needs only certain refinements of the story teller's art and condensation by a half—or, even a third—to be more than a mere thriller and time-killer. Even as it is it is remarkable. And if the reader manages to get past the first quarter post he may be counted on to stick till the finish.

It is a tale of a changeling—a very scientific and modern changeling—and the hero is a German doctor who is also an Afghan Prince. The combination is ingenious because it enables the author to endow this hero at once with the scientific mind and an exotic morality. Thus he may do evil that good may come of it, be unspeakably treacherous by Western standards and remain quite clearly not a villain—even retain the sympathy of his readers. Doctor Ahmed, who is in his own country Ahmed Khan, is the favorite pupil of an eminent German surgeon in the City of Leipsic. He is also the favorite of a nice red-haired girl, Nurse Elsa. And he is scientifically interested in a beautiful Russian dancer who is condemned to death for strangling a man. Likewise he is in attendance upon the morganatic wife of the Grand Duke of Thuringen, who has been frightfully burned while employed about a charity Christmas tree. This lady—she had been an actress at the Vienna Hof Theater—is so marvelously like the Russian dancer lying condemned in the Duke's prison fortress at Zwirnau that Dr. Ahmed is almost startled out of his Oriental-scientific composure at the sight of her. And between her physical hurts and horror at the idea of the loss of the beauty which she has prized—which has won her the Duke—she has little or no chance of recovery. Nurse Elsa, who has already given Dr. Ahmed her utmost confidence, waits at the Countess's bedside, and the Grand Duke, who holds the powers of life and death over the other, is at once madly in love with his wife and a most conscientious executive unwilling to pardon a murderess merely as a matter of favor.

There is the knot. How Mr. Maxwell unties it the reader may learn for himself. His method aims too laboriously at verisimilitude, and dwells too minutely sometimes upon clinical details, his account of the trial of the murderess certainly drags, he is obviously fascinated by the neat-handed ways of the trained nurse and wastes space in describing them—but his Elsa is quite real, so is his Grand Duke, and his Ahmed is plausible and imagination-holding. There are skillful minor touches once in a while, and suggestions of humor even. And the elements of the gruesome and horrible are played for all they are worth.

Aldrich in New York.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In the many journalistic notices of the career of Thomas Bailey Aldrich that have appeared since his recent death I have observed no mention of the fact that some part of his boyhood was passed in this city.

I find in one of the New York chapters of Prof. Wolfe's "Literary Haunts and Homes," (Lippincott Company,) the statement that during years of Aldrich's early life—apparently antedating the term of the "Bad Boy"hood of his book—he lived in North Moore Street, (New York,) three doors west from Hudson Street. Laurence Hutton was born and lived just around the corner at 94 Hudson Street, and in many of the scrapes and adventures of his own boyhood which Hutton narrated in his "A Boy I Once Knew," young Aldrich and he were joint participants. A little later Aldrich left the city, and it was not until years afterward, when both had become famous, they met again, and Hutton realized that the gifted poet and novelist Thomas Bailey Aldrich of whom he had heard so much was the "Tom Ald" he had played with in and about old St. John's Park.

Prof. Wolfe also states that at this time William Cullen Bryant lived at 92 Hudson Street, a few doors above the places of Aldrich's and Hutton's residences.

It is said that Aldrich's first published contribution to literature appeared in a New York Sunday journal styled The Atlas, which was published in Ann Street.

NEW BOOKS BY NATIVE POETS.

Mr. Cale Young Rice's Drama, "A Night In Avignon"—The Poems of Mildred McNeal-Sweeney.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

JESSIE B. RITTENHOUSE.

Author of "The Younger American Poets, etc.

IN the world's great passions that of Petrarch for Laura has never yielded its inviolate mystery. She has even been called a figment of his fancy, an incarnation of the ideal. It is certain, however, that Laura was not fashioned so literally of the stuff of dreams, and that it was no phantom of the imagination whom Petrarch saw in Santa Clara Church, when the year was at the Spring and his youth still quick with ardor. If other witness were lacking, have we not, indeed, the portrait which Simoni Martini painted for Petrarch, thereby winning for himself immortal celebration in the sonnets?

The first years of this passion, however, from tradition and the evidence of the Canzoniere, are scarcely less shadowy and impalpable than the period between Dante's first meeting with Beatrice and the charmed day, nine years later, when she passed by and saluted him, and Petrarch's favors from Laura would seem, for an indefinite period, not to have progressed beyond the grace of salutation.

It is a momentary revolt on the part of Petrarch from the apparently unresponsive and remote Monna Laura, and the consequence in which it involves him, which furnishes Mr. Cale Young Rice the motif of his new one-act drama, "A Night in Avignon." Mr. Rice has had the art to take a theme dependant entirely upon its spiritual elements and yet render it in a high degree dramatic.

The detail is slight: Petrarch, in conversation with his brother, Gherardo, a monk, inveighs against Laura and her constancy to her faithless husband, Ugo di Sade, and since his fruitless passion has become the mock of Avignon, declares that he will turn to lighter loves. Gherardo remonstrates, and Petrarch is passionately extolling the right to life and pleasure, when a knell from a church near by breaks in upon his words. The dramatic effectiveness of this incident is admirable. In itself it crystallizes the whole spiritual argument and foreshadows the fateful end, but its impressiveness is heightened by the words of Gherardo.

It is the knell of Matteo Banista,
Whose soul is gone for its loathsome days
Upon steep purgatory.
Your sin be on you * * * and it will.

The incident awes and arrests, but does not wholly convict, Petrarch, and while he still talks with Gherardo the courtyard below rings with the laughter of his friend Lello and two merry street girls of Avignon, who enter with jests and song. Gherardo goes, and a revelry ensues, broken at its height by a servant's announcement to Petrarch that he is desired, and to his inquiry declares it to be by Madonna Laura. Petrarch, half thinking it a jest, gives command that she be admitted, his friends retire to an inner room, and Laura herself enters.

Here, obviously, is a situation which, on the side of taste, can be saved only by the delicacy of its treatment. Mr. Rice succeeds, however, by the character of the dialogue in rendering it natural and convincing. The frank and pure simplicity of Laura; the gratitude for the constancy of Petrarch, which, she avers, impels her to come; the brief words in which she absolves herself from loyalty to her vows, all vindicate her motive and render more irretrievable the disaster in which Petrarch's folly has enmeshed him, a disaster soon revealed not only by his own confusion but by the voice of Sanchia calling from the inner room:

"Well, well, Messer Petrarca! How long will
You shut us in this dark—that is as black
As old Pope John the twenty-second's soul!
A pretty festa, this!"

In the face of this disclosure no explanation, no extenuation, is possible; it is a spiritual overthrow, rendered more complete by the parting words of Laura:

All trust shall be embalmed and laid away
I go with pity; seeing
My husband—is even as other men.

The drama closes with the distraught words of Petrarch to his friend:

Did Laura come to me out of the night—
Come as the first voice breaking beyond death
To one despairing?
And was I lifted up to Heaven's dawn?
And then
God! am I failing? . . . shall I ever?
. . . My friend, stay with me!
No, go . . . and take them with you—
Sanchia—all! . . .
I have slain the Spring forever!
The green of the whole fair world! . . .
Laura! Laura!

Though brief, and slight in detail, as a one-act play must necessarily be, it is nevertheless so vivid and the fusion is so complete between the dialogue and action that it embraces in small compass all the essentials of the drama. Mr. Rice has the true dramatic instinct in keeping the lines constantly interpretative of the action, no inessential detail being admitted. He brings to the drama, also, modern standards, modern conceptions; one finds in his work no Elizabethan echoes, either in phrasing or verse.

If poetic drama is to be revived successfully—the present sporadic revival is not yet permanently significant—it must adapt its technique and diction to modern conceptions of art. Nothing is so arid as the average closet drama of today, with its Elizabethan atmosphere and phraseology.

Mr. Rice has the right conception of what the time demands, and "A Night in Avignon" is conditioned, dramatically, to conform to it. Its dramatic properties are, perhaps, in excess of its poetic. One feels at times that in holding the dialogue in proper relation to the action something is sacrificed of charm and beauty of line. "A Night in Avignon" is, however, a drama whose essential beauty transcends that of line, its whole effect is spiritual. In the moment when Petrarch relinquishes his hope it becomes his; only to be lost more irrevocably by virtue of his dishonor. One could scarcely receive a stronger suggestion of fealty to the ideal in the hour of its least assurance.

"A Night in Avignon," following Mr. Rice's earlier volume of plays and lyrics, will increase his recognition as one of the most earnest and promising of the younger dramatic poets.

FOR some years the work of Mildred McNeal-Sweeney has been appearing at intervals in the magazines, having a note, as Miss Reese quaintly says, "to keep it unforgot," and one is glad to come upon Mrs. Sweeney's poems, brought into related grouping under the attractive title, "When Yesterday Was Young."

First books of verse are likely to be luminous chiefly by their foregleams, but in Mrs. Sweeney's work one need not make too arbitrary a distinction between promise and achievement. It is no small virtue to find, at the outset, the eager love of a devotee distinguishing one's attitude toward his art and to feel the fine sincerity which informs it. One will not read far in Mrs. Sweeney's poems without noting both their delicacy of vision and their reflective mood. Though now and again of bitter note, they have, in the main, a thoughtful quality, wistful, but never melancholy.

One feels occasionally, however, in Mrs. Sweeney's work that she withholds too much, seeking her inspiration from without, when the personal, the intimate, temperamental side is, after all, what we demand the poet shall reveal to us. Such a poem as "The Ride of the Walkyries," for example, strong and graphic as it is in phrasing, remains a tour de force; one cannot for a moment forget the deliberate technique. Mrs. Sweeney does not usually range so far afield for a subject, but her danger, artistically, is in being too serious a technician and thereby losing somewhat of the spontaneity, the "first fine, careless rapture," of her art.

Mrs. Sweeney's work has great metrical variety and intricacy of rhyme, and is full of charming fancies. It is seldom as lyrical, however, as if in simpler measures; but one has only to read the delighted Scotch song, "There's a Brook," to see what she can do in the singing lyric when she wishes. "Love and Her Flowers," "A Manhattan Spring," and the refrain to the Indian poem, "The Weaving of the Fan," have also the true lyric ring.

HENRY JAMES.

Miss Elisabeth Luther Cary Interprets "The American Scene."

IN approaching the pages on which Mr. James has recorded his impressions of America it is natural to experience a kind of wonder at the extraordinary concatenation of circumstances by which a vision at once so ripe and so fresh, so initiated and so sensitive, so broad and so intimate, was brought to bear upon us. The American individual has too often been the hero or heroine of his novels for us to consider seriously that Mr. James has lost interest in his countrymen through being removed from the land of his birth. He has, in fact, treated his Americans with such a tender and beneficent justice as to make us feel that we seemed to him a peculiarly rewarding type. But for many years he has seen us against the English or the Continental background and who can say what that complicated pattern may not have done for our simple lines, what the dimness of that old tapestry may not have done for our fresh and youthful coloring. He has seen us now, at all events, against our own background. He has seen not only the modern American, but modern America, and it is amazingly interesting to note how he has been affected by the experience.

For one and the first thing, he seems to have been arrested by the fact that he found us not ourselves at all, but so mixed up and mixed in with other races as to present a curiously ambiguous countenance to the traveler returning to the home of his childhood. In his home, on its threshold and in all the inner rooms through which he passed, he was met by the alien installed and as much at home as he. Nor did the alien wear for him the more or less familiar alien aspect. All foreigners on reaching our shores put aside certain characteristics by which at home they were especially signalized, and this sudden dropping of color moves the observer who has seen them in the rich bloom of their native beauty to reflect upon ultimate possibilities for them:

> What does become of the various positive properties on the part of certain of the installed tribes, the good manners, say, among them, as to which the process of shedding and the fact of eclipse come so promptly into play? It has taken long ages of history in the other world to produce them, and you ask yourself with independent curiosity if they may really be thus extinguished in an hour.
> And if they are not extinguished, into what pathless tracts of the native atmosphere do they virtually, do they provisionally, and so all undiscoverably, melt? Do they burrow underground, to await their day again? * * * or in what strange, secret places are they held in deposit and in trust? The "American" identity that has profited by their sacrifice has meanwhile acquired (in the happiest cases) all apparent confidence and consistency, but may not the doubt remain of whether the extinction of qualities ingrained for generations is to be taken for quite complete? Isn't it conceivable that, for something like a final efflorescence, the business of slow commingings and makings-over at last ended, they may rise again to the surface, affirming their vitality and value and playing their part? It would be for them, of course, in this event, to attest that they had been worth waiting so long for; but the speculation, at any rate, irresistibly forced upon us is a sign of the interest, in the American world, of what I have called the "ethnic" outlook.

It is these "positive properties" of the Americanized alien, those to which Mr. James refers as having promptly been dropped, and others to which he elsewhere refers which are retained quite stubbornly, and which appear to resist the process of amalgamation, that make our ethnic problem one that the most passionate analyst may give up without reproach. That Mr. James does give it up after turning it to the light on many sides and examining it with scrupulous solicitude, is proof not only of its complication but of his high intelligence as well.

With the social question in the more circumscribed classes the inquirer may move in a freer air and indulge himself in livelier generalizations. It is with the social question, of course, that Mr. James has dealt most largely on the pages of his remarkably truthful fiction, and the ramifications of international and intersocial relations have been explored by him with such thoroughness that we can very well imagine him astonished by nothing so much as by a social relation of translucent simplicity. Such a one presented itself in the whirling gayeties of New York life, despite the innumerable items that went toward its making. To detach from all the wise comments on that mad life the one that most has struck us with its wisdom is, no doubt, to bring it into a more or less misleading conspicuity; but when the word that fits a situation perfectly has once been found it is impossible not to announce it and return to it at the risk of spoiling the fit by stretching it unduly. When Mr. James characterizes the New York social movement of the day as analagous in its elements to a child's "party," it is difficult not to subscribe with a too riotous enjoyment to the phrase.

What, for example, could more brilliantly illuminate the scene of our kaleidoscopic Winter occupations than such a passage as this:

> It comes home to the restless analyst everywhere that this "childish" explanation is the one that meets the greatest number of the social appearances. To arrive—and with tolerable promptitude—at that generalization is to fling it, right and left, immensely convenient, and thereby quite to cling to it, the newspapers alone, for instance, doing so much to feed it, as with their huge, playfully brandished wooden spoon. We seem at moments to see the incoherence and volatility of childhood, its living but in the sense of its hour and in the immediacy of its want, its instinctive refusal to be brought to book, its boundless inability to contagion and boundless incapacity for attention, its ingenuous blankness to-day over the appetites and clamors of yesterday, its chronic state of besprinklement with the sawdust of its ripped-up dolls, which it scarce goes even through the form of shaking out of its hair—we seem at moments to see these things, I say, twinkle in the very air, as by reflection of the movement of a great, sunny, playroom floor. The immensity of the native accommodation, socially speaking, for the childish life, is not that exactly much of the key of the spectacle? —the safety of the vast flat expanse where every margin abounds and nothing too untoward need happen.

If there must needs be a kind of grimace of chagrin with the smile this characterization inspires, if we have to say to ourselves rather sturdily that to be a child is presumably to have a long life before you, and at any rate is to be innocent and vigorous and smooth of skin, which is not so bad in comparison with being sophisticated and feeble and more or less sere, as some of our European friends among the countries are, we are released from any necessity of braving it out when we arrive with Mr. James at Concord and again at Washington, and still again at Baltimore, at Cambridge, and at Philadelphia. Never have we been more conscious of our precious links with history than when standing with an American to whom our present is a maze of perplexities in the presence of our past, to which he pays tribute with a tenderness so deep as to cast our own familiar acceptance of our history into a shade which to our awakened consciousness seems one of shame. At Concord, not only Emerson and Thoreau and the Concord "school" solicited him with a depth and warmth that find a peculiarly moving expression in his fastidious prose stirred to eloquence by the strong emotion.

It would be impossible within reasonable limits to give much idea of the rich and fantastic humor that plays about the revisited towns of America, leaving behind it suggestions to awaken our serious thought. It is possible only to record how steadily for the attentive reader the Muse of History presides over the impressions received by the "restless analyst" returning to a country which in his youth was busy with wars. In Concord, at Mount Vernon, at Baltimore, at Richmond, wherever the past had vibrated to historic interests and passions, he yielded himself to the ghostly associations. Our tearing down and building up, our extravagance and haste and irresponsibility could hardly claim even from the embodiment of courtesy, extraordinary tolerance. But our intimate past, where it has been permitted peacefully to take on its mellow tone, entreats him persuadingly, and we should have difficulty in finding anywhere in literature portraits more delicately synthetic and vital than those of our National heroes that are sprinkled through the pages like illustrations to the text by a master of the rare art of illustration. What, for example, could be more in the golden style of portraiture than this of Franklin:

> He seemed to preside over it all while one lingered there, as if he had been seated at the mahogany, relentingly enough, near his glass of madeira, seemed to be "in" it even more freely than by the so interesting fact of his still having in Philadelphia, in New York, in Boston, through his daughter, so numerous a posterity. The sense of life, life the most positive, most human and most miscellaneous, expressed in his aged, crumpled, canny face, where the smile wittily profits, for plainness, by the comparative collapse of the mouth, represents a suppression which succeeding generations may well have loved to see they could go back out of. THE PROSE AND VERSE OF COWLEY.

Second Volume of Mr. A. R. Waller's New Edition of the Old Writer's Works, in the Cambridge English Classics Series.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

WILLIAM ASPENWALL BRADLEY.

MR. WALLER'S second volume, which completes his edition of Cowley's writings, other than Latin, in the Cambridge English Classics Series, adds little that is important or memorable in the work of that poet to what has already appeared, with the single exception of the prose essays. And yet these, in themselves, many will feel, as many have ever felt, constitute so much the more memorable and important of Cowley's work taken as a whole, that the volume which contains them, and little besides save uninteresting verse and mediocre dramas, takes precedence over that in which are brought together the "Miscellanies," "The Mistress," the "Pindarick Odes," and the fragment of the "Davideis." And, indeed, it should not be a matter for surprise if a poet in whose verse there is mingled so much of the prosaic should find his most felicitous and enduring medium of expression not in poetry at all, but in prose. For that Cowley, as a poet, is deficient in most of those qualities which we regard as preeminently poetical, has so long been the common verdict at once of criticism and of popular opinion that it seems scarcely likely to be reversed, at least in our generation, without some general revolution in the principles of poetic taste.

Cowley is the great example in English literature of mental power attempting to take over and carry on by sheer intellectual vigor and resourcefulness the work that is properly performed by the imagination acting under the stress of some artistic impulse or of emotion. He tried to write love-poetry, even sought to extend the scope of its expression by rendering its language philosophical, but, as he was without the fervor of the lover or the real instinct of the artist, he succeeded only in making it abstract and ingenious. He tried, like Ronsard in French, to naturalize the Ode in English, but his pompous and inflated rhetoric is far from striking that precise pitch of poetic eloquence or enthusiasm which is proper to this form, and which he was apparently unable to appreciate in his model, Pindar; while the heroic couplet, which he employed, in varying lengths, is neither supple nor sonorous enough to serve as a fitting metrical instrument. He essayed, too, the epic in the Davideis, but he was entirely without epic breadth or sweep; here, even more than elsewhere, he was impeded by his method of composition, whose most salient characteristic is the careful and curious elaboration of detail and the constant research of the conceit.

Much has been written of the conceit in Cowley's verse, but for the most part to little purpose. For critics have usually attributed to it a singularity in point of form and of content, which it does not in reality possess. Johnson's use of the word metaphysical in this connection has been, in a sense, misleading, since it seems to imply some unique intellectual process as involved in this species of expression. As a matter of fact, however, the process of mind involved in the conceit is precisely the same as that involved at bottom in all poetic imagery—in the metaphor, for example. In either case, a basis for comparison, an analogy, is discovered between two apparently dissimilar ideas or objects. The only difference lies in this, that while in the conceit the discovery on the part of the poet results only in some sense of dislocation or surprise on the part of the reader at a display of ingenuity, which disconcerts more than it pleases, in the true poetic metaphor, on the contrary, the discovery is accompanied by an immediate sense of recognition and of acceptance. And the reason for this difference in the effect produced is explained very simply on the ground that, whereas in the one there is involved nothing but an intellectual process, in the other there is a second factor involved, equally, that factor being nothing more or less than the imagination. It is the imagination, which, as it were, selects and sorts out the analogies that are continually presented to the mind through observation and reflection, and requires of those which it accepts not only, or even principally, that they be striking or ingenious, but that they be truthful—that is, that they conform to some inner principle of truth, which the soul, through art, imposes upon the outside world of sensation and experience.

The trouble with Cowley is, not that he fills his verse with conceits—any poet would be glad to have his fertility of invention in this respect—but that he lacks that instinct of imaginative selection which so often in another poet, like Donne or Marvell, will render his most notable extravagances in the highest degree expressive and poetic. Cowley gives us the impression of one who, without real instinct to fall back upon, has carefully analyzed, as he thinks, the form and matter of poetic imagery, and then, having arrived at some general rule or law, has proceeded to apply it with thoroughgoing deliberateness in much the same manner in which the modern scientific artist, or symbolist, first formulates his aesthetic theory of, let us say, the color value of vowels, and then writes his verse in rigorous conformity with it.

Cowley's conceits are thus, far from being mere stylistic defects, in reality symptoms indicative of a far-reaching flaw in his very constitution as a poet. But they are not the only symptoms. There are still other signs of a want of imaginative power in his work. Cowley is a didactic poet. He always has an idea to present, a proposition to prove, or a moral to draw. And while, presumably, a poet may have one or all of these things and yet remain a poet, Cowley is seldom able to assimilate the logic of his conception to the logic of the poetic form which he has chosen for its expression. The idea always seems more important than the poem, the latter serving principally as the vehicle for the former, and the measure of its success being rather the completeness with which it accomplishes its purely utilitarian end than any realization of an intrinsic beauty in the form itself. Hence there is but little regard for the ordinary amenities of verse in Cowley's poetry. His diction is careless, his versification rugged, his phrase rarely the true poetic phrase. He habitually overweights his line, packs it too closely with ideas and conceits which are meant to be significant, and to which he often gives additional emphasis by placing them in italics. He adheres so closely to the grammatical order of words, and to the syntactical order of clauses and sentences, that his line seldom has the natural allure of a free line in poetry. The stanza is as artificial as the line, being merely an arbitrary division, without any necessary organic unity of its own. It is scarcely necessary to add that the poem as a whole, being built up in this way, can rarely if ever be in itself a complete or vital work of art, or possess any form other than that which is imposed upon it from without by the idea which dominates it and makes it in reality nothing more or less than a rhymed and metrical dissertation differing only in these external respects from a bit of prose.

And yet, when all is said, the fact remains that Cowley possesses a positive force of attraction for those who can come to him prepared not to ask more than he can give of what we ordinarily expect of poetry. Of emotional thrill, of imaginative insight, of artistic sensitiveness there is very little in his verse. And yet there is, on the other hand, intellectual quality of no mean order; the constant and active play of a mind which, if feminine rather than masculine in its manifestations, is, nevertheless, quick, alert, penetrative; and a steady release of wit, in its true sense, as a perception of affinities and analogies, which on its purely verbal side leads to puns, and on the side of ideas and objects, to conceits. Taken not too seriously, these last have of themselves a distinct savor, as of salted almonds, shall we say, and one even gets to have a relish for them, as Lamb had for puns, in proportion as they are far-

The Prose and Verse of Cowley.

fetched and recondite, bearing witness to wide reading on the part of the poet and a fondness for penetrating into remote fields of human knowledge. For example, in "The Mistress," Cowley levies largely upon physical science for his means of depicting the shifting scenes of the lover's soul. This, at least, was something new in poetry. Cowley meant it to be so. He felt, with some truth, from the point of view of his own time and of the insipidity of current conventions of court poetry, that the old poetical language, with its Cupids and Cytherean, its arrows and doves and Adonises, was played out as a vehicle of passion and sentiment, and he sought to replace it with a new language that should bear a closer relation to the mind of man in its maturity to which mythology was palpable nonsense, but to which compasses and magnets and burning glasses were significant and suggestive. And, though Cowley does not attempt to explain the nature of love by any of these means, or to give passion a purely physical basis, but only to afford a more seizing and graphic account of its phenomena, there does, nevertheless, disengage itself from this constant association of the immaterial with the material, a curious sense of the prolongation of obscure physical forces into the realm of the spirit and of the dark, occult, and elusive nature of what, conventionally expressed, seems simple enough, and even obvious.

But for those who are able to get nothing of these things from Cowley's verse or to feel the fine mental fervor that occasionally fires his extravagant fancy, his bold striving for rhetorical effect at all costs, and fuses it into sudden intensity, as in the two Odes, the one to Hervey and the other to Crashaw, there still remain the Essays. There are less than a dozen of these, but in them Cowley is seen, if not at his best—for we persist in reserving this word for certain rare passages in his verse—at least at his best general level where his prose is at least frankly prose, and where, freed from the restraints of what was undeniably for him an artificial system of versification, it shows forth as it really is, a wholly delightful idiom of speech, graceful and natural. The very conceits and allusions with which it abounds, and which are here felt to be perfectly in place, spice it and give it a distinct flavor of wit and learning. It is full of a distinct personal quality in its somewhat rhetorical amplitude of phrase and its easy periodicity. It is neither formal nor stately, however, and though it has breeding and dignity, it has also a certain note of intimate familiarity which is not so far removed from the note of Montaigne. There is much of Montaigne, also, in the philosophic temper of this English moralist who discourses equably, though with a somewhat less complete detachment and with a more positive didactic intention, upon the world's vanities, the felicities of a simple and sequestered life, and, above all, to borrow an apt phrase from his contemporary Marvell, "the happy garden state." Cowley was a sincere believer in what he himself preached, and though the vicissitudes of his fortunes forced him to live much at courts and in the company of the great and rich and powerful, he seems not to have been shaken in his conviction that there was no lasting satisfaction in ambition, in crowds or in grandeur, and that peace and happiness were to be acquired only in solitude and self-content. All through his life he retained a longing for the simple rural scene, and this longing finds felicitous expression in some of the most memorable passages of his verse. In an early poem included in "The Mistress," he wrote:

Ah, yet, ere I descend to th' Grave
May I a small house and large Garden have!
And a few friends, and many Books, both true,
Both wise, and both delightful, too!

There was, however, to be no complete fulfillment of the modest ambition here expressed. Cowley had remained at court several years after the Restoration in the not ill-founded expectation of receiving some such acknowledgment of his services and loyalty during the dark period of the Rebellion and Commonwealth as would secure to him that degree of independence requisite for the realization of a tranquil retirement in the country. Having, however, at length despaired of any help from this quarter, he determined to delay no longer. Accordingly he left the court, and, with the modest means at his command, established himself in a rented house in a quiet Thamesside village. There it was that during the last two years of his life he wrote the Essays, one of which, addressed to his friend, John Evelyn, opens with a somewhat wistful reminiscence of the verses which we have just quoted:

I never had any other desire so strong and so like to covetousness as that one I have had always that I might be master at last of a small house and large garden, with the very moderate conveniences joined to them, and there dedicate the remainder of my life only to the culture of them and study of nature. * * * But several accidents of my ill fortune have disappointed me hitherto, and do still, of that liberty, for though I have taken the first and hardest step to it by abandoning all ambitions and hopes in this World, and by retiring from the noise of all business and almost company, yet I stick still in the inn of a hired House and Garden, among Weeds and Rubbish; and without that pleasantest work of Human Industry, the Improvement of something which we call (not very properly, but yet we call) Our Own.

Surely one could wish that Cowley might have possessed and enjoyed the garden of his heart, which seems, indeed, to have been the only mistress which he ever really desired. And yet one may, without at all questioning the sincerity of his attachment to an unattainable ideal, still feel that he derived at least as great a measure of real happiness from thus cherishing a sentimental regret as he would from the thing itself had he obtained it. At all events, literature, it seems, would scarcely have benefited by Cowley's horticultural occupations and interests. The source of his inspiration sprang rather from books than from nature; and the poet who could write of love with so little passion and so much pedantry as Cowley wrote in "The Mistress," would have been capable of turning the brightest-hued bed of flowers into a herbarium. The garden for Cowley was not the gateway through which in Marvell we get almost a glimpse of wild nature as she appears to the modern poet. It was, rather, a haven, a refuge, a hermit's cell where the philosopher might be alone, not with bird and flower, but with his own thought. Or, at the most, as we see in the long poem subjoined to the essay on "The Garden," it was but one theme the more to celebrate rhetorically, with a wealth of learned literary and mythological allusion, with ingenious ideas and quaint and unexpected conceits. For this purpose the abstract idea of the garden was as good as the thing itself, and Cowley scarcely needed to have seen Evelyn's parterres and pleasaunces to write the poem in question. The truth is that gardening had grown in Cowley's time to be the fashion, and that he, quite unconsciously, conformed to this fashion as to other fashions—fashions of verse, above all, which, though the brilliancy of his gifts permitted him to give there, in many instances, their definitive form, he seldom originated. It was, in the last analysis, this trait of facile conformity in Cowley that most completely accounts for his failure as a poet. He was not, like Milton, indifferent to the praise of this world or proof to the pressure of external circumstances. Born in an age of decadence and transition, he seemed to sum up in himself all the force of disintegration at work in that age. And yet, in spite of, or rather because of, this very fact he has much of that intellectual and phenomenal interest which Pater was wont to find in the representatives of transitional art in all ages.

Myra Kelly, Novelist.

Myra Kelly has written her first novel, and it will be published next week by D. Appleton & Co. The title is "The Isle of Dreams," and the story is of a young woman painter of great aspirations whose very first paintings sell with surprising readiness. Unknown to her their only purchaser is her lover. The romance grows complex but keeps cheerful. This is a departure from the vivid sketches that followed Miss Kelly's settlement work, and a healthy practice of versatility. And it may be hoped that as she excited a slight animadversion among her some-time co-workers in the slums by taking the lion's share of intelligent observation, she may elicit a similar feeling among novelists.

Mrs. Andrews's Stories.

Following the success of Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews's "The Perfect Tribute," Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons now promise for early publication another book of her stories, to include "The Bishop's Silence," "A Messenger," "The Aide-de-Camp," "The Little Revenge," and others, to make ten in all. The title will be "The Militants: Stories of Some Persons, Soldiers, and Other Fighters in the World."

"Full of strange events and ingenious situations."—Portland, Maine, Daily Press.

"'Hilma' is full of life and love and deeds of daring."—Brooklyn Citizen.

"A little kingdom tucked away in the hills of Southern Europe is the principal scene of this picturesque, dramatic tale of love and adventure."—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

"The story is a most exciting one and moves with breathless rapidity. It is a tale of war, of intrigue, and yet, running through it like a silver thread, is the pure love story of two loyal hearts."—The Milwaukee Sentinel.

"A novel thrilling with romance and adventure, and well calculated to bring refreshing entertainment to the reader who is thoroughly tired of the average commonplace novel of the day. It tells the story of vigorous life, of delightful romantic adventure."—Wisconsin State Journal.

HARPER'S BOOKS

The Mystics

By Katherine Cecil Thurston
Author of "The Masquerader"

A young man, whose fanatic uncle wills away the family estate to a secret brotherhood, discovers the secrets of the society and plans a daring coup to recover his possessions. He appears, himself, as the Mystic Prophet whose advent is daily awaited, and is accepted as the head of the secret order. In this precarious situation he falls in love, and at the peril of life and all boldly chooses to play the lover's part. Scene follows scene with the same presistent excitement and breathless fascination which marked The Masquerader.

The Giant's Strength

By Basil King

This is a big strong novel of to-day—the day of giant monopolies and vast fortunes—in which hearts and wills clash in situations new to fiction. In a striking way it presents some novel phases of the "rich man's side."

Katherine

By E. Temple Thurston

In the very morning of life Katherine finds that she has only two more years to live, and reckless of all, she grasps at the romance and love which have never come to her empty life. The story hangs on the brink of tragedy.

Tiberius Smith

By Hugh Pendexter

A story of rollicking humor, not fine spun, but healthful, delightful, funny. The Brooklyn Eagle says: "Never before did a book show so many curious and astonishing situations. The ingenuity is endless. And it is always funny!"

The Friendly Stars

By Martha Evans Martin

This book proves how readily, with the naked eye, an intelligent acquaintance with the stars can be acquired. It is a sympathetic story of the stars for all of us who know nothing of astronomy.

By the Light of the Soul
By Mary E. Wilkins Freeman

A delightful New England heroine—an unusual plot—scenes of village life—all make up a story of unflagging interest.

Christian Science
By Mark Twain

The keenest and most searching exposition of Christian Science that has yet been written.

JUVENILES

DAVE PORTER'S RETURN TO SCHOOL

By EDWARD STRATEMEYER.

Third volume of "Dave Porter Series." Illustrated. $1.25.

Dave Porter is a typical American schoolboy; a scholar, an athlete, and a good fellow. His return to the boarding school, "Oak Hall," is marked by interesting experiences which boy readers will be glad to learn about.

RAYMOND BENSON AT KRAMPTON

By CLARENCE B. BURLEIGH.

Second volume of "Raymond Benson Series." Illustrated by L. J. Bridgman. $1.50. Based on the author's own experience at New Hampton (N. H.) Academy.

We have had good books telling of the larger and more aristocratic preparatory schools, but never before one that so well told of life at a typical country academy of the sort that has furnished the inspiration for so many successful and distinguished men.

PRISCILLA OF THE DOLL SHOP

By NINA RHOADES.

Author of "The Little Girl Next Door," etc. Illustrated by Bertha G. Davidson. $1.00.

The mere statement that in this book Miss Rhoades has equalled the interest of the other books that have made her such a favorite will be sufficient.

FIFTY FLOWER FRIENDS WITH FAMILIAR FACES

By EDITH DUNHAM.

A Field Book for Boys and Girls. With twelve full-page colored plates, decorations and fifty text illustrations from nature by W. I. Beecroft. $1.50.

Children cannot too soon begin to know the wild flowers, and here they are told in a charming way where and when to look for each of fifty widely distributed common flowering plants; also, how they get their names, and how to know them from the remarkably accurate drawings of Mr. Beecroft, a skilled botanist and superior artist.

MORE LAWYERS WHO WRITE BOOKS.

Mr. Birdseye of "Revised Statutes" Fame—Talks with Bolton Hall, Francis Wellman and David Gray.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

OTIS NOTMAN

I SUPPOSE there is hardly a law office in the city that does not contain a copy of Birdseye's "Revised Statutes of the State of New York," so to the legal world, at least, Mr. Clarence F. Birdseye is a well-known man, a man who has rendered a great service to the legal profession. After my talk with Mr. Birdseye, I realized that though many persons work strenuously, the amount of work most of them do is, after all, small when compared with what he turns out. He is a corporation lawyer with a large practice. Therefore every day must be spent at the office and, when he is engaged upon a book all his evenings, Sundays and holidays must be devoted to that. For thirteen years he has not had a vacation and often for months at a time he works sixteen hours a day. Mr. Birdseye is about fifty-two years of age, and so far as I could find out his day is spent much after this fashion: Breakfast at 7:30, then work on whatever book he happens to be writing until 9:30, the whole day spent at the office, after-dinner work on the book again until late into the night, sometimes even to 3 in the morning. It took Mr. Birdseye eleven years to compile the first edition of his statutes, but that is not to be wondered at when we learn that the index alone covers 65,000 lines. He began that book in 1879 and then dropped it for seven years while he was preparing four other law books to enable him to check up the matter that was to go into the statutes, which had not been officially revised for sixty years. When he completed the statutes, the State Government appointed a commission which revised many of the laws, so that his work had to be done over again, in a second edition, published in 1896. Since that date the same causes have made it necessary for a third edition and two supplements. The card catalogue on paper of ordinary writing paper thickness for Mr. Birdseye's Chronological Table of the Statutes made a mass fourteen feet thick.

Mr. Birdseye does not find that legal writing in any way interferes with his legal profession. It is a change of work, and therefore a recreation, just as a game of golf would be, he says. He has written a number of law books. Among other things he has made a special study of the Code of Civil Procedure. He says that he could reduce its 3,500 sections to about 1,000 sections. To a lawyer that sounds like a fairy tale, too good to be true. Think of having those legal difficulties reduced by over two-thirds. It is to be hoped that some day he will be given the opportunity to do what his twenty-eight years of labor on our statutes must have fitted him for.

Just at present Mr. Birdseye's literary work is of a wholly different nature from anything he has attempted before. He has a volume coming out shortly entitled, "Individual Training in Our Colleges; a Plea for the Undergraduate." This is a subject to which for the past five years he has given very close study, and no New York lawyer needs to be told that that, with Mr Birdseye, means the most thorough and careful investigation. It came about in this way. Mr. Birdseye is an Amherst man, and, about five years ago, was asked to advise about some questions in which his college friends were interested. His investigations then and subsequently led him to feel that we look at college questions too much from the standpoint of the institution, and not enough from the student's point of view, and use too little business judgment in dealing with them. It was because of his interest in the undergraduates of the colleges, since he began to send his children to college, that Mr. Birdseye started to make a study of the college problem. He says about it:
